- (2) Order setting aside the dismissal of an appeal for default.<sup>13</sup>
- (3) Order of remand passed in an appeal from an order returning a plaint for presentation to the proper Court.<sup>14</sup>
- (4) Order refusing to record adjustment of suit.<sup>15</sup>

Is an order setting aside an ex parte decree one that affects the merits of the case? On this point there has been a conflict of opinion. It has been held by the High Courts of Allahabad,<sup>16</sup> Bombay,<sup>17</sup> Calcutta,<sup>18</sup> Lahore<sup>19</sup> and Rangoon<sup>20</sup> and the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Oudh<sup>21</sup> that such an order does not affect the decision of the case on the merits, but only ensures the re-hearing of the case on the merits. According to the High Court of Madras,<sup>22</sup> where a decree against two defendants ex parte was set aside in toto on an application by one of them only, the order can be attacked in an appeal from the final decree. The same High Court has also held<sup>23</sup> that when the result of setting aside the ex parte decree is not the hearing of the suit de novo on the merits but to burke such a decision altogether as where the ex parte final decree alone is set aside retaining the ex parte preliminary decree, the order is one which will affect the decision of the case, and can be attacked in an appeal from the decree. According to the High Court of Patna an order improperly refusing an adjournment and placing a defendant ex parte,<sup>24</sup> or an order setting aside an ex parte decree only against some of the defendants,<sup>25</sup> is one affecting the decision of the case within the meaning of the Section. The Chief Court of Oudh has held in the undermentioned case<sup>26</sup> that an order under O. 9 R. 9 restoring a suit to file can be challenged in the appeal against the decree under this Section.

There is also a conflict of opinion on the question whether an order setting aside an abatement under O. 22 R. 9 affects the decision on the merits. The decisions of the High Court of Lahore are conflicting.<sup>27</sup> According to the Allahabad High Court it affects the decision of the case if the order is made simultaneously with the decree in the suit,<sup>28</sup> but otherwise does not.<sup>29</sup> The Calcutta High Court has held that an order setting aside an abatement does not affect the decision of the case whether it was made simultaneously or not.<sup>30</sup> As to whether an order refusing to set aside an abatement affects the decision of the case on the merits, see foot-note (11) above.

The High Court of Rangoon has held that the words "affecting the decision of the case" cannot be read as meaning "affecting the decision of the case on the merits."<sup>31</sup>

It has been held by the High Courts of Bombay and Calcutta that an order under O. 22 R. 5 impleading a person as the legal representative of the deceased plaintiff does not affect the decision of the case and cannot be challenged in an appeal from the final decree.<sup>32</sup> The High Court of Madras took a contrary view in the undermentioned case,<sup>33</sup> but in a later case<sup>34</sup> has taken the same view as that of the Bombay High Court.

7. Compliance with order is no bar to questioning it in appeal. — A compliance with the directions contained in an interlocutory order does not deprive a party from objecting to it in an appeal against the final decree.<sup>1</sup> Nor does the dismissal of an appeal against an order which is non-appealable take away that right.<sup>2</sup>

8. Effect of not appealing against order of remand. — Orders of remand can be divided into two classes —

(1) appealable orders of remand, for which see Order 41 Rule 23 and Order 43 Rule 1 (u); and

(2) orders of remand which are not appealable, for which see O. 41 R. 25.

As regards the latter they stand on the same footing as any other order and can be challenged in the appeal from the final decree.<sup>1</sup> As regards the former, it was held under the old Code that the order could be challenged in an appeal from the final decree though no appeal had been preferred against the order itself.<sup>2</sup> Under the present Code this has been expressly negatived by the addition of sub-section (2), the policy of the Legislature being to treat an order of remand as a special case<sup>3</sup> and to give a finality to it.<sup>4</sup> Where, therefore, an appealable order of remand has not been appealed against, the propriety or correctness thereof<sup>5</sup> or of any of the incidental findings and decisions which are a material part of the basis of that order<sup>6</sup> cannot be challenged in an appeal from the final decree, or by the lower Court.<sup>7</sup> To prevent obvious injustice, however, the High Court can refuse to be bound by a remand order of a subordinate Court though neither party can question it by reason of their not having been appealed therefrom.<sup>8</sup>

It has been held by the High Court of Allahabad<sup>9</sup> that this Section deals with orders which the Court had jurisdiction to make, but in the making of which it had committed an error or irregularity and that, therefore, an order of remand passed without jurisdiction is outside sub-section (2) and open to question in an appeal from the final decree.

A failure to appeal from the order of remand does not affect the right of appeal from the final decision on remand.<sup>10</sup>

9. Privy Council appeals. — Sub-section (2) of this Section does not apply to appeals to the Privy Council.<sup>1</sup> But the principle of sub-section (1) will apply to appeals to the Privy Council also.<sup>2</sup>

10. Letters Patent appeals. — Clause 15 of the Letters Patent is not controlled by Section 105 of the Code and an order of remand, though not appealed against, can be challenged in a Letters Patent appeal against the final judgment.<sup>1</sup> For a full discussion, see Note 6 to Section 104.

11. Order granting review. — An order granting review is appealable under O. 43 R. 1 (w). But it is appealable only on the grounds mentioned in O. 47 R. 7. It follows that under this Section, read with O. 47 R. 7, the order can be challenged in an appeal from the final decree only on the grounds specified in O. 47 R. 7.<sup>1</sup>

Note 12

12. Revision of orders that can be challenged under the Section.—Where an interlocutory order can be challenged in an appeal from the final decree under this Section, the High Court will not, as a rule, interfere in revision<sup>1</sup> but in the exercise of its powers of superintendence the High Court may interfere in proper cases in order to avoid irreparable injury being caused.<sup>2</sup>

Section 106

106. [S. 589.] Where an appeal from any order is allowed it shall lie to the Court to which an appeal would lie from the decree in the suit in which such order was made, or where such order is made by a Court (not being a High Court) in the exercise of appellate jurisdiction, then to the High Court.

[1877, S. 589.]

1. Scope of the Section. — This Section provides that appeals from orders in cases in which they are appealable, shall lie to the Court to which an appeal would lie from the decree in the suit in which the order was made. The appellate jurisdiction of the District Judge, for instance, extends under the various Civil Courts Acts to decree in suits of the value of Rs. 5,000 and less. Hence, where the value of the subject-matter of the suit does not exceed Rs. 5,000, the appeal from the order lies to the District Judge and where the value of the suit exceeds Rs. 5,000 the appeal lies to the High Court, because the forum of appeal in regard to the decree passed in the suit is determinable in like manner.<sup>1</sup> But where the order appealed from is passed by a Court in exercise of appellate jurisdiction, the appeal lies to the High Court.<sup>2</sup>

The following cases decided under the previous Code in regard to appeals from orders in insolvency are only of academic interest as the chapter relating to insolvency has been removed from the Civil Procedure Code.<sup>3</sup>

Section 107 Notes 1-9

1. Legislative changes. — Sub-section (1) is new. Sub-section (2) corresponds to the first clause of the first part of Section 582 of the Code of 1882.

2. Scope and object of the Section. — Sub-section (1) specifies the powers conferred on an Appellate Court in order to enable it to dispose of a case completely and effectively. The powers themselves are mentioned in clauses (a) to (d) and the conditions and limitations subject to which such powers are to be exercised are prescribed in the First Schedule. See Notes 4 to 7 below.

Sub-section (2) provides that an Appellate Court shall have the same powers as those of the original Court under this Code and thereby comprehensively makes the relevant provisions of the Code applicable to appeals<sup>1</sup> except such as are specifically excluded.<sup>2</sup> A second Appellate Court has also the same powers and duties as those of the first Appellate Court.<sup>3</sup> See also Section 108.

The powers and duties contemplated in this Section are such as are provided for in the Civil Procedure Code, and not in any other enactment, such as the Limitation Act.<sup>4</sup>

3. "Prescribed." — See Section 2 clauses 16 and 18.

4. Power to determine case finally—Clause (a). — See O. 41 Rr. 4, 24 and 33.

5. Power to remand case — Clause (b). — See Order 41 Rule 23.

6. Power to frame issues and refer them for trial — Clause (c). — See Order 41 Rule 25.

7. Power to take additional evidence—Clause (d). — See O. 41 Rr. 27 and 28.

8. Power to summon witnesses. — See O. 41 Rr. 27 and 28.

9. Appellate Court to exercise the same powers and perform the same duties as original Court — Sub-section (2). — Sub-section (2) is based on the general principle that an Appellate Court has full powers as the original Court, and can do, while the appeal is pending, what the original Court could have done, while the suit was pending.<sup>1</sup> The provisions of the Code relating to incidental proceedings in original Courts are thus equally applicable to an Appellate Court.<sup>2</sup> But they do not apply to cases where the subject which is being dealt with by the Appellate Court is not the actual appeal itself.<sup>3</sup> The words "as nearly as may be" mean, so far as may be necessary, to carry into effect the requisite reliefs.<sup>4</sup> See also Notes 10 to 30 below.

10. "Powers," meaning of. — The word "powers" is not synonymous with "jurisdiction"<sup>1</sup> but comprehends the authority to carry out such of the functions as are indicated in Notes 12 to 30 below.

The decisions of the English and American Courts on the functions of an Appellate Court are to be followed with great caution in India as they are based on practice and procedure of a highly technical character.<sup>2</sup>

11. Inherent Powers. — See also Section 151.

Every Court trying civil causes has inherent jurisdiction to take cognizance of questions cutting at the root of the subject-matter in controversy,<sup>1</sup> and, in fact, such powers should be exercised in order to meet the ends of justice<sup>2</sup> although there may be no direct statutory provision therefor.<sup>3</sup> Thus, an Appellate Court has inherent powers to add, as a party respondent<sup>4</sup> or allow to figure as an appellant<sup>5</sup> a person who was not a party to the suit.

12. Competence of the Appellate Court to interfere with the discretion of the Court below. — Ordinarily a Court of appeal will not interfere with the exercise of discretion by the lower Court and substitute for it its own discretion.<sup>1</sup> Nor can the Appellate Court lay down any rules with a view to indicate the particular groove in which the discretion of the lower Court should run.<sup>2</sup>

Notes 12-13

An interference, however, will be justified in the following cases —

- (1) where the lower Court acts arbitrarily or perversely or capriciously<sup>3</sup> or in disregard of sound legal principles;<sup>4</sup>
- (2) where the discretion has been exercised where it ought not to have been exercised;<sup>5</sup>
- (3) where the Judge misdirects himself by wrongly assuming that there is no general rule to guide him in the exercise of his discretion;<sup>6</sup> or
- (4) where the discretion which is vested in the Judge and which ought in law he is to exercise has not been exercised at all.<sup>7</sup>

The mere possibility of the Appellate Court coming to a different conclusion on the same facts and evidence will not justify interference.<sup>8</sup> See also Note 14 below.

13. Powers of the Appellate Court in matters of evidence. — An Appellate Court will not interfere with the decision of the lower Court as to admissibility of evidence<sup>1</sup> except to prevent a clear miscarriage of justice.<sup>2</sup> But the question of the relevancy of evidence is always open to reconsideration in appeal.<sup>3</sup> See also Note 14 below.

14. Appreciation of evidence by the Appellate Court. — Where the appreciation of oral testimony is concerned, the Appellate Court has to reconcile two conflicting view-points, namely, on the one hand, the undoubted duty of the Court of appeal to review the recorded evidence and to draw its own inferences and conclusions, and, on the other hand, the unquestionable weight which must be attached to the opinion of the Judge of the primary Court who had the advantage of seeing the witnesses and noticing their look and manner.<sup>1</sup> On questions of fact, therefore, largely depending on oral testimony, the conclusions of the trial Judge will not be lightly interfered with.<sup>2</sup> But this rule should not be treated as having a too general application.<sup>3</sup> An Appellate Court is entitled to interfere with questions of fact in the following cases —

- (1) Where the conclusions of the trial Judge depend on inferences from facts and not on the credibility of oral evidence of such facts.<sup>4</sup>
- (2) Where an important fact of which the Appellate Court is in possession was not known to the trial Judge.<sup>5</sup>
- (3) Where the Judge giving the judgment did not examine the witnesses himself or, the bulk of the evidence was taken on commission.<sup>6</sup>
- (4) Where the finding of the lower Court is manifestly erroneous<sup>7</sup> or is based on no evidence<sup>8</sup> or the Judge has misdirected himself by applying wrong standards of probability or has committed an error in procedure<sup>9</sup> or there is a deliberate suppression of evidence by one party.<sup>10</sup>
- (5) Where the finding is opposed to experience of life and course of business.<sup>11</sup>
- (6) Where the case is one of conflicting evidence and the conduct of parties, effect of documents or the weight of probabilities, reduce the value of the opinion of the Judge.<sup>12</sup>

In appreciating evidence generally, discrepancies on material points should not be disregarded<sup>13</sup> but a too minute attention to immaterial discrepancies may lead to serious failure of justice.<sup>14</sup> It must also be remembered that a case is not necessarily false if some evidence in support of it is doubtful or untrue<sup>15</sup> and an Appellate Court reversing a finding of fact must do so on a consideration of the whole evidence on record.<sup>16</sup> As to the appreciation of evidence in cases where the genuineness or otherwise of a signature is in question, see the undermentioned cases.<sup>17</sup>

15. Failure to consider weight of evidence. — The failure of the Appellate Court to tackle the crucial question between the parties and consider the evidence in the case amounts to a substantial error of procedure.<sup>1</sup> See Section 101, Notes 23 and 24.

16. Power to add, transpose or substitute parties. — An Appellate Court has, under sub-section (2) of this Section, the same power to add,<sup>1</sup> transpose<sup>2</sup> and substitute parties under the provisions of the Code as a Court of original jurisdiction. See O. 1 R. 10, O. 22 Rr. 3, 4 and 11 and O. 41 Rr. 20 and 33 and Note 11 above and Section 151.

As to whether a person not party to the first appeal can be added in second appeal, see O. 1 R. 10, Note 11 and O. 41 R. 20. Under the old Code, it was doubted in the undermentioned case<sup>3</sup> whether Section 27 of that Code corresponding to the present O. 1 R. 10, sub-rule (1) applied to appeals. The doubt was expressed in view of the wording of the old Section 582. In view however of the changes made in the wording of the Section, it is submitted that there can be no doubt about it now.

17. Powers regarding court-fee. — An Appellate Court cannot deal with the appeal until the court-fee payable on the memorandum of appeal is paid.<sup>1</sup> Nor can it, in the generality of cases, award an amount in excess of that in respect of which the appeal is brought and court-fee paid.<sup>2</sup> As to the power of the Appellate Court to entertain an objection as to the valuation of the suit in the original Court, see Section 11 of the Suits Valuation Act of 1887.

18. Power to direct stay of proceedings, grant interim injunctions and pass interlocutory orders. — An Appellate Court having seisin of an appeal has power to pass all such interlocutory orders as are necessary in the interests of justice, such as an order granting an interim injunction,<sup>1</sup> appointing a temporary guardian in a pending appeal from an order of appointment under the Guardians and Wards Act,<sup>2</sup> or staying further proceedings or execution.<sup>3</sup>

See also Section 94, Order 41 Rules 5, 6 and 33 and Section 151.

19. Power to entertain application to set aside ex parte decree. — See Section 96 Note 12, Order 41 Rule 21.

20. Power to permit withdrawal of proceedings. — See Order 23 Rule 1.

21. Power to reject plaint or memorandum of appeal. — This Section makes the provisions relating to the rejection of plaints applicable to the memorandum of appeal.<sup>1</sup>

See also Note 12 above.

27. Power to refer to arbitration. — An Appellate Court can act under Paragraph 1 of Schedule II, Civil Procedure Code, by virtue of Section 107 (2) and refer the matter in dispute in appeal to arbitration.<sup>1</sup> See Schedule II, Paragraph 1.

28. Power to examine ameen. — An Appellate Court has power to send for the ameen and examine him on his report.<sup>1</sup>

29. Power to expunge remarks from the judgment. — An Appellate Court would also seem to have the power to expunge remarks in a judgment where the observations are seditious, blasphemous, irrelevantly scandalous or indecent.<sup>1</sup>

30. Duties of the Appellate Court. — Before an Appellate Court reverses the finding of the lower Court it should apply its mind to a consideration of the whole of the evidence in the case.<sup>1</sup> It should bring on the record all the necessary parties to the appeal.<sup>2</sup> It should apply correct principles of law<sup>3</sup> and give clear findings of fact<sup>4</sup> and directions free from doubt<sup>5</sup> and rectify the errors of the lower Court.<sup>6</sup> It is the duty of the Appellate Court to decide an appeal according to law, giving findings on all the issues decided by the lower Court against the appellant, however small the subject-matter of the appeal may be<sup>7</sup> unless the appellant waives his objection to the findings against him.<sup>8</sup>

1. Scope and applicability of the Section. — This Section corresponds to O. 42 R. 1 and O. 43 R. 2 and the combined effect of these provisions is to make the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code in regard to appeals from original decrees applicable mutatis mutandis to appeals from appellate decrees and to appeals from orders where such appeal is open. But the Section does not apply to Privy Council appeals.<sup>1</sup>

2. Appeals from appellate decrees. — By virtue of this Section and O. 42 R. 1, a Court of second appeal has indirectly all the powers of a Court of first appeal (so far as may be).<sup>1</sup> Thus, a Court of second appeal can remand a case for retrial<sup>2</sup> or for finding on an issue<sup>3</sup> or for other sufficient reason to prevent the ends of justice from being defeated.<sup>4</sup> Similarly, with regard to the power to entertain a ground of objection not taken in the grounds of appeal (O. 41 R. 2),<sup>5</sup> the addition of respondents (O. 41 R. 20),<sup>6</sup>

the dismissal of an appeal for default (O. 41 R. 17),<sup>7</sup> the documents to accompany a memorandum of appeal (O. 41 R. 1),<sup>8</sup> the power to entertain objections as to misjoinder of causes of action,<sup>9</sup> the power to entertain cross-objections,<sup>10</sup> and the bringing on the record of legal representatives of deceased parties,<sup>11</sup> a Court of second appeal has been held to be governed by rules similar to those applicable to a Court of first appeal.

But the expression "so far as may be" makes it clear that the provisions relating to first appeals cannot be applied to second appeals indiscriminately, but can be applied only subject to the principles governing the entertainment and disposal of second appeals.<sup>12</sup> Thus, O. 41 R. 24 cannot be applied so as to enable the High Court in second appeal to enter into questions of fact.<sup>13</sup> On the same principle it has been held that a Court of second appeal cannot grant a review on the ground of a discovery of fresh evidence,<sup>14</sup> nor remand a case for a fresh hearing in order that a record of rights published after the decision of the first Court might be taken into consideration.<sup>15</sup> Similarly, a party will not be ordinarily allowed to raise a new plea for the first time in second appeal.<sup>16</sup> But an objection as to absence of cause of action can be entertained though raised for the first time in second appeal.<sup>17</sup> Order 41 R. 32, read with the present Section and O. 42 R. 1, does not enable the High Court in second appeal to

The Allahabad High Court has held in AIR 1914 All 298 and 16 All 5 that such a person cannot be added as a party to the second appeal while the contrary view was taken in 19 Mad 151 and AIR 1920 Low Bur 64.]

vary an order for execution in such a way as to grant the decree-holder a relief for which he had not asked.<sup>18</sup>

Section 108
Notes 2-3

3. Appeals from orders. — Where an order recording a compromise under O. 23 R. 3, infra is made with the consent of the parties, the order is not appealable by virtue of Section 96 sub-section 3, read with this Section, even though O. 43 R. 1, infra provides for an appeal against the order.<sup>1</sup>

As the provisions relating to appeals from original decrees apply to appeals from orders only "so far as may be," it is not open to the Appellate Court in an appeal from an order of remand under O. 41 R. 23 to enter into the merits of the whole case as in a regular appeal.<sup>2</sup> An Appellate Court has inherent jurisdiction to grant an interim injunction pending an appeal from an order refusing temporary injunction.<sup>3</sup>

It is only where a different procedure is not provided by the Code or by any special or local law, that the procedure in an appeal from an order is to be governed by the provisions relating to appeals from original decrees. Thus, the procedure as to appeals from original decrees is not applicable to appeals from orders under the Provincial Insolvency Act, as a special procedure is provided for such matters.<sup>4</sup> Likewise, this Section is not applicable to proceedings under the Madras Estates Land Act (I of 1908).<sup>5</sup>

1. Legislative changes. —

The following amendments have been introduced in the Section :—

1. In clauses (a) and (b) the words "decree or final order" have been substituted for the words "final decree."

2. In clause (c) the words "or order" have been added after the word "decree."

It was enacted by Section 594 of the old Code that the word "decree" for the purposes of this Section meant "judgment or order" so that a "final decree" meant a "final decree or final order." It was also held in cases arising under the corresponding Section of the old Code (i. e., Section 595) that "final decree" included also decisions in the nature of preliminary decrees.<sup>1</sup>

2. Scope and object of the Section. — The right of appeal to the Privy Council is governed by Sections 109, 110, 111 and 112 and O. 45 of the Code, and Clause 39 of the Letters Patent granted to the High Courts of Bombay, Calcutta and Madras and the corresponding Clauses of the Letters Patents granted to the other High Courts.<sup>1</sup>

Sections 109 and 110 enact provisions very similar to the said Clause of the Letters Patent but are wider in their applicability than the Letters Patent. Whereas the Letters Patent only applies to Chartered High Courts, Sections 109 and 110 apply to all "High Courts" as defined by Section 3 (24) of the General Clauses Act<sup>2</sup> and to other Courts of final appellate jurisdiction. Clause 39 of the Letters Patent must also be read subject to Sections 109 and 110 of the Code.<sup>3</sup>

Sections 109 to 112 and Clause 39 of the Letters Patent should be read together, and, when so read, the law enacted therein can be briefly summarized as follows :—

(1) An appeal will lie to the Privy Council from any decree or order when, either the case is certified to be a fit one for such appeal [see Section 109 clause (c)] or when special leave is given by the King in Council. (Section 112.)

Note 2

- (2) In the absence of a certificate or special leave as aforesaid, an appeal will lie to the Privy Council from any decree or final order of the High Court in the exercise of original civil jurisdiction, provided the value of the subject-matter involved in the case is Rs. 10,000 or upwards. [Section 109 clause (b) and Section 110].
- (3) An appeal will lie from any decree or final order passed on appeal by a High Court or by any other Court of final appellate jurisdiction, but not affirming the decree or order of the Court below, provided the value of the subject-matter involved is Rs. 10,000 or upwards. [Section 109 clause (a) and Section 110.]
- (4) An appeal will lie from any decree or final order passed on appeal by a High Court or by any other Court of final appellate jurisdiction, but affirming the decision of the Court below, provided, firstly, the value of the subject is as aforesaid, and secondly the appeal involves a substantial question of law. [Section 109 and Section 110.]
- (5) Notwithstanding the above, and, save on a special leave granted by the King in Council, no appeal will lie from any decree from which, under Section 102, no second appeal lies, or from any decree or order of a single Judge of the High Court or of a Division Court, where the Judges constituting it are equally divided in opinion. [Section 111.]

Sections 109 and 110 do not, however, apply in the following cases:—

- (1) Where the decision is not that of a "Court." — The jurisdiction exercised by the Political Agent in Kathiawar and by the Governor of Bombay in Council in the administration of justice is political and not that of a Court.<sup>4</sup> Similarly, an order of the Governor-General in Council deposing the Ruler of a Native State or appointing a Commission to inquire into a charge against him is an act of State and not the act of a "Court."<sup>5</sup>
- (2) Where the decision of the Court is an extra-judicial one.<sup>6</sup> — An order of the High Court in its administrative and disciplinary jurisdiction, as for instance, against legal practitioners, is an extra-judicial act and not within Section 109.<sup>7</sup>
- (3) Where in the nature of the decision itself, no appeal can lie. — No appeal will lie to the Privy Council from a consent decree passed by the High Court<sup>8</sup> or

(Note. — It was held in A I R 1923 P C 148 that the judgment of the High Court on a reference under the Income-Tax Act was advisory and not appealable. It is now provided by Section 66-A (2) of the Income-Tax Act inserted by Act XXIV of 1926, that an appeal will lie to the Privy Council in such cases. Cf. AIR 1923 P C 138 wherein appeal was allowed but the question was not raised—Section 66-A does not, however, provide for an appeal from an order of High Court under Sec. 66 (3) refusing to require the Commissioner to state a case — Such an appeal, therefore, does not lie : AIR 1930 Rang 274 (276).)

where the suit itself has become non-existent.<sup>9</sup>

(4) Where a right of appeal is barred by the other provisions of the Code or by any special law. — An order granting a review is not appealable except in the cases mentioned in O. 47 R. 7. Section 109 must be read subject to O. 47 R. 7, as is indicated by the words "subject to . . . the provisions hereinafter contained" in the Section, and therefore no appeal will lie from an order by the High Court on review if it is not appealable under O. 47 R. 7.<sup>10</sup> Again, Section 109 will not affect any special law or any special jurisdiction conferred by any other law for the time being in force.<sup>11</sup> Where therefore a special law like the Rangoon City Municipal Act enacts that a decree of the High Court under Section 91 (3) of that Act is final in the sense that it is conclusive, a further appeal of any kind is barred and Section 109 will become inapplicable.<sup>12</sup>

In Bhaya Mohammad Azim Khan v. Raja Saadat Ali Khan,<sup>13</sup> a question arose as to whether an appeal to the Privy Council was competent from a decree of a single Judge of the Oudh Chief Court in the exercise of original civil jurisdiction notwithstanding that under the Oudh Courts Act such decree was appealable to a Bench of the Chief Court itself. Their Lordships of the Privy Council held that in such a case the appeal to the Privy Council should be rejected in exercise of the prerogative of His Majesty under Section 112. Their Lordships also expressed the view that Sections 109 and 110 did not prohibit an appeal being brought within the Chief Court in like manner as a Letters Patent Appeal was brought within a Chartered High Court and that the two Sections taken together seemed rather to be intended to provide an appeal to His Majesty on the footing that no further appeal in India was provided.

It was held in the undermentioned cases<sup>14</sup> that an award by a Court under the Land Acquisition Act was not open to an appeal to the Privy Council on the ground that only a special and limited right of appeal was given by that Act from the award of the Court to the High Court. These cases are no longer law since the amendment of Section 54 of that Act by Act XIX of 1921, by which an appeal to the Privy Council is expressly provided for.<sup>15</sup>

The right of appeal to the Privy Council is not confined to the King's subject.<sup>16</sup>

Subject to the limitations set forth above, an appeal will lie to the Privy Council from any judicial order or decree of a Court, by any person injured or aggrieved by it. Where the petitioner prima facie satisfies the conditions prescribed by this Section, leave to appeal must be granted. The chance of success of the appellant in the proposed appeal is immaterial.<sup>17</sup> See also the undermentioned cases.<sup>18</sup>

3. "Decree," meaning of. — See Section 2 (2) ante. The word "decree" will include a preliminary decree<sup>1</sup> and a decree passed under Schedule II Paragraph 21 of the Code<sup>2</sup> but not an act of State.<sup>3</sup>

Notes 3-4

Under Section 594 of the old Code "decree" included "judgment or order." An order passed by the High Court under the Companies Act, 1882, was held to be a "decree" for the purposes of Section 595. Such an order will still be within Section 109 of this Code but as an "order."<sup>4</sup>

4. "Final order," meaning of. — The words "final order" in the Section are used in contra-distinction to the words "interlocutory order."<sup>1</sup> The Privy Council does not, as a rule, interfere with interlocutory orders<sup>2</sup> and it is only on this ground that the Section enacts that it is only a final order that is appealable to the Privy Council as of right and that other orders are so appealable only if the case is certified to be fit for appeal.<sup>3</sup>

In Rahimbhoy v. Turner, (1890) I. L. R. 15 Bombay 155, and Saiyid Munzhar Hussain v. Bodha Bibi, (1894) I. L. R. 17 Allahabad 112, both cases under the old Code, their Lordships of the Privy Council held that an order was a "final" one if it decided the cardinal point in the case notwithstanding that there might be subordinate enquiries to make. This was followed in the High Courts in India in a number of cases.<sup>4</sup>

Note 4

But in Ramchand Manjimal v. Goverdhandas, A. I. R. 1920 Privy Council 86, a case arising under the present Code, in which the question was whether an order refusing stay of a suit under Section 19 of the Arbitration Act was final or not, Viscount Cave observed :

"The question as to what is a final order was considered by the Court of Appeal in Salaman v. Warner, (1891) 1 Q. B. 734, and that decision was followed in the same Court in the case of Bosson v. Altrincham Urban District Council, (1903) 1 K. B. 547. The effect of those and other judgments is that an order is final if it finally disposes of the rights of the parties. The orders now under appeal do not finally dispose of those rights but leave them to be determined in the ordinary way."

In Abdul Rahman v. D. K. Cassim and Sons,<sup>5</sup> after stating that the decisions in I. L. R. 15 Bombay 155 and I. L. R. 17 Allahabad 112 were not applicable to cases arising under the present Section, Sir George Lowndes observed :

"The finality must be a finality in relation to the suit. If after the order the suit is still a live suit in which the rights of the parties have still to be determined no appeal lies against it under Section 109 (a) of the Code . . . . . In their Lordships' opinion it is impossible to distinguish the present case from that upon which Lord Cave pronounced. The effect of the order from which it is here sought to appeal was not to dispose of finally the rights of the parties. It no doubt decided an important and even a vital issue in the case but it left the suit alive and provided for its trial in the ordinary way . . . . . For these reasons their Lordships think that the appeal is incompetent."

The decision of a cardinal point may in many cases finally dispose of the rights of the parties in the suit; but the test to find out whether an order is a final one is not whether the point decided thereby is a cardinal one, but whether the rights of the parties in the suit are finally disposed of by it.<sup>6</sup>

The mere fact that an order decides one issue on the rights of the parties does not make it a final order if there are other issues left to be decided later on.<sup>7</sup> Where an order merely gives a direction as to procedure or where it does not dispose of the suit or proceeding but reserves some further question for further determination, it is only an interlocutory and not a final order.<sup>8</sup> undermentioned decision,<sup>10</sup> the Rangoon High Court has, however, proceeded on the view that a "final order" within the meaning of this Section need not completely dispose of the suit and an appellate order of remand may also under certain circumstances be a "final order." In that case, the Appellate Court held that a certain award was not binding on the persons against whom it had been set up and remanded the case to the lower Court for the investigation of their claims. It was held that this was a "final order" as it finally disposed of the rights of such persons to prosecute their claims in the suit. Reliance was placed upon the decisions of the Privy Council in Rahimbhoy v. Turner and Saiyid Munzhar Hussain v. Bodha Bibi above referred to. The decisions of the Privy Council in Ramchand Manjimal v. Goverdhandas and Abdul Rahman v. D. K. Cassim and Sons were distinguished on the ground that in neither case did the order dispose of any question affecting the substantive rights or liabilities of the parties in any way. An order granting leave to sue in forma pauperis<sup>11</sup> or refusing leave to appeal in forma pauperis<sup>12</sup> is a mere matter of procedure not finally deciding any rights of the parties and is not a "final order." An order extending the time for presenting an appeal under Section 5 of the Limitation Act<sup>13</sup> or an order granting a review for re-hearing an appeal<sup>14</sup> or an order rejecting an application made by the legal representatives of a deceased party to be brought on record<sup>15</sup> or an order refusing to interfere in revision with an order of the lower Court allowing a co-decreeholder to join in executing the decree<sup>16</sup> or an order directing the lower Court to proceed with the execution and determine the questions in dispute in execution,<sup>17</sup> are all interlocutory orders and are not appealable under this Section.

See also the undermentioned cases,<sup>18</sup>

It has been held by the High Court of Allahabad<sup>19</sup> that where an application to set aside an ex parte decree is rejected and on appeal the order is set aside, the appellate order is a "final order" within this Section inasmuch as such order finally terminates the proceeding for setting aside the ex parte decree.

It has been seen in Note 6 to Section 2 (2) that a decision that a suit is not barred by res judicata or by limitation or in other like manner, is not a decision on any substantive rights of the parties. Such an order will, however, be a "final order" where the question as to bar by res judicata or limitation disposes of the rights of the parties in the suit.<sup>20</sup>

5. "Order passed on appeal." — An order cannot be deemed to have been passed "on appeal" unless it is an order by a superior Court reversing, modifying or confirming the order of an inferior Court.<sup>1</sup> Two essentials must exist : — (a) the relationship of superior and inferior Court and (b) the power in the superior Court to review, affirm or modify, the decision of the inferior Court.<sup>2</sup> Again, the words "final order passed on appeal" are not equivalent to "final order passed in the exercise of final appellate jurisdiction" but imply orders disposing of an appeal at the hearing.<sup>3</sup>

Illustrations

1. A applies to the High Court to review its decision in an appeal before it. The High Court passes an order refusing the application for review. The order is not one "passed on appeal."<sup>4</sup> The reason is that the High Court is not asked to deal with any order of an inferior Court.<sup>5</sup> Nor does it dispose of the appeal at the hearing. Similarly an order of the High Court refusing stay of execution of his appellate decree<sup>6</sup> or an order refusing an application for restoration of an appeal dismissed for default<sup>7</sup> or an order rejecting an application for amendment of an appellate decree<sup>8</sup> is not an order passed on appeal.

2. A applies to the High Court to pass a final decree according to the preliminary decree of the Privy Council. The order of the High Court on such application is not one "passed on appeal."<sup>9</sup>

3. A applies to the High Court for leave to appeal in forma pauperis and the same is dismissed. He subsequently files another application to be allowed to deposit the court-fees and that is also dismissed. The last order of dismissal is not an order "passed on appeal."<sup>10</sup> The reason is that the appeal not having been admitted at all, the order in question could not be one passed "on appeal."

On the same principle as that mentioned in the last illustration, it has been held that an order rejecting an appeal for failure to furnish security for costs under O. 41 R. 10 is not an order passed 'on appeal'.<sup>11</sup> There is however a conflict of opinion whether an order refusing to admit an appeal after the period of limitation under Section 5 of the Limitation Act is an order passed 'on appeal'. According to the Bombay High Court and the Chief Court of Oudh such an order is not one passed on appeal.<sup>12</sup> The Calcutta<sup>13</sup> and Patna<sup>14</sup> High Courts and the Punjab Chief Court<sup>15</sup> have held that the order is one passed on appeal within the meaning of clause (a) of Section 109.

There is also a conflict of decisions as to whether an order passed by the High Court in the exercise of its powers of revision under Section 115 of the Code or in the exercise of its powers of superintendence under Section 15 of the High Courts Act, 1861, (24 & 25 Vict., C. 104) is one passed on appeal. The High Courts of Allahabad and Patna and the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Peshawar have held that it is not,<sup>16</sup> while the Calcutta High Court has held that it is.<sup>17</sup>

5a. Whether appeal to Privy Council lies against appellate order from which no second appeal lies. — The provisions of the Code which preclude a further appeal from various appellate orders deal with internal appeals in British India and do not affect the maintainability of an appeal to the Privy Council against such orders.<sup>1</sup> Thus, an order passed by the High Court in appeal from one of the appealable orders specified in Section 104 sub-section 1 ante will be open to appeal to the Privy Council (notwithstanding the provisions of Section 104 sub-section 2) if the requirements of this Section and Section 110 as to valuation etc. are satisfied.<sup>3</sup>

The decision of the High Court on appeal from an order of the District Court which under Section 4, sub-section 2 of the Provincial Insolvency Act is 'final' subject to the right of appeal to the High Court under Section 75 of the Act, can be appealed against to the Privy Council. The reason is that when a right of appeal is given to one of the ordinary Courts of the country, the procedure, orders and decrees of that Court will be governed by the ordinary rules of the Civil Procedure Code.<sup>3</sup>

6. "Any other Court of final appellate jurisdiction." — Suppose a "final order" is passed by a District Court on appeal and that no second appeal lies from such order. Is the order to be treated as an order of a Court of final appellate jurisdiction within the meaning of clause (a)? In Official Receiver, Madura v. Kuppaswami Chettiar<sup>1</sup> it was held by the Madras High Court that an order passed by the District Court on appeal under Section 75 of the Provincial Insolvency Act was not the order of a Court of final appellate jurisdiction within the meaning of clause (a) of this Section. The decision proceeds on the ground that the expression "appellate jurisdiction" includes revisional jurisdiction and inasmuch as the order of the District Court was subject to the revisional jurisdiction of the High Court, the District Court cannot be considered to be a Court of final appellate jurisdiction. In Saadatmand Khan v. Phul Kuar,<sup>2</sup> however, a direct appeal from an appellate order of a District Court was entertained and disposed of by the Privy Council. But this decision was distinguished by the Madras High Court in the above case on the ground that the mere fact that an appeal is heard by the Privy Council does not amount to a ruling that such appeal is maintainable.

8. Limitation.—Under Article 179, Schedule I of the Limitation Act, 1908, the time prescribed for an application for leave to appeal to the Privy Council is ninety days from the date of the decree or order appealed from.<sup>1</sup> There was a conflict of opinion as to whether Sections 5 and 12 of the Limitation Act could be applied to such applications.<sup>2</sup> Under the Limitation Act of 1908, those Sections have been made applicable to such applications<sup>3</sup> and the decisions under the Act of 1877 to the contrary are no longer law.<sup>4</sup>

A single application cannot be filed for leave to appeal in two separate suits and appeals; where one such application is filed it is not open to the party to file another application out of time, though he can amend the former by confining the prayer for a certificate to one of the cases.<sup>5</sup>

9. Prerogative of the Crown. — See Section 112, infra.

10. Certificate of fitness — Clause (c). — This Section must be read with Order 45 Rule 3.

There are two kinds of certificates —

- (1) In a case coming under clauses (a) and (b) of Section 109, a certificate that, as regards amount or value and nature, the case fulfils the requirements of Section 110.
- (2) In a case coming under clause (c), that it is otherwise a fit one for appeal to His Majesty in Council.

It is not necessary that an order, in order to be appealable under this clause, should be a final one. Any decree or order, whether coming under clauses (a) and (b) or not, is appealable under this clause if it is certified to be a fit one for appeal.<sup>1</sup> Thus, even an interlocutory order may be appealable if there are questions fit for a certificate,<sup>2</sup> though Courts will hesitate to grant leave if it should involve needless expense at that stage.<sup>3</sup>

This clause is intended to meet special cases such as those in which the point in dispute is not measurable in money though it may be of great public or private importance<sup>4</sup> and the grant of a certificate is in the discretion of the Court; but it must cases<sup>10</sup> or whether there are any other exceptional circumstances justifying the grant of a certificate,<sup>11</sup> as for example where there are several suits in which the same question is involved and the grant of a certificate in some only of those cases would result in contradictory decrees.<sup>12</sup> Even the fact that a point is of general importance is not enough to support the grant of a certificate under this clause if it has been settled by the Privy Council,<sup>13</sup> or by a Full Bench of the High Court concerned.<sup>14</sup> Another consideration which the Court must keep in view in granting the certificate is that litigation is not made oppressively expensive and the elucidation of the real issues in the case by a trial of the suit is not unduly postponed or delayed.<sup>15</sup>

A question will be one of public importance if it affects not merely the parties to the case<sup>16</sup> but also large bodies of persons or communities.<sup>17</sup> The mere existence of a substantial question of law is not sufficient.<sup>18</sup> A question of private importance means private importance to both parties to the litigation and not merely to one of them.<sup>19</sup> But the fact that the question raised affects third parties is no ground of fitness.<sup>20</sup>

The following questions have been held to be of public importance : —

- (2) Construction of an agreement between two rival temples affecting rights of great importance.<sup>22</sup>
- (3) The nature of the constitution of a community and whether the constitution amounts to a trust.<sup>23</sup>
- (4) The nature of the resolution to be passed by a company for the alteration of its memorandum of association.<sup>24</sup>
- (5) Whether certain kinds of permanent tenure in Malabar carry with them the incident of forfeiture on alienation.<sup>25</sup>
- (6) The extent of control acquired by one who has built a Parsi Fire Temple.<sup>26</sup>
- (7) The status and legal position of one who has collected the debts of a deceased person in relation to the beneficiaries and others by virtue of his holding a succession certificate.<sup>27</sup>
- (8) The necessity or otherwise for registration of documents containing an option of re-purchase.<sup>28</sup>
- (9) The burden of proof of family necessity for a debt contracted by the manager of joint Hindu family and the liability of the mortgagor's share alone for such debts.<sup>29</sup>
- (10) Whether the fraud of the mortgagor alone in registration proceedings would affect the mortgagee's right of suit.<sup>30</sup>
- (11) Whether a suit by a Hindu widow is one of a representative character.<sup>31</sup>
- (12) The form of ritual in an important public temple.<sup>32</sup>
- (13) The question of jurisdiction of a Civil Court.<sup>33</sup>
- (14) The question whether in a suit for partition, the value for purposes of appeal to the Privy Council is the value of the entire property or the value of the share claimed.<sup>34</sup>

The questions raised in the following cases were held not sufficient to justify the grant of a certificate under this clause : —

- (1) Where it would not be right to call upon a party whose financial interest in the matter is too small to incur the risk of the costs of the appeal.<sup>35</sup>
- (2) Where the question is merely a matter of practice, such as an order for the inspection of documents.<sup>36</sup>
- (3) Where the question is merely the sufficiency of evidence in proof of a particular fact<sup>37</sup> or where the case merely rests upon evidence and there are concurrent findings of fact.<sup>38</sup>
- (4) Whether the non-joinder of certain parties is fatal to the suit or appeal.<sup>39</sup>

Section 110

1. Legislative changes. — Under orders in Council dated 10th April 1838 the only condition enforced with respect to Privy Council appeals was that the value of the subject-matter in dispute in appeal to His Majesty shall amount to Rs. 10,000 at least. The additional conditions about the same value being necessary in the Court of first instance and the existence of a substantial question of law were first introduced by Section 5 of the Privy Council Appeals Act (VI of 1874).<sup>1</sup> This was later incorporated in Section 596 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1877, corresponding to the present Section.

The words "final order" have been newly added after the word "decree." See Notes to Section 109.

2. Scope and construction of the Section. — It is the object of the Section not to encourage appeals to the Privy Council where the value of the subject-matter in dispute is small<sup>1</sup> or where, though the value is high, the dispute is only about a question of fact about which there has been concurrent findings in the Courts below.<sup>2</sup> The Section accordingly enacts that every appeal under Section 109, clauses (a) and (b) must be of the appealable value and, in cases of decrees of affirmance, must also involve a substantial question of law.<sup>3</sup> No leave to appeal can be granted under this Section when the subject-matter in dispute is incapable of valuation in terms of money.<sup>4</sup> The subject-matter in dispute must be of the appealable value both in the Court of first instance and on appeal to His Majesty in Council. The word "and" in the first paragraph of the Section cannot be construed as "or."<sup>5</sup>

The terms of this Section must be strictly construed.<sup>6</sup> No real mischief can arise from doing so, inasmuch as cases not coming within this Section, if worthy of being tried by a higher tribunal, can always be dealt with under Section 109, clause (c) and under Section 112.<sup>7</sup>

Though the first paragraph speaks of the "subject-matter of the suit" it must be deemed to include proceedings other than suits which may result in an appealable decree or order.<sup>9</sup>

As to consolidation of suits, see Order 45 Rule 4.

3. Valuation of the subject-matter in the Court of first instance.—In order that an appeal may lie to the Privy Council under the first paragraph of this Section, it is one of the essential conditions that the value of the subject-matter of the suit in the Court of first instance should be Rs. 10,000 or upwards. Such value must be the value at the date of the suit and not a future increase or decrease thereof.<sup>1</sup> Thus, it will not include interest or mesne profits or costs after the date of the suit.<sup>2</sup> Nor will it include a subsequent accretion to the property in suit by alluvion, increase in value, etc.<sup>3</sup>

The value, again, must be the market value as ascertained by ordinary commercial standards, of the property or of the detriment to the applicant's interests if the right claimed is negatived.<sup>4</sup>

of the properties, i. e., Rs. 5,000.<sup>8</sup> But the decree may involve a question relating to the whole property. The second paragraph of the Section will apply in such a case.<sup>7</sup>

(3) A sues B for foreclosure of a mortgage for Rs. 7,000 executed by B to A. The amount due on the date of suit is Rs. 14,000 but the market value of the property is Rs. 9,000. The value of the subject-matter of the suit will be Rs. 9,000. The reason is that, in a foreclosure suit, the value cannot exceed the value of the property to be foreclosed. But if the amount sued for is less than the value of the property, only the value of the subject-matter will be the amount sued for.<sup>8</sup>

(4) A sues B, the mortgagor and C, the puisne mortgagee, of certain items on a mortgage for Rs. 12,000. C contends that the items mortgaged to him, the market value of which is Rs. 2,000, are not liable to satisfy A's mortgage. The value of the subject-matter of the dispute between A and C is the whole mortgage amount of Rs. 12,000. The reason is that the entire liability under the mortgage can be enforced against any of the items mortgaged and that if C wants to redeem the mortgage he will have to pay the whole amount due under the mortgage and not merely the amount proportionate to the value of the items mortgaged to him.<sup>9</sup> Where, however, C does not claim through B but does so adversely to him under a paramount title, he is not concerned with the mortgage at all and is not bound, like a subsequent mortgagee, to redeem it. The value of the dispute in such a case can be only the value of the property claimed by C under the paramount title.<sup>10</sup>

(5) A sues B for enforcement of an annuity of Rs. 125 per annum charged upon certain properties. The value of the subject-matter of the suit is the value of the annuity and not the value of the property upon which the annuity is charged. The value of an annuity of Rs. 125 per annum can by no reasonable method of valuation be worth Rs. 10,000.<sup>11</sup> But a claim for a rent of Rs. 275 per month<sup>12</sup> or a rent of Rs. 1,500 per year<sup>13</sup> will be worth more than Rs. 10,000. See also the undermentioned case.<sup>14</sup>

(6) A is a maintenance holder with a right to reside in a certain house on condition that if she is asked to vacate it she should be paid Rs. 400 a month in lieu of the right of residence. A is sued in ejectment. The subject-matter of the suit is the value of the house and not the difference between the value of the house and Rs. 400 a month which she will get.<sup>15</sup>

It follows from what has been said above that the applicant for leave to appeal is not bound by the fiscal standards under the Court-Fees and Suits Valuation Acts, by which he has valued the suit, but is entitled to show the actual or market value of the claim made.<sup>16</sup> Where, however, he has once valued the claim at its market value,<sup>17</sup> or where he, having a discretion to value his claim in alternative ways, chooses to value his claim in a particular way,<sup>18</sup> he cannot thereafter be allowed to show that such value did not represent the real value. It has, however, been held in the under-mentioned case<sup>19</sup> that the plaintiff is not absolutely precluded even in such a case from contending that his valuation in the plaint is wrong but that the Court will treat his admission as a strong piece of evidence against him. Where a plaintiff sued for accounts and valued the suit at Rs. 101 for the purpose of court-fees and filed the same in the Court of the Second Class Subordinate Judge whose pecuniary jurisdiction extended only up to Rs. 5,000, it was held by the Bombay High Court<sup>20</sup> that the value of the subject-matter could not be shown to be anything beyond Rs. 5,000. The basis of the decision was that the plaintiff having deliberately instituted the suit in the Court of the Second Class Subordinate Judge must be taken to have conceded the subject-matter to be a maximum of Rs. 5,000 and could not be allowed to turn round and say that it was over Rs. 10,000.<sup>21</sup>

A valuation of the property by the plaintiff which is admitted or is not objected to by the defendant, cannot be questioned by him (defendant) subsequently for the purpose of securing admission of an appeal to the Privy Council.<sup>22</sup> In considering the value of the subject-matter of the suit, the value of the several reliefs should all be taken into consideration<sup>23</sup> but not ancillary reliefs.<sup>24</sup> Thus, in a suit for declaration and damages the value of the subject-matter is the value of the damages claimed as well as of the declaration asked for.<sup>25</sup> In a suit for specific performance of a contract to sell and for possession, the relief of possession is only ancillary to the specific performance and its value cannot therefore be taken into consideration.<sup>26</sup>

4. Date of valuation. — The valuation of the subject-matter of the suit in the Court of first instance is the value at the date of suit.<sup>1</sup> As to the valuation of the subject-matter in dispute on appeal, see Note 8, infra.

5. Mesne profits, interest and costs after date of suit. — Till recently, there was divergence of opinion among the High Courts in India on the following questions:—

- (1) Whether in a suit for money the "value of the subject-matter in the Court of first instance" included interest from the date of suit to the date of the ('87) AIR 1937 Cal 292 (296). (A mere mistake in stating the value in the plaint where the other side has not been prejudiced by having to resort to a different forum does not amount to estoppel in law so as to prevent the plaintiff from showing that the real value of the subject matter of the suit in the Court of first instance was Rs. 10,000 or upwards.)] decree or any later date<sup>1</sup> and

- (2) whether in a suit for land or other immovable property and mesne profits, the "value of the subject-matter in the Court of first instance" included future mesne profits after the date of suit; and if so up to what period?<sup>2</sup>

The conflict has now been set at rest by the decision of the Privy Council in Mangamma v. Mahalakshamma<sup>3</sup> in which it has been held that neither interest nor mesne profits after the date of suit could be included for the purpose of ascertaining the value of the subject-matter of the suit under Section 110. Their Lordships entirely approved of the reasoning and decision of the Madras High Court in Subramania Aiyar v. Sellammal.<sup>4</sup> See also the undermentioned cases.<sup>5</sup>

The costs of the suit are in no sense the subject-matter of the suit and ought not to be added to the subject-matter in order to bring the valuation up to the appealable amount.<sup>6</sup>

Section 110
Notes 6-9

"In the first place, the sum of money actually at stake may not represent the true value. The proceeding may in many cases, such as a suit for an instalment of rent or under a contract, raise the entire question of the contract relations between the parties and that the question may, settled one way or the other, affect a much greater value, and its determination may govern rights and liabilities of a value beyond the limit."

See also Note 11 below.

7. Value as laid in the plaint. — See Note 3 above.

8. Valuation of subject-matter in dispute on appeal. — Another essential condition for the applicability of the first paragraph of the Section is that the amount or value of the subject-matter in dispute on appeal to His Majesty in Council must also be Rs. 10,000 or upwards. Such amount or value is the amount or value of the subject-matter in dispute at the date of the decree of the High Court under appeal.<sup>1</sup> It follows that interest or mesne profits subsequent to that decree cannot be added for the purpose of reaching the specified amount of Rs. 10,000.<sup>2</sup>

The meaning of the words "in dispute" is illustrated by the following example :

Illustration

A sues B on breach of contract for recovery of Rs. 8,000 paid as advance, and of Rs. 7,000 as damages. The Court of first instance passes a decree in A's favour for the recovery of Rs. 5,000 paid as advance and of Rs. 2,000 as damages. On appeal to the High Court, the decree for Rs. 5,000 is upheld but the claim for damages is dismissed. Is A entitled to apply for a certificate for leave to appeal to the Privy Council? No; the decree for Rs. 5,000 having been upheld it can no longer be in dispute in A's appeal. The subject-matter of the dispute can therefore be only the disallowed claim for damages, namely, for Rs. 7,000, which is less than the appealable value.<sup>3</sup>

9. Several appeals from a single decree. — Where, in a suit to set aside different alienations by a Hindu widow, the plaintiff-reversioner obtained a decree in his favour in the first Court and on separate appeals being filed by the alienees, the High Court drew up one decree under Rule 93 of the Madras Civil Rules of Practice (old R. 105) and the plaintiff applied for leave to appeal to His Majesty in Council, it was held that the application must be considered as if a separate decree had been passed in each appeal, and that, accordingly, leave could be granted only in those

(36) AIR 1936 PC 212 (218) (PC). (In this appeal from Ontario, the Privy Council interpreted the words "where the matter in controversy in any case exceeds the sum or value of 4000 dollars", which occurred in S. 1 of the Privy Council Appeals Act of Ontario and held that the true test was what was at stake on the appeal.)

appeals in which the subject-matter was over Rs. 10,000 in value.<sup>1</sup>

Section 110
Notes 9-11

10. Effect of abandonment of portion of claim after grant of certificate.—Where a would-be appellant, bona fide intending to appeal in respect of the whole amount decreed against him, obtains leave to appeal to His Majesty in Council, the appeal will not be rendered incompetent by the mere fact that at the hearing of the appeal he withdraws a part of his appeal thereby reducing the amount in dispute to one below the appealable value.<sup>1</sup>

11. "Or the decree or final order must involve, directly or indirectly, some claim or question to or respecting property of the like amount or value."—Where the value of the subject-matter of the suit in the Court of first instance or the value of the subject-matter in dispute on appeal to the Privy Council is less than Rs. 10,000, no certificate can be granted, as has been seen already under the first paragraph of the Section. But a certificate can be granted even in such a case under the second paragraph of the Section if the decree or final order involves some claim or question to or respecting property of the amount or value of Rs. 10,000 or upwards.<sup>1</sup>

The words "some claim or question to or respecting property" must be interpreted to mean "some claim or question to, or respecting, property additional to, or other than the actual subject-matter in dispute in the appeal."<sup>2</sup> The leading case on the point is Subramania Aiyar v. Sellammal, A. I. R. 1916 Madras 985.

The distinction in the applicability of the first and second paragraphs of the Section has been thus expressed by Srinivasa Aiyangar, J., in the said case:

"We have to take both the clauses together so as to give a meaning to both. In my judgment the first clause applies to cases where the decree awards a particular sum, or property of a particular value, or refuses that relief, i. e., to cases where the object matter in dispute is of a particular value. In fact the words "objects in dispute," are used in the provisions relating to appeals from Guernsey. If the operation of the decision is confined to the particular object matter, clause 2 does not apply, and unless the case satisfies the conditions of clause 1, there is no right of appeal. If the decision, beyond awarding relief in respect of the particular object-matter of the suit affects rights in other properties clause 2 would apply."

The decision in Subramania Aiyar v. Sellammal<sup>3</sup> has been recently approved by their Lordships of the Privy Council in Mangamma v. Mahalakshammamma.<sup>4</sup> The contrary view which was apparently taken by Maclean, C. J., in Dalglish v. Damodar,<sup>5</sup> was an obiter dictum and, in view of the Madras decision above referred to as approved by the Privy Council, is no longer law.

A claim or question to or respecting other property cannot be said to be involved under this paragraph unless the decree or order has the effect of estopping, either by the rule of res judicata or otherwise, a party from claiming rights in, or agitating the same question in respect of such other property.<sup>6</sup> It follows that the claim or question must be one arising between the parties to the suit in which the appeal is taken.<sup>7</sup> It also follows that a claim or question which is not essential or relevant for the decision<sup>8</sup> or is too remote<sup>9</sup> or is in gremio futuri and may never materialise<sup>10</sup> cannot be said to be involved directly or indirectly in the decree or order.

Section 110 Note 11

(2) A sues B for the recovery of a property valued at less than Rs. 10,000 basing his claim under a deed of gift. Other claimants who are donees of other properties under the same deed of gift are also made parties to the suit and the total value of the subject-matter of the deed far exceeds Rs. 10,000. A's suit is dismissed on the ground that the deed of gift is void. Here the decree involves a claim or question to or respecting property other than the property actually claimed in the suit.<sup>12</sup> But, in the undermentioned case,<sup>13</sup> it was held by the Calcutta High Court that the word "property" in the second paragraph of this Section must be taken to be the property of the applicant for leave and that it is the extent to which the decree has operated to the prejudice of the applicant that determines the value of the property for the purposes of the Section. Hence, it was held in that case that in a suit by some of the heirs of a certain person for maintenance allowances, the plaintiffs were entitled to rely only upon the value of their own share and not upon the value of the entire monthly allowances payable to all the heirs when the other heirs, though made parties, had not made any claim. In such circumstances, it was held that it could not be said that the decision in the suit would involve directly or indirectly the interests of the others who had made no claim.

(3) A is the owner of a ganj consisting of several grounds occupied by several tenants. A sues B, one of such tenants, for ejection and for enhancement of rent. The other tenants of the other grounds are not parties to this suit. Here, the decision in the suit, though it may seriously prejudice A in similar suit, which he may have to file against the other tenants of the other sites, cannot be said to involve a question in respect of all the sites.<sup>14</sup>

(4) A sues for partition and possession of his share in family property. Does the decision in the suit involve a claim or question to or respecting the other share? No, according to the Bombay and Madras High Courts.<sup>15</sup> Yes, according to the High Courts of Calcutta<sup>16</sup> and Allahabad,<sup>17</sup> the reason being that the share of the plaintiff could not be ascertained without determining the value of all the other shares in the estate. The Patna High Court has held that the question depends upon the particular circumstances of each case; where the only question for determination is whether the plaintiff is entitled to a specific share leaving the rest of the property undivided in the hands of the defendants, the decree may not involve any question relating to the other shares; but where the suit is one for general partition in which some of the defendants are themselves claimants of shares, and the decree in appeal deprives them equally with the plaintiff of the benefit of the first Court's decree, the decree in appeal will be considered to involve a claim or question to, or respecting the other shares also.<sup>18</sup> The Bombay High Court also has held that where the decree of the High Court prejudicially affects the interests of both the plaintiff and one of the defendants in the case, the total value of the shares of the plaintiff and such defendant can be taken into consideration in determining the value of the property involved in the decree.<sup>19</sup>

Another important point to remember in applying this paragraph is that it is not sufficient that the decree affects property whose value is Rs. 10,000 or upwards. It is necessary that it should involve rights and claims to property which rights and claims are themselves worth Rs. 10,000 or upwards.<sup>20</sup> In other words, where some subsidiary interest such as an easement of small value attached to property of great

(1) A files a suit on a prior mortgage against B, the mortgagor, and C, the puisne mortgagees of a 4 annas share in the property mortgaged to A. A decree is passed for sale, in the first instance of a 12 annas share of the property and for sale of the 4 annas share also if the proceeds of the sale of the 12 annas share are insufficient to satisfy the decree amount. The 12 annas share is sold and the proceeds being found insufficient, the 4 annas share is also sold. C applies thereafter to set aside the sale on the ground of irregularity in conducting and publishing the sale, but the petition is dismissed by the High Court. C applies for leave to appeal to the Privy Council. Here there is, no doubt, a dispute as to the whole property but so far as C is concerned its value to him cannot be anything more than the market value of his 4 annas share, and if that is under Rs. 10,000, no leave can be granted.<sup>22</sup>

(2) A claims a right of way over a piece of land valued at Rs. 1,500, and forming part of a survey number valued at Rs. 10,000, A having a right to fence the way from the remaining land. Here the claim of A cannot be of more value to A than the value of the piece of land over which he claims the right of way, i. e., Rs. 1,500. No leave can therefore be granted.<sup>23</sup>

(3) A sues B for ejectment from a site valued at Rs. 300 on the ground that B is a tenant-at-will. B contends that he is a permanent tenant of the land and that he has put up buildings thereon valued at Rs. 23,000. A is willing that B should remove the buildings. In such a case the claim of A cannot (in view of his laying no claim to the buildings) be worth to him more than the value of the site viz., Rs. 300. No leave can therefore be granted.<sup>24</sup>

The Allahabad High Court has, however, in a recent decision<sup>25</sup> dissented from the view that the right claimed must itself be worth Rs. 10,000 or upwards. In that case it was held that the second paragraph of this Section gave a right of appeal to the Privy Council from a mortgage decree for the sale of property worth more than Rs. 10,000 although the decree itself was for a sum less than Rs. 10,000.

Where an applicant for leave files an affidavit that the decree or order involves a claim respecting property exceeding Rs. 10,000 in value and there is no counter affidavit by the respondents, the High Court may assume that the petitioner's affidavit is correct.<sup>26</sup>

12. Appeal from decree of affirmance must involve a substantial question of law. — Where the decree or final order appealed from is one of affirmance, there must exist a substantial question of law in addition to the requirements as to value mentioned in the first and second paragraphs of the Section.<sup>1</sup>

The affirmance of a "decision" means the affirmance of the decree and not necessarily of the judgment.<sup>3</sup> It follows that where the decree of the Court below is affirmed by the decree or final order appealed from, the latter will be a decree of affirmance even though it is based on grounds different from those adopted by the lower Court<sup>3</sup> or even where the appeal has been dismissed without any hearing, as for example, for default, non-prosecution, etc.<sup>4</sup>

The question whether the judgment of the High Court is one of affirmance or not does not depend upon whether appellant is the plaintiff or the defendant; it depends upon whether the judgment is one affirming the judgment of the lower Court. Where the lower Court gives a mortgage decree for a certain sum and the Appellate Court modifies it into a money decree for the same amount, there is no affirmance of the lower Court's decision.<sup>5</sup>

13. Affirmance—Meaning of.—The affirmance must be as regards the subject-matter of the suit dealt with by the Court below.<sup>1</sup> Where there is such affirmance, a reversal or variation merely on a matter which is not the subject-matter of the suit will not take the appellate decree out of the class of decrees of affirmance.<sup>2</sup> Thus, a variation of the lower Court's decree in the matter of costs<sup>3</sup> or the grant or extension of time for payment of the amount decreed,<sup>4</sup> is not a variation in respect of the subject-matter of the suit and does not prevent the appellate decree from being a decree of affirmance.

Where the decree of the Court below comprises different matters and the decree of the High Court affirms the lower Court's decree in respect of some of these matters and varies or reverses such decree in respect of other matters, then, if the proposed appeal to the Privy Council is in respect of a matter in regard to which the lower Court's decree has been affirmed, the case would come within the third paragraph of this Section and no leave for appeal to the Privy Council can be granted unless such appeal involves a substantial question of law.<sup>5</sup> But where the appeal to the Privy Council involves also the matters in regard to which the lower Court's decree has been reversed or varied, the third paragraph of this Section will not apply and no substantial question of law need be shown to be involved in the appeal.<sup>6</sup>

Suppose the plaintiff sues the defendant for Rs. 20,000 on a promissory note. The lower Court passes a decree in favour of the plaintiff for Rs. 8,000 disallowing his claim for the balance, viz. Rs. 12,000. The High Court on appeal varies the decree by enhancing the amount decreed to Rs. 9,000. The plaintiff wants to appeal to the Privy Council on the ground that he is entitled to the balance of the amount also, viz., Rs. 11,000. Can it be said that inasmuch as the decree of the High Court concurs with that of the lower Court in disallowing the plaintiff's claim for this sum, that the decree of the High Court is one of affirmance of the lower Court's decree? It has been held by the Privy Council that in such cases the High Court's decree cannot be said to be one of affirmance of the lower Court's decree<sup>7</sup> and this view has been followed in the undermentioned decisions.<sup>8</sup>

The contrary view taken by the Calcutta High Court in Raja Sree Nath Roy v. Secretary of State<sup>9</sup> must be treated as overruled by the above decision of the Privy Council.<sup>10</sup>

It will be seen that such cases are clearly distinguishable from the cases above referred to in which the lower Court's decree covers different matters and the High Court affirms such decree in regard to some of them and varies or reverses the decree in regard to others.<sup>11</sup>

14. Cross-appeals. — A obtains a decree against B for a portion of the amount claimed. A and B both prefer separate appeals against the decree in respect of the portion which is against them. A's appeal is dismissed but B's appeal is allowed in part. Can A obtain leave to appeal to the Privy Council on the ground that the decree has been modified in the cross-appeal of B? The Patna High Court has held that the appeal and the cross-appeal must be considered together and both the decrees must be regarded as one for the purpose of determining the question of affirmance.<sup>1</sup> The Calcutta High Court also seems to be of the same view.<sup>2</sup> The Allahabad and Lahore High Courts have held a contrary view, namely, that it is only the decree in A's appeal that must be considered.<sup>3</sup> The Madras High Court has held that where the cross-appeal or the memorandum of cross-objections relates to a matter distinct from the subject-matter of the appeal, the Allahabad view is to be followed<sup>4</sup> but that, where it is not possible to say whether the decree in the appeal and the memorandum of objections really consists of separate decrees in respect of separate subject-matter, they should be considered together for the purpose of determining whether the decree is one of affirmance.<sup>5</sup>

Notes 15-17

15. "Immediately below." — The decree or order appealed from must affirm the decision of the Court immediately below the Court passing such decree or order. The Calcutta High Court has held that, where a Division Bench of the High Court reverses, in an appeal under Clause 15 of the Letters Patent, the judgment of a single Judge of the High Court who had reversed on appeal the decree of the lower Appellate Court, the Court "immediately below" the Division Bench is the lower Appellate Court and not the Court of the single Judge of the High Court and that the decree of the Division Bench is a decree of affirmance.<sup>1</sup> The reason is that appeals to the Division Bench from a single Judge of the High Court do not lie by virtue of any provisions of the Civil Procedure Code under which the lower Appellate Court is the Court immediately below the High Court. The Lahore High Court has, on the other hand, held that the words "immediately below" do not mean "subordinate to" and that the Court of the single Judge of the High Court is "immediately below" the Division Bench.<sup>2</sup>

16. "Involve." — Where there are concurrent findings of fact and no question of law would arise unless the findings of fact are also re-opened, no question of law can be said to be involved in the appeal.<sup>1</sup> In Banki Lal v. Jagat Narain, I. L. R. 23 Allahabad 94, Strachey, C. J., said: "the word 'involve' implies a considerable degree of necessity. It does not mean that in certain contingencies a question of law might possibly arise. The practice of the Privy Council is not to interfere with concurrent findings of fact of the Courts below. I think it is impossible to say that a question which only arises if the concurrent findings of fact of the Courts in India are disregarded, a question which can never arise so long as the Privy Council maintains those concurrent findings of fact, is substantial question of law which the appeal to the Privy Council 'involves'."

The mere fact that a question of law seems to arise in the appeal is not sufficient for granting leave under the Section. It must definitely and clearly arise.<sup>2</sup>

are mostly of illustrative value.<sup>3</sup> The following guiding principles have, however, been recognized and applied in determining whether a question of law is substantial or not —

Note 17

(1) The function of the Privy Council being one to declare the law and not to alter it,<sup>3</sup> a question of law which has been definitely settled by the Privy Council or the High Courts<sup>4</sup> or on which there is or may be no difference of opinion<sup>5</sup> is not a substantial question of law. In fact, it is not a question of law at all but only a proposition of law.<sup>6</sup> In order that a point may be a substantial question of law it should be such as to impress the High Court that it is debatable<sup>7</sup> in view of the authorities or that the authorities themselves may require reconsideration. A question of law does not become substantial simply because the Judges have stated and examined it in detail in order to show that it has no substance.<sup>8</sup> A question of law will not be substantial merely because much is at stake on the answer to it.<sup>9</sup>

(2) Although a point has not been directly decided by Courts, if the principles clearly applicable to the case are well-established, the question is not a substantial question of law, and the difficulty in the application of such principles to the case cannot render it substantial.<sup>10</sup>

Notes 17

(3) The words 'substantial question of law' mean a substantial question of law as between the parties in the case involved, and not merely a question of general importance.<sup>11</sup>

(4) Orders passed in the exercise of the discretion of the Court do not involve substantial questions of law<sup>12</sup> but a question whether a Court could, in law, exercise any discretion at all in a given case is a substantial question of law.<sup>13</sup>

(5) Objections on the ground of defects in form<sup>14</sup> or procedure<sup>15</sup> are not substantial questions of law, though a question as to limitation<sup>16</sup> or jurisdiction may be one.<sup>17</sup>

(6) A question of law taken up for the first time at the hearing of the application for leave to appeal cannot be a substantial question of law.<sup>18</sup>

(7) Whether the construction of documents is or is not a substantial question of law, depends upon the facts of each case.<sup>19</sup> But the mere appreciation of the effect

Section 112 is not detracted in any way by any of the following circumstances —

Note 6

- (1) that the two Courts differ in their reasons in arriving at the finding;<sup>4</sup>
- (2) that the Courts differ in their view of the weight to be given to any particular piece of evidence;<sup>5</sup>
- (3) that the Judges composing the Bench which concurred in the finding of the lower Court are not unanimous in their finding;<sup>6</sup>
- (4) that the materials before the two Courts were not entirely the same, owing to the admission of additional evidence by the Appellate Court;<sup>7</sup>
- (5) that the lower Court had not considered part of the evidence though coming to the same conclusion;<sup>8</sup>
- (6) that the judgments of the Courts are not exhaustive enough to show that every minute and elementary consideration was present to the minds of the Judges;<sup>9</sup>
- (7) that the nature of the question discussed and the character of the evidence on record justify equally either view of the matter.<sup>10</sup>

In exceptional circumstances and for very strong reasons, the Privy Council will interfere even with the concurrent findings of fact in order to avoid injustice being done.<sup>11</sup> The following circumstances have been held to justify interference by the Privy Council with concurrent findings of fact —

- (1) plain miscarriage of justice in the conduct of the trial or the decision of the Court;<sup>12</sup>
- (2) violation or improper application of any principle of law, evidence, or procedure or the fact of the Court having clearly fallen into an error apparent on the documents;<sup>13</sup>
- (3) inadmissible evidence forming the basis of the finding;<sup>14</sup>

8. Order as to costs. — The sound general rule is that the party who is defeated in the controversy that is raised shall pay the costs.<sup>1</sup> But if the successful party is guilty of laches<sup>2</sup> or if grounds of appeal which are absolutely untenable are joined with grounds which are tenable in order to bring the case within the rule authorising an appeal as of right,<sup>3</sup> he will disentitle himself to the application of the general rule. Where an appeal is affirmed upon grounds wholly different from those relied upon in the Court below,<sup>4</sup> costs would be disallowed to the respondent. Where the Privy Council remanded a case to the lower Court and the remand was occasioned by the manner in which the issue was framed by the Judge, the costs of the appeal were directed to be costs in the cause.<sup>5</sup> In the undermentioned case<sup>6</sup> where the suit arose of a will being ambiguous which was construed differently by two Courts in India, their Lordships of the Privy Council ordered that the costs should come out of the estate. When granting leave to appeal it is open to the Privy Council to impose such terms upon the party applying as the special circumstances of the case require.<sup>7</sup>

The High Courts have no jurisdiction regarding costs or security for costs where special leave has been granted by the Privy Council except so far as directed by the Privy Council in that behalf.<sup>8</sup>

9. Re-hearing of appeals.—A re-hearing will, as a general rule, be refused in accordance with the salutary maxim interest reipublice ut sit finis litium — it concerns the State that there should be an end to law suits. There may, however, be exceptional circumstances which will warrant the Board in allowing a case to be re-heard at the instance of one of the parties. But this is an indulgence which will be exercised for the purpose of preventing irremediable injustice, where by some accident without any blame, the party has not been heard and an order has been made inadvertently as if he had been heard.<sup>1</sup> For examples of cases in which such indulgence was

13. Proceedings for contempt of Court—Whether appeal to Privy Council lies.—In Kapildev Malaviya v. Chief Justice and Judges of the High Court, Allahabad<sup>1</sup> certain persons were fined by the High Court for contempt of the High Court in having published an article in a newspaper which contained an “unwarranted and defamatory aspersion on the character and ability of a number of Judges of the High Court.” On an application by such persons for leave to appeal to the Privy Council it was held by the Allahabad High Court that no leave could be granted. The decision was based on two grounds : 1. The proceedings were of a criminal nature and as such not within the provisions of the Code relating to appeals to the Privy Council. 2. The matter was of an exclusive jurisdiction and the order of the High Court was ‘final.’

But in S. N. Banerjee v. Kuchwar Lime and Stone Co. Ltd.,<sup>2</sup> it was held by the Privy Council that a committal for a finding of contempt for breach of an injunction is not criminal in its nature and is properly dealt with under the Civil Procedure Code and hence, there could be an appeal to the Privy Council in such cases under the Civil Procedure Code.

REFERENCE, REVIEW AND REVISION

Section 113

113. [S. 617.] Subject to such conditions and limitations as may be prescribed, any Court may state a case and refer the same for the opinion of the High Court, and the High Court may make such order thereon as it thinks fit.
[ 1877, S. 617; 1861, S. 28; See Order 46.]

Synopsis

1. "Court," meaning of.
2. "Subject to such conditions . . . prescribed."

1. "Court," meaning of. — The Deputy Commissioner of Oudh<sup>1</sup> or a Collector hearing an application under the Bombay Mamlatdars' Courts Act<sup>2</sup> is not a "Court" within the meaning of this Section and cannot state a case for the opinion of the High Court.

Applications which had been submitted to the Maharajah of Benares in civil cases from the Benares State Court cannot be referred under this Section to the Allahabad High Court for its opinion.<sup>3</sup>

2. "Subject to such conditions . . . prescribed." — For such conditions and limitations, see Order 46.

This part of the Code does not apply to suits and proceedings under the Agra Tenancy Act (III of 1926), Section 264, Second Schedule.

Review.

1. History of the Section. — The Code of 1859 did not contain any provision for the exercise of revisional powers by the High Court. When the Charter Act of 1861 was passed establishing the High Courts in the several Presidencies (Bengal, Bombay and Madras), a power of superintendence was conferred on them over subordinate Courts subject to their appellate jurisdiction by Section 15 of that Act. But before the actual constitution of the High Courts, the Sudder Courts were empowered by Section 35 of Act XXIII of 1861 to call for the records of any case decided in appeal by the Subordinate Court and in which no further appeal lay when the subordinate Court appeared to have exercised a jurisdiction not vested in it. That Section is the foundation of the present Section.<sup>1</sup>

No material changes have been made in the present Section.

2. Scope and object of the Section. — This Section provides for the exercise of revisional powers of the High Courts. But it is necessary that the following conditions are satisfied before such powers can be exercised —

- (1) There must have been a case decided by the subordinate Court. See Note 4.
- (2) The Court deciding the case must be one subordinate to the High Court. See Note 6.
- (3) The decision must be one in which no appeal lies. See Note 7.
- (4) The subordinate Court must have in the decision of the case, exercised a jurisdiction not vested in it by law (see Note 9) or failed to exercise a jurisdiction vested in it (see Note 11) or must have acted in the exercise of its jurisdiction illegally or with material irregularity. See Note 12.

Where the above conditions are not satisfied the High Court cannot interfere on the ground of expediency.<sup>1</sup> The powers under this Section are intended to be exercised with a view to subserve and not to defeat the ends of justice.<sup>2</sup> Where, therefore, substantial justice has been rendered by the order of the lower Court, the High Court will not interfere in revision notwithstanding the fact that the reasons for the order are not correct.<sup>3</sup>

The High Court cannot, in the exercise of its revisional powers under this Section, attack findings of fact of the subordinate Court or substitute its own appreciation of evidence for that of the primary Court.<sup>4</sup> These are functions of a Court

Section 115 Notes 2-3

The Section is not exhaustive and the jurisdiction which the High Courts have inherited from the Supreme Courts in the matter of issuing writs of certiorari cannot be said to have been taken away by this Section.<sup>10</sup> High Courts have also, in addition to the power given under this Section, powers of superintendence over subordinate Courts under Section 224 of the Government of India Act of 1935. See Notes to Section 224 of the Government of India Act of 1935 in the Appendices.<sup>11</sup>

The Bombay High Court has also been given under Section 5 of Regulation II of 1827 power, in its extraordinary jurisdiction, "to call for the proceedings of any subordinate Court and to pass such orders thereon as the case may require."<sup>12</sup>

3. "May call for the record." — The exercise of the revisional powers of the High Court is entirely discretionary. The High Court will not take a technical view and necessarily interfere in every case where an order has been made irregularly or even improperly<sup>1</sup> unless grave injustice or hardship would result from a failure to do so.<sup>2</sup> As to whether the High Court would exercise its discretion in favour of interference where another remedy is open to the party, see Note 8, infra. On the other hand, where the conditions of the Section are satisfied and interference in any particular case is found necessary, the High Court may of its own motion call for the record and pass the necessary orders. It is not necessary that an application by a party should be filed.<sup>3</sup> It is the practice of the Bombay High Court, however, not to exercise its powers of interference, under Regulation II of 1827, unless a party applies.<sup>4</sup> Where a party applies for a revision, the mere fact that a non-party has also joined in the application is no bar to the High Court entertaining and disposing of the application.<sup>5</sup> It has also been held that a person who is not aggrieved by an order cannot apply for revision against the order.<sup>6</sup>

5. "Any case which has been decided."—The word 'case' has nowhere been defined.<sup>1</sup> It has, however, been held to have a wider meaning than the words 'suit' or 'appeal.'<sup>2</sup> In Chatterpal Singh v. Rajaram, I. L. R. 7 Allahabad 661, Mr. Justice Mahmood observed as follows :

"The word 'case,' as used in Section 622 of the Code, is nowhere defined ; but adopting the general rule of construing statutes, I hold that the word should be understood in its broadest and most ordinary sense, unless there were specific reasons for narrowing its meaning."

And in Balakrishna Udayar v. Vasudeva Ayyar, A. I. R. 1917 Privy Council 71, where the question was whether an ex parte proceeding under the Religious Endowments Act, 1863, constituted a 'case' within the meaning of this Section, their Lordships of the Privy Council observed as follows :

"It cannot, in their Lordships' view be confined to a litigation in which there is a plaintiff who seeks to obtain particular relief in damages or otherwise against a defendant who is before the Court. It must, they think, include an ex parte application such as that made in this case praying that persons in the position of trustees or officials should perform their trust or discharge their official duties."

So also where a scheme had been framed for the management of a public temple and under such scheme the Devasthan Committee of the taluka was given power to audit the accounts of the managing committee of the temple and where on the report of the Devasthan Committee pointing out irregularities in the management the District Judge passed orders interfering in the management and threatening action in case of disobedience, it was held by the Bombay High Court that the proceeding was a 'case' within the meaning of this Section.<sup>3</sup>

So also it has been held that a 'case' includes proceedings under the Guardians and Wards Act, 1890, the Provincial Insolvency Act, 1920, and the Succession Certificate Act.<sup>4</sup> Similarly, the proceedings of a District Judge under the Charitable and Religious Trusts Act (14 of 1920) are open to revision by the High Court under this Section.<sup>5</sup> Where the whole case was over and the only thing that remained to be done was the preparation of the decree, it was held to be a 'case decided' within this Section.<sup>6</sup>

It has been held that where the decision of the Court is in favour of the party concerned an application by him against a finding is not competent.<sup>7</sup>

As to whether an interlocutory order is a 'case decided,' see Note 5 below.

5. Interlocutory orders. — There is a conflict of views among the various High Courts as to whether an interlocutory application is a 'case' and an interlocutory order 'a case decided,' within the meaning of this Section. It has been held by a Full Bench of the High Court of Allahabad<sup>1</sup> that it is not. Its view is based on the ground that though the word 'case' is more comprehensive than the word 'suit' no instance can be quoted of its use in the Code where it would not at least include a 'suit' and that where the 'case' in which the revisional jurisdiction of the High Court is invoked happens to be also a 'suit,' then the suit itself is the case which requires to be decided before the record is called for. It was therefore held that an interlocutory order in a suit which did not decide the suit itself is not a 'case decided' and cannot be interfered with under S. 115. Order 14 Rule 2 was relied upon as showing that the word

Court is of a contrary opinion.<sup>13</sup> As to an application under O. 1 R. 10 the Allahabad High Court holds that it is an interlocutory order and not a case<sup>14</sup> while the Oudh Chief Court holds that it is a separate and independent proceeding.<sup>15</sup> The Lahore High Court<sup>16</sup> has held that where the plaintiff dies during the pendency of a suit and two parties, each claiming to be his legal representative, apply to be brought on the record, and the Court decides in favour of one party, the proceedings, so far as the other party is concerned, do not raise in the suit itself but are rather collateral proceedings and final qua that party, and hence the order amounts to a 'case decided.'

A suit was instituted against A, B, C and D on the basis of a promissory note executed by them. The Court ordered that the suit could not proceed against A as the promissory note was signed by him at a place which was beyond the jurisdiction of the Court. It was held by the Lahore High Court that a revision would be competent as the proceedings terminated so far as A was concerned and therefore there was a 'case decided'.<sup>17</sup>

The proceeding started by the filing of an application under Section 7 (1) (a) of the U. P. Encumbered Estates Act is a fresh proceeding and therefore a 'case'.<sup>18</sup>

An order allowing an amendment of the plaint, being of an interlocutory nature would not be open to revision, according to the Allahabad view.<sup>19</sup> But, it was held in certain earlier decisions of the Allahabad High Court that an order refusing to allow an amendment of the plaint was a 'case decided' and may be revised under this Section.<sup>20</sup> But this view has been overruled by a later Full Bench decision of the Allahabad High Court which has held that there is no difference in this respect between an order allowing an amendment of the plaint and one refusing such amendment.<sup>21</sup>

An order refusing to file an award and directing the suit to proceed is interlocutory in its nature and as such not open to revision.<sup>22</sup>

Section 115 Note 8

High Court is not powerless to interfere under Section 115, with interlocutory orders. The Calcutta, Madras and Patna High Courts have also interfered with such orders in the exercise of their powers of superintendence under Section 107 of the Government of India Act, 1915 (corresponding to Section 15 of the Charter Act, 1861).<sup>29</sup> It must, however, be noted in this connexion that under sub-section 2 to Section 224 of the Government of India Act of 1935 the High Court has no power of revision in respect of the judicial proceedings in lower Courts except in so far as such power may be otherwise conferred. See Notes to Section 224 of the Government of India Act of 1935 given as an Appendix to this work. The High Court of Bombay has also acted under Regulation II of 1827, Section 5 and interfered with such orders.<sup>30</sup>

It is submitted with respect that the Allahabad and Lahore view stated above is not correct. A judgment, under O. 20 R. 4, must contain a concise statement of the 'case' and under Section 2 clause 9, a 'judgment' means the statement given by the Judge of the grounds of a decree or order. A judgment in support of an order which will, of course, include an interlocutory order must, therefore, contain a concise statement of the 'case' which can only mean the matter in dispute in the particular proceeding. This view is also supported by Section 113 of the Code which enacts that any Court may state a 'case' and refer the same for the opinion of the High Court. A reference to the Report of Select Committee in 1879 for amending Section 622 of the Code of 1877 by introducing words therein corresponding to clause (c) of this Section makes the matter still more clear. It was there stated that the object of the amendment was to extend Section 622 (now Section 115) to cases in which the High Court of Bombay was then acting in the exercise of its powers under Regulation II of 1827, Section 5. This power extended under the said regulation, to call for the proceedings of any Subordinate Court and to pass such order thereon as the case may require.

As has been seen already in Note 3 ante, the exercise of revisional powers, even in cases where Section 115 is held to apply, is a matter of discretion, and in the case of interlocutory orders, the High Court will not interfere except where the evidence is inadmissible does not amount to a "case" decided.)

Section 115
Notes 5-6

- (4) Where the order passed is perverse or such that unless set aside irreparable harm is likely to be caused to one of the litigants.<sup>35</sup>
 (5) Where the effect of the order is to make the trial take an illegal course.<sup>36</sup>
 (6) Where the order works manifest injustice.<sup>37</sup>

As to whether the High Court will interfere with an interlocutory order in the exercise of its discretion under this Section where another remedy is open to the party either under Section 105 or otherwise, see Note 8 infra.

An interlocutory order which is appealable as an order under Section 104 or O. 43 R. 1, is not revisable under Section 115 which applies only to cases in which no appeal lies to the High Court.<sup>38</sup>

6. "Subordinate Court." — See also Section 3, ante.

This Section does not apply unless—

- (1) the decision sought to be revised is that of a Court, and
 (2) such Court is subordinate to the High Court.

validity of an election under the Madras Local Boards Act, 1902, is not a persona designata and his orders are therefore capable of being revised under this Section.<sup>3</sup>

The mere fact that a person exercises judicial functions is not sufficient to constitute him a 'Court'.<sup>4</sup> It has accordingly been held that the following persons are not 'Courts' —

- (1) A District Registrar.<sup>5</sup>
- (2) The Rent Controller of Rangoon.<sup>6</sup> The High Court of Calcutta has, however, assumed in the undermentioned case<sup>7</sup> that the Rent Controller of Calcutta is a Court.
- (3) It has been held by the High Courts of Allahabad,<sup>8</sup> Bombay,<sup>9</sup> Lahore,<sup>10</sup> Madras<sup>11</sup> and Rangoon<sup>12</sup> and the Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court<sup>13</sup> that a Collector dealing with an application under Section 18 of the Land Acquisition Act, 1894, is not a 'Court'. The decisions of the High Court of Calcutta are conflicting.<sup>14</sup> The Oudh Judicial Commissioner's Court has held that the Collector in such cases is a Court.<sup>15</sup> The Calcutta<sup>16</sup> and Patna<sup>17</sup> High Courts have also held that a Collector acting under Section 49, proviso 2 of the said Act is a Court. The High Court of Calcutta has also held that the Calcutta Improvement Trust Tribunal in acting under Section 32 of the Land Acquisition Act is acting as a Court.<sup>18</sup>

But a Collector acting under Section 11 of the said Act is, according to the Calcutta High Court, not a 'Court'.<sup>19</sup>

- (4) The Collector acting under the powers given by Section 69 and Schedule III of this Code.<sup>20</sup>
- (5) A Revenue Officer when making a settlement of rent under Chapter II of the Madras Estates Land Act is not a Civil Court. Consequently the Board of Revenue when directing the revision of his proceedings under Section 172 of that Act is also not a Civil Court. The High Court cannot, therefore, revise an order made or purporting to be made by the Board of Revenue under Section 172 of the Madras Estates Land Act.<sup>21</sup>

See also the undermentioned cases.<sup>22</sup>

A Court will be said to be subordinate to the High Court only when it is subject to its appellate jurisdiction though, as a matter of fact in any particular case, an appeal may not lie to the High Court.<sup>23</sup> But a single Judge of the High Court is not a Court subordinate to the High Court.<sup>24</sup> The reason is that the 'Court' referred to in Section 115 means a Court other than the High Court.<sup>25</sup> Similarly, the High Court of Kumaun is not a Court subordinate to the High Court of Allahabad.<sup>26</sup> The following Courts have been held to be Courts subordinate to the High Court —

- (1) His Britannic Majesty's Courts in Zanzibar,<sup>27</sup> the Court of the Resident at Aden (Aden has ceased to be part of British India under the Government of India Act of 1935. See Section 1 Note 1 ante),<sup>28</sup> a Court acting under the Dekkhan

Notes 6-7

Even where the decision sought to be revised is that of a 'Court' and such Court is 'subordinate' to the High Court, a revision will not necessarily lie under Section 115 of the Code. Under Section 4 of the Code "nothing in this Code shall be deemed to limit or otherwise affect any special or local law now in force or any special jurisdiction or power conferred or any special form of procedure prescribed by or under any other law for the time being in force." Thus, under the Rent Acts of the various Provinces, the right of revision to the High Court has been either expressly or impliedly excluded. In all such cases, there will be no right of revision under this Section.<sup>41</sup> Where, however, there is no such exclusion, Section 115 will, of course, apply.<sup>42</sup>

7. "And in which no appeal lies thereto."—The powers of the High Court under this Section can be invoked in respect of any case decided by a subordinate Court only in cases in which no appeal lies to the High Court.<sup>1</sup> The word 'appeal' is

The powers of the High Court under Section 115 should, however, be liberally utilised where the applicant has no other remedy,<sup>16</sup> though even in such cases the High Court may, in its discretion, refuse to interfere.<sup>17</sup>

9. Jurisdiction. — The word 'jurisdiction' has been used in this Section in its broad legal sense as meaning the power of administering justice according to the means which the law provided and subject to the limitations imposed by that law upon the judicial authority; such limitations may be territorial or pecuniary or they may relate to the nature of the litigation or the domicile or nationality of the parties or the class or rank to which the tribunal belongs.<sup>1</sup> Section 115 contemplates three cases in which the revisional powers of the High Court may be exercised —

- (1) the assumption by the lower Court of a jurisdiction which it does not possess,
- (2) its failure to exercise a jurisdiction which it does possess, and
- (3) where there is exercise of jurisdiction which the Court possesses but the exercise has been in a manner which is illegal or materially irregular.<sup>2</sup>

Section 115
Notes 9-10

In Balkrishna Udyar v. Vasudeva Ayyar<sup>3</sup> their Lordships of the Privy Council observed as follows :

"It will be observed that the Section applies to jurisdiction alone, the irregular exercise or non-exercise of it or the illegal assumption of it. The Section is not directed against the conclusions of law or fact in which the question of jurisdiction is not involved."

As to the meaning of 'jurisdiction' generally, see Notes 3 to 14 to Section 9, ante.

10. "Exercise of jurisdiction not vested in it by law." — When a Court has no legal authority to decide the cause at all but nevertheless under an erroneous construction of the law or of a misapprehension of facts proceeds to do so as if it had such authority, it "exercises a jurisdiction not vested in it by law"<sup>1</sup> and such action will be a ground for interference under this Section. Thus, where the lower Appellate Court entertains an appeal from an order which is not appealable,<sup>2</sup> or where a Court entertains a suit or appeal which it has no jurisdiction to entertain,<sup>3</sup> or passes an order

Notes 11-13

- (4) Where it fails, or refuses to, consider a case on the merits as it was bound to do.<sup>12</sup>
(5) Where it misunderstands its own duties or its powers and thus, in substance, declines jurisdiction.<sup>13</sup>

12. Exercise of jurisdiction illegally or with material irregularity. —

There is an almost irreconcilable conflict of opinion as to the proper interpretation of clause (c) of the Section.<sup>1</sup> In Amir Hassan Khan v. Sheo Baksh Singh, I. L. R. 11 Calcutta 6, their Lordships of the Privy Council observed as follows :

"The question there is, did the Judges of the lower Courts in this case in the exercise of their jurisdiction act illegally or with material irregularity. It appears that they had perfect jurisdiction to decide the question which was before them and they did decide it. Whether they decided it rightly or wrongly, they had jurisdiction to decide the case, and even if they decided wrongly they did not exercise their jurisdiction illegally or with material irregularity."

On an interpretation of this decision, a Full Bench of the High Court of Madras has held that it is only when a Court decides a case perversely that it can be said to act illegally or with material irregularity in the exercise of its jurisdiction and that other errors on questions of law or procedure are outside this clause.<sup>2</sup> According to what may be called the Calcutta view, clause (c) has been purposely and advisedly left in indefinite language in order to empower the High Court to interfere with gross and palpable errors of subordinate Courts, and to prevent manifest injustice in non-appellable cases.<sup>3</sup>

Note 12.

In the undermentioned case,<sup>4</sup> a Full Bench of the Nagpur High Court held that though a Court may have jurisdiction to make an order, if the effect of the order is finally to shut out a trial when it ought never to have been so shut out, then such an error must be regarded as a material irregularity although it may not be palpable or gross. In that case, it was held that an erroneous order of an Appellate Court demanding additional court-fee was an order affected with material irregularity although the error may not be palpable or gross. The High Court of Allahabad has held that where the law has prescribed the manner in which a Court shall exercise its jurisdiction and the Court acts in disregard of those provisions, it acts illegally or irregularly in the exercise of jurisdiction.<sup>5</sup> But where the Court exercises its jurisdiction in the manner prescribed but arrives at a conclusion or decision which is erroneous in law or fact, it does not act illegally or irregularly but decides erroneously in the proper exercise of jurisdiction.<sup>6</sup> It is submitted that this last view is the correct view. The use of the word 'acted' indicates the true position and refers to the class of cases where the Court having jurisdiction violates a rule of law or of procedure prescribing the mode in which such jurisdiction is to be exercised. The arriving at a conclusion or decision is only a mental operation and the Court cannot be said to be "acting" in so coming to a conclusion or decision on a question of law or fact.<sup>7</sup> The decision in Amir Hassan Khan's case is perfectly intelligible upon this principle. There is no necessity, nor is there anything in the language of the Section, to limit the meaning of the words in clause (c) to perverse decisions only<sup>8</sup> though where the Court is perverse, i. e., where it wilfully or consciously disregards the provisions of law, it is certainly acting illegally in exercise of its jurisdiction.<sup>9</sup>

But where it does, it could be decisive. The decision, whether on the question of limitation, or the character of the suit, or the

Where there is an illegality in the exercise of jurisdiction the order of the Court is void and of no effect and nothing more need be shown for maintaining a revision. Where, however, there is an irregularity in the exercise of jurisdiction such irregularity must be shown to be a material one, i. e., one which would have affected the decision of the case upon the merits.<sup>10</sup> Whether an act is illegal or merely irregular seems to depend upon the importance of the provision of law disregarded.<sup>11</sup> Thus, where the law expressly prohibits a thing to be done, a disregard of such a provision has been held to amount to an illegality.<sup>12</sup> The distinction, however, between what is illegal and what is materially irregular, has not been very clearly drawn by the decisions<sup>13</sup> and very often the same thing is sometimes treated as an illegality and sometimes as a material irregularity. Thus, it was held in the undermentioned case<sup>14</sup> that a Court acts illegally in the exercise of its jurisdiction if it arrives at a conclusion without any evidence to support it. The same thing has been treated as a material irregularity in other cases.<sup>15</sup>

A plea that the Court refused to exercise jurisdiction cannot be raised along with the plea that the Court acted with material irregularity in the exercise of jurisdiction.<sup>62</sup> An objection to an application for revision that the lower Court had jurisdiction to hear and decide the matter and that it did not exercise its jurisdiction illegally or with material irregularity is not a preliminary objection inasmuch as such objection cannot be decided without going into the merits of the application for revision.<sup>63</sup>

13. Error of law or fact. — An error of law or fact by which a Court assumes a jurisdiction which it has not, or declines to exercise a jurisdiction which it has, will come under clauses (a) and (b).<sup>1</sup> And an error of law in the mode prescribed for the exercise of jurisdiction will come under clause (c). But a conclusion or decision arrived at in the proper exercise of jurisdiction, which is erroneous in law or fact is, as has been observed in Note 12 above, not a ground for revision.<sup>2</sup> In or of the Section of an Act,<sup>10</sup> or an erroneous appreciation of evidence,<sup>11</sup> is no ground for revision. Similarly, an erroneous decision as to what constitutes a material irregularity in setting aside an execution sale is no ground for revision.<sup>12</sup> But where a particular question of law has been decided in one way by a High Court or by the Privy Council, the failure of a subordinate Court to follow such a binding precedent is an illegal or irregular exercise of jurisdiction, with which the High Court will interfere.<sup>13</sup> It is not a mere error of law.

erroneously thinks that it has, or that it has no jurisdiction to act in a particular manner or to pass a particular order, there is either an illegal assumption of jurisdiction or a failure to exercise the jurisdiction which it has. But suppose the order of the trial Court as to its own jurisdiction is appealed against and the Appellate Court either confirms such order or reverses it, can the lower Appellate Court itself be said to have exercised a jurisdiction not vested in it or to have failed to exercise a jurisdiction which it has or to have exercised its jurisdiction illegally or with material irregularity? According to the High Courts of Allahabad,<sup>1</sup> Bombay,<sup>2</sup> Calcutta,<sup>3</sup> Madras<sup>4</sup> and Patna<sup>5</sup> and the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Nagpur,<sup>6</sup> the decision of the Appellate Court is revisable under Section 115. where the interference is likely to work not in the interest of justice but rather against it, the High Court will not interfere.<sup>6</sup> Where, however, a particular order creates an anomalous position<sup>7</sup> or leaves the matter in a muddle,<sup>8</sup> the High Court will set it aside in revision. Thus, while a Small Cause Judge returned a plaint which had been returned by the Munsif to be presented before the former and the Munsif adhered to his previous order, the High Court is entitled to make such an order as would enable the plaintiff to have his action tried.<sup>9</sup> But a party who, by his conduct creates a particular position, cannot, in revision, seek to set it aside.<sup>10</sup>

16a. Nature of order made in revision against a decree. — An order passed in revision from a decree is a decree as much as an appellate decree.<sup>1</sup>

But, an order dismissing a petition for revision does not substitute a decree of the revisional Court for that of the Court below. When a revising Court refuses to exercise its power of revision, it does not confirm any decree but merely declines to interfere, leaving the decree of the Court below intact as the decree of that Court.<sup>2</sup>

privilege and not a right and corresponds to the remedies in England known as certiorari and mandamus. The invariable rule in all these cases is that the party aggrieved must come to the Court at the earliest possible moment. When, therefore, there has been a great and unexplained delay or laches in making the application, the Court will refuse to interfere.<sup>2</sup> Where, however, the petitioner is not to be blamed for the delay<sup>3</sup> or where there are exceptional circumstances<sup>4</sup> the High Court will not refuse to exercise its powers under the Section. Thus, when the petitioner failed in his attempt to set aside an ex parte decree and then filed a suit to vacate the same for want of jurisdiction but the Court held that the relief could not be granted, and then a revision was preferred to the High Court, the circumstances were held sufficient to explain the delay in applying for revision.<sup>5</sup> The practice of the High Court of Patna is to entertain applications in revision only if they are filed within three months of the date of the order sought to be revised.<sup>6</sup>

18. Application in revision treated as appeal. — Where an application for revision is filed in a case in which an appeal lies, the Court may treat the petition as an appeal, provided the same was filed within the time prescribed for filing the appeal<sup>1</sup>

Notes 20-21

As to whether the High Court will interfere in revision against an order which has been declared to be final by a particular Act, see the undermentioned cases.<sup>6</sup>

21. Orders under Sections 152 and 153.—The High Courts of Allahabad,<sup>1</sup> Bombay<sup>2</sup> and Calcutta<sup>3</sup> and the Chief Court of the Punjab<sup>4</sup> have held that an order passed under Section 206 of the old Code constitutes an adjudication separate from that concluded by the decree and amounts to a decision of a 'case' capable of being revised. The same view has been taken under the present Code also.<sup>5</sup> Accordingly, it has been held that if a Court refuses to amend a decree in conformity with the judgment it amounts to a refusal to exercise jurisdiction.<sup>6</sup> In an old Allahabad case<sup>7</sup> when the decree was amended from "I dismiss the appeal" to "I accept the appeal" it was considered to be a grave irregularity in the exercise of jurisdiction. Similarly, a Court has no power to vary or amend a decree when it is in conformity with the judgment and, if done, it will be open to revision.<sup>8</sup> against an order of amendment, and that the only remedy of the aggrieved party is to appeal against the amended decree and, if necessary, to invoke the provisions of Section 5, Limitation Act.

The High Court of Madras<sup>9</sup> has, on the other hand, held that no revision lies.

Clerical and arithmetical mistakes caused by accidental slips or omissions in judgments, orders and decrees may at any time be corrected under Section 152 and a refusal to correct them would amount to a failure to exercise jurisdiction.<sup>10</sup> When in a mortgage suit the mother was appointed guardian for her minor sons, who were defendants in the suit, but a preliminary decree was passed against them with the father as guardian and further proceedings were conducted without reference to the mother, an attempt to rectify the mistake for misdescription of names was held not a mere clerical error capable of being rectified, but one of non-representation of the minors.<sup>11</sup>

From the use of the word "may" in Section 152, the Allahabad High Court has held<sup>12</sup> that the Court has a discretion to grant the relief and so when a District Court refused to correct a decree passed by it on appeal on the ground that the appellant was guilty of laches, the High Court held that the discretion was rightly exercised in the peculiar circumstances of the case. On the other hand, the High Court of Calcutta<sup>13</sup> is of opinion that the use of the words "at any time" enlarges the power of the Court to grant the relief and does not make it discretionary.

The revisional powers cannot be exercised ultra vires and without authority; so where the fee allowed by the decree is excessive and not warranted by law it cannot, on that ground only, be rectified in revision.<sup>14</sup>

The only Court that can amend a decree, after it has been affirmed or varied in appeal is the Appellate Court. The original Court granting an amendment in such a case acts without jurisdiction.<sup>15</sup> See Notes to Section 152.

way of a suit is available to the aggrieved party under clause (2) of Section 73.<sup>1</sup> This, however, does not mean that the aggrieved party should be confined to that remedy "if the circumstances of the case warrant an interference." Accordingly when Courts have acted in defiance of the terms of Section 73 and thereby assumed a jurisdiction which they did not possess or declined jurisdiction in a proper case, the High Court will interfere to set matters right.<sup>2</sup>

See Notes to Section 73 also.

23. Orders in claim cases. — As has been seen in Note 8 ante, no application will ordinarily be entertained to revise an order passed under O. 21 Rr. 60, 61 or 62 inasmuch as the party against whom the order is made has a special remedy by way of a suit. But this does not bar the High Court's power of interference in exceptional cases.<sup>1</sup> Thus, if the lower Court fails to determine the only real question that has to be decided, namely, that of possession<sup>2</sup> and disposes of the petition on a determination of the question of title<sup>3</sup> which it was not competent to investigate, or allows a claim in express violation of the Code, as for example, after the execution sale<sup>4</sup> or against mortgaged property which was brought for sale,<sup>5</sup> the High Court will interfere.

Similarly, if a Court improperly refuses to investigate a claim<sup>6</sup> or in investigating the question of possession it considers questions really extraneous to the issue<sup>7</sup> such as fraud or the benami character of the transaction on which the claim was based,<sup>8</sup> or the liability of the petitioner to discharge the debt,<sup>9</sup> the High Court will interfere.

An order of the executing Court refusing to entertain objections under O. 21, R. 58 is not an order under O. 21 R. 61 and as therefore, the objectors have no right of suit under O. 21 R. 63, the order is open to revision.<sup>10</sup>

24. Orders setting aside or refusing to set aside sales. — An order under O. 21 R. 89 is now made expressly appealable by O. 43 R. 1 clause (j). Under the old Code the order was appealable as a decree under Section 244 (now Section 47) if the question was decided between the parties to the suit or their representatives though the auction-purchaser was merely interested in the result. But when the question was between a party to a suit and the auction-purchaser, it was doubted whether an appeal lay and so revision was allowed.<sup>1</sup> So when the Court set aside an execution sale at the instance of an attaching creditor<sup>2</sup> or a Mahomedan co-heir,<sup>3</sup> this Section was held to apply and the order was held to be one passed without jurisdiction on the ground that they were not persons competent to apply. Under the present rule where an application is erroneously dismissed on the ground that it was made by a person not entitled to apply, it has been held by the High Courts of Calcutta,<sup>4</sup> Patna<sup>5</sup> and Madras<sup>6</sup> that the action of the lower Court amounted to a refusal to exercise jurisdiction. The High Court of Allahabad<sup>7</sup> has, on the other hand, held that it only amounted to an erroneous order in the exercise of jurisdiction and hence incapable of being revised. The Oudh Chief Court has also proceeded on the view that an erroneous decision as to the locus standi of a person to apply to set aside a sale does not affect the jurisdiction of the Court.<sup>8</sup> (See Note 11 on this point.)

No second appeal lies from an order made under O. 21 R. 89<sup>9</sup> but a revision will lie from those orders passed in appeal and made in disregard of those provisions or in the illegal or irregular exercise of jurisdiction.<sup>10</sup> Thus, if the judgment-debtor deposits the amount mentioned in the sale proclamation together with the 5 per cent. of the purchase money in time, a refusal to set aside a sale was held to be an irregular exercise of jurisdiction.<sup>11</sup> But an application is necessary, a mere deposit not being enough; it will be violating the principle of the rule if the sale is set aside without such an application<sup>12</sup> though an oral application has been considered sufficient.<sup>13</sup> No order could be made setting aside a sale under O. 21 R. 89, without notice as provided under R. 92, but there is no jurisdiction to confirm the sale for failure to pay process fees when the auction-purchaser appears in the proceeding by a pleader.<sup>14</sup> When the deposit falls short, due to a mistake of the Court, and is subsequently made good, the Courts act with material irregularity in refusing to set aside a sale.<sup>15</sup> No application for revision will lie from an order dismissing an application under R. 89 on the ground that an application under Rule 90 was previously dismissed.<sup>16</sup> See also the undermentioned cases.<sup>17</sup>

As in the case of applications under O. 21 R. 89 so in applications under R. 90, only a first appeal is provided by Section 104 and O. 43 R. 1 clause (i).<sup>18</sup> But if the application raises a question concerning the execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree within the meaning of Section 47 and when no petition is put in under R. 89, the executing Court is bound to decide it and the decision so given being a decree, a second appeal will lie.<sup>19</sup> An instance of the kind is to be found where a sale is held without issuing a proper notice provided by O. 21 R. 22.<sup>20</sup> When a Court rejects an application to set aside a sale summarily<sup>21</sup> or without allowing the petitioner an opportunity to substantiate his allegations<sup>22</sup> or without considering the evidence let in by him<sup>23</sup> or by misapplying the law of limitation,<sup>24</sup> it was held to be a sufficient ground for interference. in the petition in time it is not a mere error of law but an irregularity of procedure justifying interference though it would be immaterial if they have appeared in the proceedings and taken part in it.<sup>27</sup> The sale can be set aside only on proof of substantial injury<sup>28</sup> and in the absence of it, a Court acts without jurisdiction in setting aside the sale.<sup>29</sup> Where an incumbrance was not mentioned in a sale proclamation and the price fetched was inadequate and when no notice was issued under O. 21 R. 66, and nevertheless the sale was confirmed by the lower Court, it was held to be a fit case for revision.<sup>30</sup> It will be a failure to exercise jurisdiction to refuse to confirm a sale in the absence of a petition either under Rule 89 or Rule 90.<sup>31</sup> Similarly, where a sale is confirmed while an application to set it aside is pending, the order will be interfered with in revision.<sup>32</sup>

When a petition is put in under Order 9, which does not apply to execution proceedings, to set aside an ex parte order setting aside the execution sale, the High Court, in revision, will not convert it into one of review.<sup>33</sup>

Fraud of the auction-purchaser in colluding with the execution creditor and purchasing property at a depreciated value is a good ground to set aside a sale and a Court acts with material irregularity in refusing to do so.<sup>34</sup>

An application by the judgment-debtor under O. 21 R. 89 will not, in revision, be converted into one by the purchaser.<sup>35</sup>

Section 115
Notes 20-26

26. Orders under Order 33. — Some of the earlier decisions of the Allahabad High Court<sup>1</sup> took the view that orders on applications in forma pauperis did not come within the definition of the words "case decided" and were of such an interlocutory character as not to come within the meaning of the Section. But in 1910 a Division Bench of the said High Court drew a distinction between cases where the pauper's application was rejected and cases where it was allowed.<sup>2</sup> In the former case the pauper's case was held to have come to an end and was therefore a "case decided" within the meaning of the Section capable of being revised. While in the latter case it was held that no "case" was decided. It was apparently on this ground that two of the earlier decisions of that Court permitting revision could be supported. One was a case<sup>3</sup> where the lower Court without paying attention to the exact meaning of the word "pauper" considered certain extraneous and irrelevant matters and another<sup>4</sup> where the lower Court inquired into what would be the result of the suit if leave was not granted and thus rejected the application. In 1921 after the Full Bench in Buddhu Lal v. Mewa Ram<sup>5</sup> authoritatively laid down that interlocutory orders did not amount to a case decided under the Section, it was impossible to maintain the said distinction and it was held that even applications where leave was refused could not be revised.<sup>6</sup> Independently, however, of this view it was held by the said High Court that in considering the question of pauperism, if a Court wanders from the issue, and enters on a question of the pauper's title to the suit<sup>7</sup> or to the maintainability of the suit,<sup>8</sup> it would be an exercise of jurisdiction not vested by law. The Full Bench ruling has been subsequently distinguished as an authority only for the proposition that no revision lies from a mere finding, though relating to a question of jurisdiction and not as laying down a broader proposition that no revision will ever lie from an order which is merely interlocutory one. Further, when the matter is altogether at an end and plaintiff is entirely out of Court, the order is not merely an interlocutory one but a "case decided" and so is revisable.<sup>9</sup> See also the under-mentioned decision.<sup>10</sup> The Lahore High Court has held that an order granting or barred — Opposite party sufficiently compensated by costs — High Court will not set aside order granting permission for fresh suit.]

Section 115 refusing an application for leave to sue in forma pauperis is a 'case decided'.<sup>11</sup>
Note 26

The Nagpur and Sind Judicial Commissioner's Courts have maintained the distinction pointed out by the Allahabad Court though interference would be made only in cases where there is some material illegality or irregularity in the procedure adopted by the lower Court in rejecting the application.<sup>12</sup> In Oudh<sup>13</sup> the application in forma pauperis was itself held to be a "case decided" and therefore if the lower Court committed an irregularity in deciding it, it could be revised whether the application was allowed or rejected. This view, it is submitted, is the correct view, and has been upheld by all the other High Courts. The Madras, Patna and Rangoon High Courts<sup>14</sup> have also rejected the distinction referred to above between the rejection and the allowing of the application. Accordingly when the lower Court, after considering the whole question of pauperism and in the exercise of discretion comes to a proper decision it will not be interfered with when there is no error of jurisdiction.<sup>15</sup> If, on the other hand, the lower Court commits an irregularity in the exercise of jurisdiction as where it declines to give notice to the Government Pleader or to the defendant before disposing of the application,<sup>16</sup> or where it does not properly consider the

Note 26

No doubt the Court has to satisfy itself prima facie that the plaint discloses a subsisting cause of action but it will be acting without jurisdiction if it travels beyond the plaint to ascertain the same, as for instance by taking the evidence of witnesses besides that of the petitioner.<sup>20</sup> Where plaintiff is allowed to sue as a pauper, security for costs should be ordered only under exceptional circumstances, and an order rejecting the application for failure to furnish the same is improper and will be set right in revision.<sup>21</sup>

A pauper whose application is rejected may be allowed to pay the necessary court-fee and it will be a failure to exercise jurisdiction if the permission is refused.<sup>22</sup>

The Government is entitled, at any time, to apply to the Court to make an order for the payment of court-foes.<sup>23</sup> And if no provision is made for the payment of court-fee to Government, the Government may appeal against the decree.<sup>24</sup> Under the Code of 1882, it was held that Government not being a party to the suit, had no

there is a refusal to exercise jurisdiction in the matter and try the case on the merits unless the additional court-fee demanded is paid.<sup>1</sup> But a decision holding that the court-fee paid is sufficient is, it has been held, not subject to the revisional jurisdiction of the High Court as there is no refusal to exercise jurisdiction in such cases.<sup>2</sup> See also the undermentioned decision.<sup>3</sup> For fuller discussion see Section 149 Note 14 and Order 7 Rule 11 Note 12.

29. High Court's revisional powers under other Acts. — 1. Guardians and Wards Act, 1890. — Section 47 of the Guardians and Wards Act enacts that in certain cases specifically mentioned therein an appeal shall lie to the High Court from the orders passed by the subordinate Courts and Section 48 of the same Act while enacting that all other orders are final has expressly saved the extraordinary powers of the High Court to interfere in cases where the lower Courts have not properly exercised their powers.<sup>1</sup> But the application for revision will be considered under Section 48 only where the Court exercised jurisdiction not vested by law, or declined to exercise jurisdiction vested by law or exercised the same in an illegal or irregular manner. Courts<sup>3</sup> were taking the view that applications granting or refusing sanction to prosecute a party or a witness in a civil or revenue proceeding, could be revised only under Section 439 of the Criminal Procedure Code. The practice of the Calcutta High Court<sup>3</sup> had been always to deal with such applications on the civil side. Now it has been agreed by almost all the High Courts that such an application is a case decided within the meaning of this Section and that the High Court has no jurisdiction on the criminal side to revise such orders under Section 439, Criminal Procedure Code. But the proceedings can be revised either under this Section on any of the grounds specified therein, or under Section 15 of the High Courts Act (now Section 107 of the Government of India Act).<sup>4</sup> (Under Section 224 of the Government of India Act of 1935 the High Court has no power of revision apart from the power which it may otherwise possess.) Accordingly, it has been held that the omission to set forth the particulars of charges as in a case for perjury, and forgery<sup>5</sup> or to consider a case on its merits<sup>6</sup> constituted a material irregularity. Similarly, where sanction is given on facts which do not establish any offence<sup>7</sup> or on evidence legally inadmissible,<sup>8</sup> the order is revisable.

But though the applications in all such cases lie on the civil revisional side of the High Court and not on the criminal revisional side, the Chief Justice could, under Section 108 of the Government of India Act of 1915, direct a Bench exercising criminal jurisdiction to deal with the case.<sup>9</sup> The procedure prescribed would however be one under the Civil Procedure Code.<sup>10</sup>

When action under Section 476, Criminal Procedure Code, is taken by a subordinate Criminal Court, the High Court may revise the proceedings under Section 439, Criminal Procedure Code.<sup>11</sup>

Having regard to the view that revision against an order granting sanction to prosecute is under Section 115, it is competent to the Court to award costs of the petition.<sup>12</sup> Some recent cases of the Calcutta High Court have taken the view that Section 195, Criminal Procedure Code, creates a special jurisdiction and provides in clause 6 the machinery for the correction of possible errors committed by the primary Court and consequently the party who seeks relief must have recourse only to such machinery and cannot invoke the aid of this Section.<sup>13</sup> In a recent Full Bench decision<sup>14</sup> the Bombay High Court has held, agreeing with the undermentioned decision of the Lahore High Court,<sup>15</sup> that an application in revision from an order under Section 476B of the Criminal Procedure Code by a Civil Court to the High Court should be heard and decided by the High Court in accordance with the provisions of Section 439 of the Criminal Procedure Code.

only in the year 1919. Before that, the decisions were not uniform as the original Clause allowed an appeal to the High Court from the judgment of a single Judge or of one Judge of a Division Bench in pursuance of Section 13 of the Charter Act. By Section 13 the High Courts are empowered to exercise original and appellate jurisdiction. The question then arose whether revisional jurisdiction was a part of the appellate jurisdiction vested by Section 13 of the High Courts Act. If it did include it, then an appeal was held to lie from an order of a single Judge made under this Section, provided it amounted to a "judgment." The Allahabad<sup>2</sup> and Bombay<sup>3</sup> High Courts took the view that an order refusing to send for the records of a case did not amount to a judgment, as Clause 15 of the Letters Patent referred only to judgments passed in civil original suits and to orders passed by a single Judge disposing of original and appellate work. Obviously it was thought that "appellate" powers did not include revisional jurisdiction. The Madras High Court<sup>4</sup> interpreted the words "appellate jurisdiction" referred to in Section 13 of the Charter Act as exhaustive and so inclusive of revisional powers. Consequently an appeal was held to lie from a judgment of a single Judge under this Section. The rejection of a petition<sup>5</sup> under this Section was held not to amount to a "judgment" as the Court does not enter into the controversy between the parties, but only declines to interfere.<sup>6</sup> But later cases of the High Court of Madras took the view that even if the single Judge declined to interfere in revision his order amounted to a "judgment" and was hence held to be appealable.<sup>7</sup> As has been noticed before, under the present Letters Patent no such appeal lies. There can be no review or re-hearing of an application for revision dismissed for default.<sup>8</sup> The proper course is to prefer a second application for revision.<sup>9</sup> An application for review may also be treated as one for revision.<sup>10</sup>

PART IX.

SPECIAL PROVISIONS RELATING TO THE CHARTERED HIGH COURTS

Section 116                    116. [S. 631.] This Part applies only to High Courts which are, or may hereafter be, "constituted by His Majesty by Letters Patent."

Part to apply only to certain High Courts.

a. Substituted by the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937, for "established under the Indian High Courts Act, 1861, or the Government of India Act, 1915."

1. Amendment after 1908. — See foot-note (a) to the text of the Section.

Section 117                    117. [S. 632.] Save as provided in this Part or in Part X or in rules, the provisions of this Code shall apply to such High Courts.

Application of Code to High Courts.

| 3. Security for costs in Letters Patent Appeals. |   |

1. Scope of the Section. — This Section declares that the provisions of the Code shall apply to Chartered High Courts also save as otherwise provided in Parts IX and X of the Code or in rules.<sup>1</sup> Thus, Sections 16, 17, and 20 of the Code are declared by Section 120 in this Part (IX) to be inapplicable to the High Court in the exercise of its original civil jurisdiction. Again, under Section 129 of the Code, the High Court can make rules as to its own procedure in the exercise of its original civil jurisdiction and such rules will prevail over the provisions of the Code.<sup>2</sup> For rules not applicable to Chartered High Courts, see O. 49 R. 3. See also Notes to Section 114.

2. Rules include forms. — "Rules" means rules and forms contained in the First Schedule or made under Section 122 or Section 125. See Section 2 (18), ante.

3. Security for costs in Letters Patent Appeals. — It follows from what has been said in Note 1 above that O. 41 R. 10 will apply to Letters Patent appeals also unless the High Court has, under Section 129, made a rule inconsistent with it.<sup>1</sup> The Bombay High Court has framed such a rule (being Rule 725 of the Bombay High Court Rules) and therefore O. 41 R. 10 has been held not to apply to Letters Patent appeals in the Bombay High Court.<sup>2</sup>

Notes 3-5

4. Review in Letters Patent Appeals. — It has been seen in Note 1 to Section 114 that there is a difference of opinion among the several High Courts in India on the maintainability of an application for review of decrees in appeals under the Letters Patent. In cases where such review lies, appeals from orders passed on such applications for review are governed by the provisions of Order 47 Rule 7.<sup>1</sup>

5. Letters Patent Appeals. — See Section 104, Note 6 and Notes on Clause 15 of the Letters Patent (Madras, Bombay and Calcutta).

118. [S. 634.] Where any such High Court considers it necessary that a decree passed in the exercise of its original civil jurisdiction should be executed before the amount of the costs incurred in the suit can be ascertained by taxation, the Court may order that the decree shall be executed forthwith, except as to so much thereof as relates to the costs; and, as to so much thereof as relates to the costs, that the decree may be executed as soon as the amount of the costs shall be ascertained by taxation.

Execution of decree before ascertainment of costs.

1. Taxation of costs and limitation.—Where a decree provides for payment of costs “when taxed and noted”, limitation for the execution of the decree as to costs runs from the date of such taxation.<sup>1</sup>

119. [S. 635.] Nothing in this Code shall be deemed to authorize any person on behalf of another to address the Court in the exercise of its original civil jurisdiction, or to examine witnesses, except where the Court shall have in the exercise of the power conferred by its charter authorized him so to do, or to interfere with the power of the High Court to make rules concerning advocates, vakils and attorneys.

1. Scope of the Section.—It has been held that the words "the power of the High Court" to make rules concerning "advocates, vakils and attorneys" in this Section are not limited to the power of the High Court under Clauses 9 and 10 of the Letters Patent to make rules for the admission of advocates, vakils and attorneys and to their professional conduct, and that they also include the power of the High Court under the Government of India Act, 1915, to make rules regulating the practice of the Court.<sup>1</sup>

Provisions not applicable to High Court in original civil jurisdiction.

120. [S. 638.] (1) The following provisions shall not apply to the High Court in the exercise of its original civil jurisdiction, namely, sections 16, 17 and 20.

[1877, S. 638. As to rules, see O. 49 R. 3.]

Synopsis

1. Amendments made after 1908.
2. Scope of the Section.
3. Original civil jurisdiction.

1. Amendments made after 1908. — Originally this Section had another sub-section which corresponded to Section 639 of the old Code. It ran as follows:—

"(2) Nothing in this Code shall extend or apply to any Judge of the High Court in the exercise of jurisdiction as an Insolvent Court."

That sub-section was repealed by the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act, III of 1909, Section 127 and Schedule III thereof.

2. Scope of the Section. — This Section declares that Sections 16, 17 and 20 of the Code shall not apply to the Chartered High Courts in the exercise of their original civil jurisdiction. The exercise of such jurisdiction is regulated by Clause 12 of the Letters Patent. Thus, where one only of several defendants resides within jurisdiction, Section 20 will enable a suit to be brought against all the defendants after obtaining leave to sue them. But as this Section does not apply to the High Court and as the Letters Patent does not confer jurisdiction on the High Court in such cases, no suit can be brought in the High Court against all the defendants.<sup>1</sup> It has been held by the Rangoon High Court<sup>2</sup> that although Sections 15 and 21 of the Code are not expressly mentioned in this Section, they do not apply to a Chartered High Court in the exercise of its original civil jurisdiction.

1. ('28) AIR 1928 Mad 472 (473).

As to rules not applicable to Chartered High Courts, see O. 49 R. 3.

3. Original civil jurisdiction. — The Charters divide the civil jurisdiction conferred on the High Courts into four classes — ordinary original, extraordinary original, appellate, and those special matters which are the subject of special provisions. The expression "ordinary jurisdiction" embraces all such as is exercised in the ordinary course of law and without any special step being necessary to assume it. It is opposed to "extraordinary jurisdiction" which the Court may assume at its discretion upon special occasions and by special orders.<sup>1</sup>

RULES

Section 121

121. [New.] The rules in the First Schedule shall have effect as if enacted in the body of this Code until annulled or altered in accordance with the provisions of this Part.

Effect of rules in First Schedule.

1. Rules. — The re-arrangement of the Code into the "body of the Code" and "Rules," is for the purpose of giving a much needed elasticity to judicial procedure, and to enable minor defects to be remedied, as they arise, without resort to the Legislature.<sup>1</sup> But, except for the fact that the rules in the First Schedule can be amended, annulled or added to by the High Courts, such rules have the same force as if enacted in the body of the Code and it is incorrect to say that they are not so imperative as the Sections in the body of the Code.<sup>2</sup>

The whole of this Part is new except Sections 129, 130 and 131 which correspond to Section 652 of the old Code.

The rules passed in accordance with the procedure in this Part, are not on the same footing as the circulars in the Manual of Civil Circulars issued by the High Court. Unless the latter is passed under some enactment which gives it the force of law, it would not have the force of law.<sup>3</sup>

See Section 124 for annulment and alteration of rules.

- (i) The words which originally occurred in the Section in the place of the words "constituted by His Majesty by Letters Patent" were "established under the Indian High Courts Act, 1861." By S. 2 of the Amending Act XIII of 1916, the words "or the Government of India Act, 1915" were added after the words "established under the Indian High Courts Act, 1861," so that the Section as amended applied to High Courts established under the Indian High Courts Act, 1861 or the Government of India Act, 1915. The words "constituted by His Majesty by Letters Patent" were substituted by the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937, for the words "established by the Indian High Courts Act, 1861 or the Government of India Act, 1915."
- (ii) The Section originally contained the words "Chief Courts of the Punjab and Lower Burmah"; these were substituted by the words "Chief Court of Lower Burmah" by Section 2 of Act XVIII of 1919. The words "and the Chief Court of Lower Burmah" were subsequently repealed by Section 3 of the Amending Act XI of 1923.
- (iii) The words "and the Chief Court of Oudh" were inserted by Act XXXII of 1925 and the words "Courts of Oudh and Sind" are to be substituted for the words "Court of Oudh" by the Sind Courts (Supplementary) Act XXXIV of 1926 Section 2, Schedule thereof, when the Act comes into operation.

2. Scope and object of the Section. — Under the former Code also, the High Courts enjoyed certain rule-making powers in regard to procedure; but they had no power to alter the provisions of the Code, however urgent such alteration might be in view of peculiar local conditions. This defect, as has been seen in Note 1 to Section 121, is remedied under the present Code, by dividing the Code into Sections and rules and by empowering the High Courts to adapt the rules to local conditions. Under this power the High Courts referred to in this Section can add to, annul or alter the Rules in the First Schedule. The Rules so made have the force of law.<sup>1</sup> But in making them the formalities prescribed by the Code should be complied with.<sup>2</sup> See Notes to Sections 126 and 128. Where a new Rule, viz., Rule 122 in Order 21 inconsistent with Rule 43 of the same Order was introduced by the Allahabad High Court,<sup>3</sup> it was held that the former Rule prevailed.

3. Extent of High Court's power to make rules. — As will be seen in Note 1 to Section 128 infra, the rules framed by the High Court under this Part, though they may annul, alter or add to the Rules in the First Schedule, should not be inconsistent with the provisions in the body of this Code. Nor can the High Court make rules conflicting with the provisions of any other enactment for the time being in force. Thus, the rules made under this Section should not be inconsistent with the provisions of the Letters Patent.<sup>1</sup> Similarly, they cannot vary the period of limitation fixed by the Limitation Act for any proceeding.<sup>2</sup> Thus, a rule requiring a copy of the trial Court's judgment to be filed along with the memorandum of second appeal will not entitle the appellant to exclude the time requisite for obtaining such judgment.<sup>3</sup> Nor will a rule dispensing with the necessity of filing a copy of judgment appealed from along with the memorandum of appeal disentitle the appellant from excluding the period requisite for obtaining a copy of the judgment.<sup>4</sup> But a rule extending the provisions of Section 5 of the Limitation Act to applications under Order 9 Rule 9<sup>5</sup> or Rule 13<sup>6</sup> of the Code is not ultra vires. The reason is that Section 5 of the Limitation Act expressly applies to any application to which it may be made applicable by any enactment or rule for the time being in force.

The rule-making power of the High Courts is confined to the regulation of procedure.<sup>7</sup> It was held by a Full Bench of the Rangoon High Court that proviso (b) to O. 21 R. 90 introduced by the Rangoon High Court, as such proviso stood before 27th January 1937, took away an existing right and as such was ultra vires.<sup>8</sup>

4. High Courts to which the Section applies. — The Section as it stood prior to its amendment by the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order of 1937, applied to High Courts established under the Indian High Courts Act, 1861, or the Government of India Act, 1915, and the Chief Court of Oudh.<sup>1</sup> A High Court within the meaning of the Government of India Act, 1915, is a High Court established in British India by Letters Patent. (See Government of India Act, 1915, Section 10.) The Patna High Court being such a Court, Section 122 applies to it.<sup>2</sup> In an earlier decision of the Patna High Court it was however held that the Section does not apply to the Patna High Court.<sup>3</sup> The reason given was that the Patna High Court was not a High Court established under the Indian High Courts Act, 1861. Apparently their Lordships' judgment is based on the Section as it stood prior to the amendment by Act XIII of 1916. At that time, the Section did not contain the expression "or the Government of India Act, 1915." It was inserted in the Section by the Amending Act XIII of 1916. Their Lordships' attention does not seem to have been drawn to this amendment. Since the amendment of the Section by the Adaptation of Indian Laws Order of 1937, the Section clearly applies to all High Courts constituted by His Majesty by Letters Patent.

- (e) in the towns of Calcutta, Madras and Bombay, an attorney.

Provided that, if the Chief Justice or Chief Judge elects to be himself a member of a Committee, the number of other Judges appointed to be members shall be two, and the Chief Justice or Chief Judge shall be the President of the Committee.

(4) Each member of any such Committee shall hold office for such period as may be prescribed by the Chief Justice or Chief Judge in this behalf; and whenever any member retires, resigns, dies or ceases to reside in the province in which the Committee was constituted, or becomes incapable of acting as a member of the Committee, the said Chief Justice or Chief Judge may appoint another person to be a member in his stead.

1. Amendments after 1908. —

- (a) By the Amending Act XIII of 1916, the words "the town which is the usual place of sitting of each of the High Courts and Chief Courts referred to in section 122," were substituted for the words "each of the towns of Calcutta, Madras, Bombay, Allahabad, Lahore and Rangoon." See Notes to Section 124.

Note 1

- (b) By the Repealing and Amending Act XVIII of 1919, the words "of the Chief Court" were substituted for the words "Chief Courts." The said words, namely, "of the Chief Court" were, however, repealed by Act XI of 1923. By Act XX of 1925, the words "and of the Chief Court" were again inserted in the Section after the words "High Courts." By Act XXXIV of 1926, the words "Chief Courts" have again been substituted for the words "of the Chief Court."
- (c) In sub-section (2) (a) after the words "District Judge or" the words "in the Punjab or Burma" originally occurred. They were substituted by Act XVIII of 1919 by the words "in Burma." These latter words were also repealed by Act XI of 1923.

to the High Court established at the town at which it is constituted on any proposal to annul, alter or add to the rules in the First Schedule or to make new rules, and before making any rules under section 122 the High Court shall take such report into consideration.

1. Report of the Rule Committee. — The Rule Committee referred to in the Section is the Rule Committee constituted under Section 123.<sup>1</sup> This Section shows that a rule can be passed under Section 122 only after the opinion of the Rule Committee is taken into consideration. It has been held by the Patna High Court that Section 123 as it originally stood did not apply to the Patna High Court<sup>2</sup> and that a rule framed by it without reference to a Rule Committee, at a time when there was no Rule Committee in existence, is not ultra vires.<sup>3</sup> A contrary view has, however, been taken in a later case of the same High Court.<sup>4</sup> See Note 4 to Section 122.

Synopsis

1. Scope of the Section.

2. Power of High Court to extend within its jurisdiction rules of other High Courts.

1. Scope of the Section. — The rules under this Section should not be inconsistent with the provisions in the body of the Code.<sup>1</sup> Thus, a rule requiring a party to file along with his application duly filled up printed forms for processes upon the opposite party is not inconsistent with the body of the Code and is not ultra vires.<sup>2</sup>

The words "as, in the case of . . . the Local Government, may determine" were substituted for the words "as the Governor-General in Council may determine," by Section 2 and Schedule I of the Devolution Act (XXXVIII of 1920).

2. Power of High Court to extend within its jurisdiction rules of other High Courts. — A rule by a High Court extending within the local limits of its jurisdiction any rules which have been made by any other High Court will be valid only if it has been previously published. Where the rule extending the rules of another High Court is duly published, it is not necessary that the extended rules themselves should be published.<sup>1</sup>

a. Substituted by the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937, for the original Section.

Synopsis

1. Amendments after 1908.

2. Rules subject to approval.

1. Amendments after 1908. —

By the Amending Act No. XIII of 1916, the following amendments were made in the Section as it originally stood : —

- (a) The words "or the Government of India Act 1915" were inserted.
- (b) For the words and figure "Section 15 of that Act" the words and figure "the proviso to Section 107 of the latter Act" were substituted.
- (c) For the word "sanction" the word "approval" was substituted.

The whole Section has been altered as above by the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937.

2. Rules subject to approval. — Under the proviso to Section 107 of the Government of India Act, 1915, the rules and forms prescribed by the High Court require the previous approval, in the case of the High Court of Calcutta, of the Governor-General in Council, and in other cases, of the Provincial Government. The same approval is made necessary for rules under the provisions in this part of the Code. Neither this Section nor Section 107 of the Government of India Act applies to rules framed by the High Court for the conduct of its own business. Such rule, therefore, need not be sanctioned as required by the Section.<sup>1</sup>

127. [New.] Rules so made and approved shall be published in the 'Official Gazette . . . , and shall from the date of publication or from such other date as may be specified have the same force and effect, within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the High Court which made them, as if they had been contained in the First Schedule.

a. Substituted by the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937, Para. 4 (1) for "Gazette of India or in the Local Official Gazette, as the case may be." As under Para. 4 (1) the words 'Official Gazette' have to be substituted for "Gazette of India" and also for "Local Official Gazette," the substitution will strictly read "Official Gazette or in the Official Gazette, as the case may be." But the last words are omitted as being redundant.

1. Amendments after 1908.— By Act XXIV of 1917, the word "approved" was substituted for the word "sanctioned" which occurred in the Section as it originally stood.

Section 128

128. [New.] (1) Such rules shall be not inconsistent with the provisions in the body of this Code, but, subject thereto, may provide for any matters relating to the procedure of Civil Courts.

(2) In particular, and without prejudice to the generality of the powers conferred by sub-section (1) such rules may provide for all or any of the following matters, namely:—

- (a) the service of summonses, notices and other processes by post or in any other manner either generally or in any specified areas, and the proof of such service;
- (b) the maintenance and custody, while under attachment, of live-stock and other moveable property, the fees payable for such maintenance and custody, the sale of such live-stock and property, and the proceeds of such sale;
- (c) procedure in suits by way of counter-claim, and the valuation of such suits for the purposes of jurisdiction;

- (d) procedure in garnishee and charging orders either in addition to, or in substitution for, the attachment and sale of debts;
- (e) procedure where the defendant claims to be entitled to contribution or indemnity over against any person whether a party to the suit or not;
- (f) summary procedure —
  - (i) in suits in which the plaintiff seeks only to recover a debt or liquidated demand in money payable by the defendant, with or without interest, arising —
    - on a contract express or implied; or
    - on an enactment where the sum sought to be recovered is a fixed sum of money or in the nature of a debt other than a penalty; or
    - on a guarantee, where the claim against the principal is in respect of a debt or a liquidated demand only; or
    - on a trust; or
  - (ii) in suits for the recovery of immoveable property, with or without a claim for rent or mesne profits, by a landlord against a tenant whose term has expired or has been duly determined by notice to quit, or has become liable to forfeiture for non-payment of rent, or against persons claiming under such tenant;
- (g) procedure by way of originating summons;
- (h) consolidation of suits, appeals and other proceedings;
- (i) delegation to any Registrar, Prothonotary or master or other official of the Court of any judicial, quasi-judicial and non-judicial duties; and
- (j) all forms, registers, books, entries and accounts which may be necessary or desirable for the transaction of the business of Civil Courts.

Section 128
Notes 1-4

1. Scope of the Section. — This Section enacts that the rules framed under the provisions of this Part may provide for any matter relating to the procedure of Civil Courts and it indicates the sort of rules that may be framed. A rule extending the provisions of Section 5 of the Limitation Act to applications under O. 9 R. 13 of the Code is a matter of procedure and is not ultra vires.<sup>1</sup> But a new rule in lieu of O. 34 R. 2, limiting the right of the mortgagee to recover interest at the mortgage rate for the whole period allowed for redemption is one dealing with substantive rights and is not a rule of procedure. Such a rule will be ultra vires.<sup>2</sup>

A rule framed under the provisions of this part must not be inconsistent with the provisions in the body of the Code.<sup>3</sup> The words "consistent with the body of the Code" mean "consistent with the Sections of the Code" and not with the Rules in the First Schedule which can be altered by the High Court.<sup>4</sup>

This Section relates only to rules to be made under the Code by the High Courts with the advice of the Rule Committee constituted under Section 123. It does not affect the validity of rules framed under the previous Code.<sup>5</sup>

2. Defendant claiming indemnity against third party — Clause (e). — Under this clause rules may be framed relating to procedure when the defendant claims to be entitled to contribution or indemnity against any person whether a party to the suit or not. In England, rules have been framed restricting third party procedure to the cases referred to in Section 128 (2) (e), namely to cases of contribution and indemnity.<sup>1</sup>

3. Suit for debts — Summary procedure — Clause (f). — A suit on a negotiable instrument provided for under Order 37 of the Code also falls under the category of suits of the nature referred to in this clause.<sup>1</sup> The period of limitation for a suit under the summary procedure under this clause is six months from the date when the debt or liquidated demand becomes payable or the property becomes recoverable.<sup>2</sup> Similarly, the period of limitation for an application for leave to defend such a suit is 10 days from the date when the summons is served.<sup>3</sup>

See also the undermentioned case.<sup>4</sup>

4. Originating summons — Clause (j). — An originating summons means every summons other than a summons in a pending cause or matter.<sup>1</sup> Where the disputed facts are complex and involve a considerable amount of oral evidence, an originating summons is not the proper procedure to be taken.<sup>2</sup>

It is doubtful whether a rule under the old Code delegating judicial duties to the Registrar and which was, therefore, ultra vires under the old Code is validated by this Section.<sup>2</sup>

1. Amendments after 1908.—By the Amending Act XIII of 1916, the words and figures "or the Government of India Act, 1915," were inserted, after the words "established under the Indian High Courts Act, 1861" which originally occurred in the Section. The words "constituted by His Majesty by Letters Patent" have been substituted by the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order of 1937 for the words "established under the Indian High Courts Act, 1861 or the Government of India Act, 1915."

2. Scope of the Section. — Under this Section, a Chartered High Court may make rules to regulate its own procedure in the exercise of its original civil jurisdiction. Such rules need not be consistent with the provisions in the body of the Code but must be consistent with the Letters Patent, establishing the High Court.<sup>1</sup>

a. Substituted by the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937, for the original Section.

By the Amending Act XIII of 1916 the following changes were introduced in the Section :—

- (a) The words and figures "or the Government of India Act, 1915" were added after the words "established by the Indian High Courts Act, 1861," which originally occurred in the Section.
- (b) The Section as it stood originally, spoke of only the rules that might be made under Section 15 of the Indian High Courts Act of 1861. After the amendment of 1916, it mentioned rules that might be made by High Courts under Section 15 of the Indian High Courts Act of 1861 or under Section 107 of the Government of India Act, 1915.

By the Repealing and Amending Act XXIV of 1917 the word "approval" was substituted for the word "sanction."

The whole Section was replaced by the present Section by the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937.

MISCELLANEOUS

Section 132

Exemption of certain women from personal appearance.

132. [S. 640.] (1) Women who, according to the customs and manners of the country, ought not to be compelled to appear in public shall be exempt from personal appearance in Court.

(2) Nothing herein contained shall be deemed to exempt such women from arrest in execution of civil process in any case in which the arrest of women is not prohibited by this Code.

[1877, S. 640; 1859, S. 21. See O. 26 R. 1.]

Synopsis

1. Customs and manners of the country.
2. "Shall be exempt from personal appearance in Court."
3. Sub-section (2) — Exemption of women from arrest in execution.

1. Customs and manners of the country. — This Section applies to women, who according to the customs and manners of the country, ought not to be compelled to appear in public, e. g., pardanashin ladies.<sup>1</sup> The custom set up must not be one of a varying or uncertain character.<sup>2</sup> The right conferred by the Section does not depend on the rank or station in life of a lady,<sup>3</sup> and cannot be refused on the ground that the lady has appeared in public before<sup>4</sup> or a charge of immorality is made against her.<sup>5</sup> Even though a lady may have given up the use of the pardah she is entitled to the benefit of the Section, if, having regard to her social position and the feelings of her class, the Court is satisfied that she should not be compelled to appear in the witness-box.<sup>6</sup> But a lady may completely alter her mode of life and cease to be included in the statutory description of a woman "who, according to the customs and manners of the country, ought not to be compelled to appear in public." When this transformation has taken place, she can no longer claim, as of right, the statutory exemption formulated in Section 132.<sup>7</sup>

2. "Shall be exempt from personal appearance in Court." — The exemption from personal appearance under this Section is a right which no Court has power to refuse,<sup>1</sup> and applies to parties as well as witnesses.<sup>2</sup> According to the Calcutta High Court the exemption is only in respect of appearance and not attendance in Court. Women can be compelled to come to Court, so long as they do not become visible to the public gaze.<sup>3</sup> The High Court of Allahabad has, however, held that the words "personal appearance" used in the Section mean "personal attendance" and that an exempted person cannot be compelled to attend Court.<sup>4</sup> The Sind Judicial Commissioner's Court has also taken the same view.<sup>5</sup> If a commission is issued for the examination of a woman entitled to the benefit of this Section, she cannot decline to be examined at any place other than of her own choice.<sup>6</sup>

As to exemption from personal appearance in Court in criminal cases, see Criminal Procedure Code, Section 503 and the undermentioned cases.<sup>7</sup> See Sections 20 and 32 (ii) of the C. P. Land Revenue Act (II of 1917) and Section 53 (2) of the Bombay Salt Act (II of 1890) for the application of this Section and Section 133 to proceedings under the said Acts.

3. Sub-section (2). — Exemption of women from arrest in execution. — The Code exempts women from arrest in execution of money decrees (see Section 56) and decrees for restitution of conjugal rights (see O. 21 R. 32).

133. [ S. 641. ] (1) The Provincial Government may, by notification in the Official Gazette, exempt from personal appearance in Court any person whose rank, in the opinion of such Government, entitles him to the privilege of exemption.

(2) The names and residences of the persons so exempted shall, from time to time, be forwarded to the High Court by the Provincial Government and a list of such persons shall be kept in such Court, and a list of such persons as reside within the local limits of the jurisdiction of each Court subordinate to the High Court shall be kept in such subordinate Court.

Synopsis

1. Legislative changes.
2. Scope of the Section.

1. Legislative changes. — The words "and may, by like notification, withdraw such privilege" which occurred in the corresponding Section 641 of the former Code have been omitted in the present Section.

2. Scope of the Section. — No person, of whatever position and respectability he may be, is entitled to exemption from personal appearance under this Section in the absence of a notification by the Government, even though it may be derogatory to his dignity to attend personally in Court as a witness.<sup>1</sup> But where a notification under this Section exists, the exemption is absolute and not even the Court suo motu can compel personal attendance.<sup>2</sup> See also Notes under Order 26 Rule 1.

134. [New.] The provisions of sections 55, 57 and 59 shall apply, so far as may be, to all persons arrested under this Code.

Arrest other than in execution of decree.

1. Scope of the Section. — Sections 55, 57 and 59 refer in terms to the arrest of a judgment-debtor, i. e., to arrest in execution of a decree. The present Section makes the provisions of those Sections applicable to all arrests under the Code.

Section 185

135. [S. 642 and compare Ss. 572 and 573.] (1) No Judge, Magistrate or other judicial officer shall be liable to arrest under civil process<sup>6</sup> while going to, presiding in, or returning from, his Court.

Exemption from arrest under civil process.

(2) Where any matter is pending before a tribunal<sup>6</sup> having jurisdiction therein, or believing in good faith that it has such jurisdiction, the parties<sup>7</sup> thereto, their pleaders, mukhtars, revenue-agents and recognized agents, and their witnesses acting in obedience to a summons, shall be exempt from arrest under civil process<sup>8</sup>

Ground of exemption from arrest. See Note 2.

Duration of privilege of exemption from arrest. See Note 4.

1. Legislative changes. — The following changes should be noted :

- (a) The words "and except as provided in section 337 A, sub-section (5) and sections 256 and 643" which occurred in the beginning of sub-section (2) of the corresponding Section 642 of the Code of 1882 have been omitted.
- (b) The words "other than process issued by such tribunal for contempt of Court" in sub-section (2) are now. See Note 3.
- (c) Sub-section (3) is new.

2. Scope and object of Section. — The exemption conferred by this Section is not for the personal benefit of the individual, but for the furthering of public interest and the better administration of justice.<sup>1</sup>

The privilege is really that of the Court and the principle on which it is founded is that freedom from the fear of arrest encourages willing attendance and thus tends to the advancement of justice.<sup>2</sup>

In cases in which this Section does not, in terms apply, the English law should be followed. The English law in this respect is approximately the same as the law under the Section.<sup>3</sup>

3. No exemption in case of process for contempt of Court. — It was held by the Calcutta High Court that the exemption created does not apply in the case of process issued for contempt of Court.<sup>1</sup> The Section has been amended in the present Code so as to give effect to that ruling.

4. "While going to or attending such tribunal and while returning from such tribunal." — The parties to a suit and the other persons referred to in the second sub-section are privileged eundo, morando et redeundo, i. e., in going to, attending and returning from such tribunal<sup>1</sup> and the exemption continues during such period as is reasonably and bona fide occupied in these acts.<sup>2</sup> A wide construction cannot be placed upon sub-section 2.<sup>3</sup> It is not the intention of the Legislature that a person holding a warrant of arrest on a Civil Court process should be able to pounce upon a person the moment the Court rises for the day or that the slightest deviation for the purpose of business or refreshment robs a party of the protection afforded by the sub-section. But where a person has been lingering in the Court compound for one hour after the Court finished its work and the place where he was arrested was not on the way between the Court and his house, he cannot be said to be attending a Court so as to be exempt from arrest.<sup>4</sup> Where a native of Patna came to Madras to be present at the trial of a suit in which he was the plaintiff, but on the day of hearing the suit was adjourned for seven weeks and he was staying in Madras waiting for the next adjourned hearing, it was held by the Madras High Court that he was within the principle of privilege as a suitor while so staying in Madras, and could not be arrested under a civil process.<sup>5</sup> The Allahabad High Court has dissented from this view and has held<sup>6</sup> that it was too great an extension of the scope of the privilege. In that case A, resident of Bombay, went to Benares to attend a case there and put up at the dak bungalow there. After the Court work was finished he returned to the dak bungalow and thence proceeded to the railway station and took train to Allahabad. While seated in the train he was arrested. It was held that the privilege ceased when A returned to the dak bungalow, and that in any view he could not be deemed to be returning from the Court as he had taken train to Allahabad which was not his home. See also the undermentioned cases.<sup>7</sup>

A person claiming exemption from arrest under this Section must return straight from the Court to his home. If he adopts a circuitous route in order to attend some other business on the way he is not exempt from arrest.<sup>8</sup> This does not mean that a deviation of a few yards<sup>9</sup> or the selection of a little longer but more convenient route<sup>10</sup> or even getting a petition prepared on the way when it does not cause unreasonable delay<sup>11</sup> necessarily disentitles a person to the protection extended by this Section.

Where a party has a clear interest in being present at a trial it is enough to bring him within the protection of this Section. It is immaterial that he is precluded from being heard at the trial, as, for instance, in the case of a defendant in a suit under Order 37, who has not obtained leave to defend the suit.<sup>12</sup>

5. Arrest of person while in custody or while returning home on release from custody. — Where a judgment-debtor is arrested and brought before the Court in execution of a decree and is in the custody of the Court's officers, he cannot be said to be "attending" the Court, as his presence in Court is not voluntary. Hence, he can be arrested in execution of another decree under such circumstances.<sup>1</sup> Where a judgment-debtor is released from jail on the ground of his arrest being illegal and is proceeding home on such release, he cannot be said to be returning from Court. Hence, in such circumstances, he is not exempt from arrest under this Section.<sup>2</sup>

6. "Tribunal," meaning of. — An arbitrator appointed by the High Court to take a reference in a suit pending before it is a "tribunal" within the meaning of Section 135. Hence a defendant in the suit while attending before such arbitrator is exempt from arrest under this Section.<sup>1</sup>

An Income-tax Officer is also a tribunal within the meaning of this Section and a person on his way to appear before him in pursuance of a notice under Section 23 of the Income-tax Act is exempt from arrest under this Section.<sup>2</sup>

The word "tribunal" in this Section will include a foreign Court.<sup>3</sup>

7. Parties. — The wording of the Section is wide enough to include not only civil litigants but also parties to criminal cases. Thus, a person coming to appear as an accused before a Criminal Court is entitled to exemption from arrest under this Section.<sup>1</sup>

8. Civil process. — This section only exempts persons from liability to arrest under civil process. Hence, it does not preclude the arrest of a person under process issued by a Criminal Court.<sup>1</sup>

In the Code of 1877, instead of the words "under civil process" the words "under the Code" were used. Hence, it was held that the exemption conferred by this Section did not apply to process not issued under the Code, as, for instance, process issued by the Small Cause Court<sup>2</sup> or by a Rent Court under the Rent Act.<sup>3</sup> These decisions require reconsideration in view of the above change in the language of the Section. In this connexion it may be pointed out that in the undermentioned case<sup>4</sup> the principle of Section 135 was held applicable to arrest under the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act.

9. Remedies of exempted person on being illegally arrested. — A person who is arrested in contravention of this Section has various remedies:

- (1) He can apply for his release to the Court which ordered his arrest<sup>1</sup> or to the High Court under S. 491 (1) (b) of the Criminal Procedure Code.<sup>2</sup>
- (2) On being released from such illegal arrest, he is entitled to a refund of the sum paid by him to obtain his release.<sup>3</sup>
- (3) He cannot, however, maintain a suit for damages for illegal arrest in the absence of proof of malice and want of reasonable and probable cause.<sup>4</sup>
- (4) He can prosecute the person causing the arrest for an offence under Section 342 of the Indian Penal Code.<sup>5</sup>

b. Substituted by ibid for "Chamber or Council."

c. Substituted by ibid for the original clause.

1. Scope. — This Section is new. It was inserted into the Code by Act XXIII of 1925. Its object is to confer on members of the Imperial and Provincial Legislatures immunity from arrest and imprisonment under civil process to the extent necessary to enable them to discharge their duties as members of such Legislatures.

136. [S. 648.] (1) Where an application is made that Section 136 any person shall be arrested or that any property shall be attached under any provision of this Code not relating to the execution of decrees, and such person resides or such property is situate outside the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court to which the application is made, the Court may, in its discretion, issue a warrant of arrest or make an order of attachment, and send to the District Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction such person or property resides or is situate a copy of the warrant or order, together with the probable amount of the costs of the arrest or attachment.

(2) The District Court shall, on receipt of such copy and amount, cause the arrest or attachment to be made by its own officers, or by a Court subordinate to itself, and shall inform the Court which issued or made such warrant or order of the arrest or attachment.

(3) The Court making an arrest under this section shall send the person arrested to the Court by which the warrant of arrest was issued, unless he shows cause to the satisfaction of the former Court why he should not be sent to the latter Court, or unless he furnishes sufficient security for his appearance before the latter Court or for satisfying any decree that may be passed against him by that Court, in either of which cases the Court making the arrest shall release him.

(4) Where a person to be arrested or moveable property to be attached under this section is within the local limits of the ordinary original civil jurisdiction of the High Court of Judicature

b. Substituted by ibid for "Bombay or Rangoon."

Synopsis

1. Legislative changes.
2. The arrest or attachment must be under any provision of the Code.
3. Such arrest or attachment to be otherwise than in execution of a decree.
4. Order of arrest for contempt of Court.

5. The person to be arrested or property to be attached must be outside the Court's jurisdiction.
6. Jurisdiction of District Court to which the warrant or order is sent.
7. Power of Court to order attachment before judgment of property situated outside its jurisdiction.

1. Legislative changes. —

This Section corresponds to Section 648 of the former Code. The chief alteration made is that the words "where an application is made" have been substituted in the place of the words "where any Court desires." As to the effect of this alteration, see Note 7.

Alterations prior to Code of 1908 :

The words in the Code of 1877, "outside the district within which the Court issuing the warrant of arrest or making the order of attachment is situate" were converted in the Code of 1882 into the words "outside the local limits of its jurisdiction." As to the effect of this alteration, see Note 5. It may be noted that there is no material change in this respect in the present Code.

2. The arrest or attachment must be under any provision of the Code.

— This Section in terms applies only to cases in which the arrest or attachment has been ordered under any provision of the Code. Hence it applies to an order for arrest under O. 39 R. 2 for disobedience of a temporary injunction.<sup>1</sup> As to order for arrest for contempt of Court, see Note 4.

3. Such arrest or attachment to be otherwise than in execution of a decree. — The Section expressly provides that the procedure laid down by it does not apply to arrest or attachment in execution of a decree. The procedure to be followed in such cases is laid down in Section 39, ante.

4. Order of arrest for contempt of Court. — An order for arrest for contempt of Court passed by a Judge on the original side of the High Court is not one passed under the Code, and Section 136 does not, therefore, apply to such cases.<sup>1</sup> Independent of that Section, a Judge on the original side of a High Court, has no power to order the arrest of a person in the moffusil for contempt of Court.<sup>2</sup> But the High Court on its Appellate Side can order such an arrest.

Notes 4-6

5. The person to be arrested or property to be attached must be outside the Court's jurisdiction.—Section 136 provides for the procedure to be followed in cases where the person to be arrested or the property to be attached is outside the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court to which the application for arrest or attachment is made. It has been held by the High Court of Calcutta that a person residing in the moffusil is outside the local limits of its jurisdiction in respect of an order under O. 39 R. 2 passed in the exercise of its original civil jurisdiction.<sup>1</sup> The High Court of Madras has left the question open whether, in respect of an order under O. 39 R. 2, passed in the exercise of its appellate jurisdiction, such person can be deemed to be residing "outside the local limits of its jurisdiction" within the meaning of this Section.<sup>2</sup> But it has held that even if Section 136 did not strictly apply to the case, it was competent to it in the exercise of its powers of supervision and control over the Courts in the moffusil, to adopt the procedure laid down in Section 136 and send the order for arrest to the District Court within whose jurisdiction the person to be arrested resided.<sup>3</sup>

Under this Section a Court may issue a warrant of arrest even against a person in another province.<sup>4</sup>

The corresponding Section 648 in the Code of 1877 contained the words "outside the district within which the Court issuing the warrant of arrest or making the order of attachment is situate." Hence, it was held that that Section did not apply to cases in which the person to be arrested or property to be attached was within the district in which the Court ordering the attachment or arrest was situated although outside its local jurisdiction.<sup>5</sup> In view of the change in the language of the present Section, those decisions are only of academic importance.

6. Jurisdiction of District Court to which the warrant or order is sent.

—This Section provides that the order for arrest or attachment must be sent to the District Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the person to be arrested resides or the property to be attached is situated.<sup>1</sup> In the case of arrest, bare residence is enough for the purpose of this Section. Thus, where an officer proceeding from Burma to England on leave resides for a few days in Madras on his way, that is enough to give jurisdiction to the Court to arrest him under Section 136.<sup>2</sup>

Note 7

7. Power of Court to order attachment before judgment of property situated outside its jurisdiction. — Under the former Code there was a conflict of decisions as to whether a Court had the power to order the attachment before judgment of property outside its jurisdiction. On the one hand it was held that under Sections 483 and 484 (corresponding to the present O. 38 R. 5) a Court could not attach before judgment property outside its jurisdiction. It was further held that the old Section 648 (corresponding to Section 136) did not enlarge the Court's power in this respect and that that Section applied only where the Court had power to order such attachment under any other provision of the Code.<sup>1</sup> On the other hand, it was held that under Section 648 a Court did have the power to order the attachment before judgment of property situated outside its local jurisdiction.<sup>2</sup> Under the present Code, the words in the old Sections 483 and 484 which imposed the restrictions as to the property being within the Court's jurisdiction have been omitted in O. 38 R. 5 and the words "where any Court desires" in Section 648 have been replaced in the present Section by the words "where an application is made." Hence, there is no room for doubt under the present Code that Section 136 read with O. 38 R. 5 (1) (a) empowers a Court to order the attachment before judgment of property situated outside its jurisdiction.<sup>3</sup>

137. [S. 645 and compare Ss. 49, 200, 201.] (1) The language which, on the commencement of this Code, is the language of any Court subordinate to a High Court shall continue to be the language of such subordinate Court until the **Provincial Government* otherwise directs.

(2) The **Provincial Government* may declare what shall be the language of any such Court and in what character applications to and proceedings in such Courts shall be written.

(3) Where this Code requires or allows anything other than the recording of evidence to be done in writing in any such Court, such writing may be in English; but if any party or his pleader is unacquainted with English a translation into the language of the Court shall, at his request, be supplied to him; and the Court shall make such order as it thinks fit in respect of the payment of the costs of such translation.

1. Sub-section (3). — This Section corresponds to Section 645 of the former Code. Sub-section (3) is new. It deals with writings other than the record of evidence. Hence pleadings and applications may be in English subject to a translation being supplied to the other side where necessary. Compare Section 138 and O. 18 R. 9.

- (1). The words "herein prescribed" have been changed into "provided in this Code in regard to suits."
- (2). The words "other than suits and appeals" have been omitted.

2. To what proceedings the Section applies. — The corresponding Section of the former Code (Section 647) as it originally stood ran as follows :

"The procedure herein prescribed shall be followed, so far as it can be made applicable, in all proceedings in any Court of civil jurisdiction other than suits or appeals."

In interpreting this Section there arose a conflict of views as to whether proceedings in execution were "proceedings other than suits or appeals" to which this Section could be applied.<sup>1</sup> In order to set this conflict at rest the Legislature, by Act VI of 1892, added an Explanation to the Section as follows :

"Explanation. — This Section does not apply to applications for the execution of decrees which are proceedings in suits."

In the year 1894, however, the Privy Council had occasion to deal with the question in a case<sup>2</sup> which arose before the explanation was added to the Section and their Lordships observed as follows :

"Their Lordships think that the proceedings spoken of in Section 647 include original matters in the nature of suits such as proceedings in probates, guardianships and so forth and do not include executions . . . . . Their Lordships' attention has been called to the recent Act VI of 1892 which would appear to have been passed in order to avoid the disturbance of practice caused by the Allahabad rulings . . . . . their Lordships have thought it right to state their opinion that the Act of 1892 does nothing more than express the true meaning of the Civil Procedure Code."

Section 141 Note 2

The explanation and the words "other than suits and appeals" were thus rendered superfluous and unnecessary and have accordingly been omitted from the present Section. As a result it would therefore seem to be clear that Section 141 does not apply to any proceedings in execution<sup>3</sup> but only to proceedings which are original matters in the nature of suits. There has however been a conflict of opinion in respect of the following points, due to different interpretations of the said Privy Council decision:

- (1) Whether proceedings under Order 21 Rules 89, 90, 91, 97 and 100 are proceedings in execution or original matters in the nature of suits?
- (2) Whether an application to restore a suit dismissed for default is an original matter in the nature of a suit?
- (3) Whether Section 141 applies only to original matters or to all matters whether original or not, provided they are not execution proceedings?

On the first point all the Courts except the High Court of Patna and the Chief Court of Oudh have held that such proceedings are proceedings in execution, and that Section 141 cannot be applied thereto.<sup>4</sup> A Full Bench decision of the Patna High Court<sup>5</sup> has held that a proceeding under O. 21 R. 90 is one in execution. But in the undermentioned decisions of the same High Court<sup>6</sup> it has been held, distinguishing the Full Bench case, that a proceeding under O. 21 R. 100 is an original matter in the nature of suits to which Section 141 can be applied. The Oudh Chief Court has held that a proceeding under O. 21 R. 90 is an original matter and that Section 141 applies thereto.<sup>7</sup>

On the second point the High Courts of Madras<sup>8</sup> and Lahore,<sup>9</sup> the Chief Court of Oudh<sup>10</sup> and the Judicial Commissioner's Court at Nagpur<sup>11</sup> hold that such a proceeding is an original matter and that therefore an application under O. 9 R. 9, will lie to restore a petition under O. 9 R. 9, which is itself dismissed for default. The Allahabad,<sup>12</sup> Calcutta<sup>13</sup> and Patna<sup>14</sup> High Courts are inclined to the view that such a proceeding is not an original proceeding to which Section 141 applies. ## Section 141 Note 2

Section 141 Note 2

On the third question it has been held in the undermentioned cases<sup>15</sup> that Section 141 applies to all matters not being proceedings in execution. They accordingly hold that where an application to restore a suit dismissed for default is itself dismissed for default, an application will lie under O. 9 R. 9 to restore the application, by virtue of Section 141, independent of the question whether it is an original matter or not. The Bombay<sup>16</sup> and the Calcutta<sup>17</sup> High Courts have, on the other hand, held that Section 141 must be taken to apply only to original matters and that an application such as that mentioned above does not lie.

It is submitted with respect that neither the view that Section 141 applies to all matters original or otherwise, except execution proceedings, nor the view that applications under O. 9 R. 9 or O. 21 Rr. 90, 97 or 100 are original matters, is correct. The object of their Lordships of the Privy Council in observing that the "proceedings" spoken of in Section 141 includes original matters in the nature of suits such as proceedings in probate, guardianships and so forth is clearly to show that the "original matter" means matters which originate in themselves and not those which spring up from a suit or from some other proceeding or arise in connexion therewith.<sup>18</sup>

The following have been held to be the original matters of the nature contemplated by the Section —

(1) Probate cases.<sup>19</sup>

(2) Proceedings under the Guardians and Wards Act, 1890.<sup>20</sup>

The following are not proceedings of the kind contemplated by the Section —

- (1) Application for review of order dismissing execution application.<sup>37</sup>
 (2) Proceedings under Order 21 Rule 58.<sup>38</sup>

But independent of this Section some of the provisions of the Code may apply directly and of their own force to matters which do not come within the meaning of the word "proceedings" as defined by the Privy Council.<sup>39</sup> Thus, a proceeding in execution can be reviewed under O. 47 R. 1 by force of its own language and not by virtue of Section 141.<sup>40</sup>

In the undermentioned decision<sup>41</sup> the Sind Judicial Commissioner's Court expressed the view that the provisions of Order 7 apply, by reason of this Section, to memoranda of appeals and that an appeal can be rejected under O. 7 R. 11. It is submitted that the view is not correct as an appeal is not an original proceeding. But, O. 7 R. 11 will apply to appeals by reason of the provisions of Section 107 ante. (See Notes to Section 107.)

3. Appeals in execution matters.—As Section 141 does not apply to execution proceeding but only to original matters in the nature of suits, it is conceived that it does not apply to appeals from orders in execution.<sup>1</sup> But independently of Section 141, some of the provisions of the Code in regard to appeals may apply directly to appeals from orders in execution. Thus, where an order in execution is appealed from as a decree under Section 47, the Appellate Court may require the appellant to give security for costs under O. 41 R. 10.<sup>2</sup> Similarly, the Appellate Court can stay execution of the decree under Section 47 independently of Section 141 and of O. 41 R. 5.<sup>3</sup>

4. Proceedings for restitution. — Section 141 does not make Section 144 of the Code applicable to execution proceedings.<sup>1</sup> As to the inherent powers of the Court to order restitution in such cases, see Section 144, Note 34.

5. Letters Patent Appeal. — Letters Patent Appeals are not original proceedings of the kind contemplated by Section 141.<sup>1</sup> But by virtue of Section 117 of the Code, the provisions of the Code are applicable to High Courts except as provided in Part IX or Part X or in Rules. Hence the provisions of the Code may be followed in Letters Patent Appeals.<sup>2</sup>

6. "Court of civil jurisdiction." — The proceedings to which Section 141 applies are proceedings in a Court of civil jurisdiction. A proceeding under the Lunacy Act, 1912, is a "proceeding in a Court of civil jurisdiction." Consequently, the provisions of the Code as to verification of pleadings apply to such a proceeding.<sup>1</sup> Disciplinary proceedings under the Legal Practitioners' Act are, according to the High Courts of Madras<sup>2</sup> and Calcutta,<sup>3</sup> "proceedings in a Court of civil jurisdiction." The High Court of Patna, on the other hand, has held that they are not.<sup>4</sup> Proceedings under Section 195 of the Criminal Procedure Code for sanction to prosecute are not civil proceedings although they may be before the Judge of a Civil Court.<sup>5</sup> A Revenue Court is a Court of civil jurisdiction.<sup>6</sup>

Order 43 Rule 1 (c) which provides for an appeal against an order refusing to restore a suit dismissed for default cannot be applied by analogy to cases in which some other proceeding is dismissed for default. Thus there is no right of arbitration,<sup>4</sup> a right to a review<sup>5</sup> or a right to proceed by way of execution against a surety who is not a party to the proceeding, on the analogy of Section 145 of the Code.<sup>6</sup>

Section 141

On the same principle, the Section does not confer on any Court the power of making a reference to the High Court under O. 46 R. 1 in any case not coming strictly within the purview of that Rule.<sup>7</sup>

Similarly, the principle that a suit against a dead man is not maintainable, is a point of substance and not of procedure, and cannot therefore be applied to an application to set aside an ex parte decree, so as to make it incompetent by reason of the fact that the deceased plaintiff's name, instead of his legal representatives, appears in the application as a party.<sup>8</sup>

But Sections 10 and 11<sup>9</sup> and O. 39 R. 1<sup>10</sup> of the Code are rules of procedure and may therefore be applied to "proceedings" within the meaning of Section 141.

8. "In regard to suits." — The word "suits" in Section 141 is used in a comprehensive sense so as to include appeals which are only continuations of suits. Hence, the procedure prescribed by the Code in regard to appeals governs appeals arising out of miscellaneous proceedings and miscellaneous proceedings in the nature of appeals.<sup>1</sup>

9. "As far as it can be made applicable." — Section 141 does not make the whole of the procedure in regard to suits applicable to proceedings under the Section. Such procedure applies only as far as it can be made applicable.<sup>1</sup> Thus, the appointment of a guardian cannot be referred to arbitration because guardianship is not a matter purely of private right.<sup>2</sup> Similarly, a surety for a guardian cannot be proceeded against in execution under Section 145, Civil Procedure Code, because even

Section 144 — Note 1

1. S. 583 of the Code of 1882 ran as follows: —
 "Where a party entitled to any benefit (by way of restitution or otherwise) under a decree passed in an appeal under this chapter desires to obtain execution of the same, he shall apply to the Court and the same has now been recast in sub-section (1) of this Section "so as to bring it into closer conformity with that practice."<sup>2</sup>

Sub-section (2), barring the institution of suits for relief claimable under this Section, is new. It compels litigants to have matters falling within the Section cleared up in proceedings under this Section only.<sup>3</sup> It necessarily implies the widest possible construction of sub-section (1).<sup>4</sup>

2. Scope and object of the Section. — It is a cardinal principle of law that the acts of Courts should not be allowed to work injury on the suitors.<sup>1</sup> In the leading English case of Rodger v. Comptoir D'Escompte de Paris,<sup>2</sup> Lord Cairns said :

"One of the first and highest duties of all Courts is to take care that the act of the Court does no injury to the suitors and when the expression 'the act of the Court' is used it does not mean merely the act of the primary Court or of any intermediate Court of appeal but the act of the Court as a whole from the lowest Court which entertains jurisdiction over the matter to the highest Court which finally disposes of the case."

The doctrine of restitution is based upon this principle<sup>3</sup> and contemplates a case where property has been received by the decree-holder under his decree and the decree is subsequently wholly or partially reversed or varied in other proceedings. In such a case the law raises an obligation on the party who received the benefit of the erroneous judgment to make restitution to the other party for what he had lost;<sup>4</sup> and this obligation, it is the duty of the Courts to enforce, unless it is shown that restitution would be clearly contrary to the real justice of the case.<sup>5</sup>

Section 144 only embodies this doctrine of restitution and does not confer any new substantive rights which a successful party did not possess under the general law.<sup>6</sup> It merely regulates the exercise of the rights and prescribes a convenient procedure therefor.<sup>7</sup>

The Section is a salutary provision of law enacted with a view to shorten litigation and to afford speedy relief and should not, therefore, be narrowly construed.<sup>8</sup> which passed the decree against which the appeal was preferred; and such Court shall proceed to execute the decree passed in appeal, according to the rules hereinbefore prescribed for execution of decrees in suits."

Section 144
Notes 2-8

In order that this Section may apply, three conditions seem necessary to be satisfied —

- (1) The restitution sought must be in respect of the decree which had been varied or reversed.<sup>9</sup>
- (2) The party applying for restitution must be entitled to a benefit under a reversing decree,<sup>10</sup> and
- (3) The relief claimed must be properly consequential on the reversal or variation of the decree.<sup>11</sup>

If these conditions are satisfied, the Court shall make an order for restitution.

In the undermentioned case<sup>12</sup> it was held by the Madras High Court that where the lower Court orders court-fee to be paid by the defendant in a pauper suit and the order is reversed in appeal, the money paid as court-fee to the Government by the defendant under the lower Court's decree cannot be dealt with by way of restitution under this Section. In giving reasons for this view, the High Court said as follows :

"Restitution seems to imply money paid by one party to the other or to the credit of the other and a restoration of that money with interest to the person entitled to it by the person to whom or to whose credit it was originally wrongly paid under orders of Court. In this case, the Government are the recipients of the money."

But, at the same time, it was held that Section 151 might well apply to the case.

Under the old Code a successful party in appeal was entitled to treat the appellate decree as containing a direction for restitution, which direction could be enforced in execution of that appellate decree. Such a right obtained by a party under the old Code is not defeated by the introduction of this Section in the present Code, and he could still proceed to execute the appellate decree so obtained by him.<sup>13</sup>

Section 144 is not made applicable to execution proceedings by Section 141 of the Code.<sup>14</sup>

3. The decree must have been varied or reversed. — As has been seen already, this Section will apply only where a decree has been varied or reversed. Where the original decree stands good as against a party no restitution can be had by him under this Section.<sup>1</sup>

The variation or reversal must, of course, have been by a Court of competent jurisdiction for otherwise there cannot be a legal variation, or reversal.<sup>2</sup>

Again, the Section will apply only where a decree is varied or reversed. It will not apply where an order (which is not a decree) is varied or reversed<sup>3</sup> though in such cases, the Court can order restitution under its inherent powers, on the analogy of Section 144.<sup>4</sup> The Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court has however held that the word "decree" in Section 144 covers an "order".<sup>5</sup> The decision is clearly against the definition of the word "decree" in Section 2 (2) of the Code and further, the decisions cited by that Court in support of its view do not bear it out. The decision cannot therefore be accepted as sound.

4. Modes of variation and reversal. — Section 583 of the old Code allowed restitution only in cases where the decree was reversed in appeal preferred under Chapters 41 and 42 of that Code, corresponding to Orders 41 and 42 of the present Code. It did not, therefore apply to variations and reversal otherwise than in appeal<sup>1</sup> nor to a variation or reversal in appeal to the Privy Council.<sup>2</sup>

This Section contains no such restriction as to the manner in which a decree should be varied or reversed and none can be legitimately read into it, except, of course, that it should be in "accordance with law."<sup>3</sup> The Section has also been transferred to the Chapter headed "Miscellaneous" from its position in the Chapter headed "Appeals from Original Decrees" under the old Code. The effect of it is to extend its operation to all cases of reversals, howsoever the variation has been effected.<sup>4</sup>

But, there is a conflict of decisions as to whether this Section applies to cases where the variation of the decree or its reversal is in consequence of a decree in a separate suit. The High Courts of Allahabad<sup>5</sup> and Bombay<sup>6</sup> have held that this Section only applies where the decree is reversed or varied in appeal, revision or review and does not apply where the reversal or variation is consequent on a decree in a separate suit. The Calcutta<sup>7</sup> and Patna<sup>8</sup> High Courts have also held that this Section only applies where the decree is reversed or varied in appeal, revision or review. The Nagpur High Court also seems to be of the same view.<sup>9</sup> But the Madras High Court has held that even where the variation or reversal is the result of a decree in a separate suit, this Section will apply.<sup>10</sup>

The variation or reversal of a decree contemplated by this Section is that made either by the Court itself or by a superior Court interfering in appeal or revision or possibly by a decree in separate suit. This Section does not apply to the case of a variation or reversal of a decree under a private compromise entered into between the parties, whether out of Court or in the course of an execution proceeding.<sup>11</sup> See also the undermentioned case.<sup>12</sup>

5. Effect of setting aside ex parte decree and passing the same decree on the merits. — Where an ex parte decree is set aside the defendant is ipso facto entitled to the restitution of any property which has passed to the decree-holder in execution of such decree.<sup>1</sup> Where an ex parte decree is set aside on the application of the defendant and a sale in execution thereof is also set aside consequent on the setting aside of the decree, the sale cannot be revived on the passing of the same decree on the

Notes 5-7.

6. Effect of reversal of main decree on dependent decrees. — It is a general rule of law that upon a reversal of a judgment, order or decree, all connected or dependent judgments or orders fall with it.<sup>1</sup>

Illustrations

1. A obtains a preliminary decree for partition against B. Pending appeal by B therefrom, A obtains a final decree, executes it and recovers money from B. The preliminary decree is then set aside by the Appellate Court. B is entitled to claim restitution from A of the amount recovered from him. The reason is that no effect remains in the final decree after the reversal of the preliminary decree.<sup>2</sup>

2. A obtains a decree for enhanced rent against B. Pending appeal by B therefrom, A files another suit against B for enhanced rent for another period and obtains a decree conditional on the first decree being confirmed in appeal, and recovers money from B in execution of that decree. The first decree is subsequently reversed on appeal. Held, that B is entitled to claim restitution from A of the money recovered from him under the second decree, as it was made conditional on the confirmation of the first decree and became infructuous on its being reversed in appeal.<sup>3</sup>

7. Who may apply for restitution. — In order to entitle a person to apply under this Section two conditions must be satisfied —

- (1) He must be a party to the decree varied or reversed,<sup>1</sup> and
- (2) He must have become "entitled to any benefit by way of restitution or otherwise" under the reversing decree.<sup>2</sup> But it is not necessary that the decree by which the original decree is reversed or varied should declare the party's right to restitution. Where the effect of the decree of the Appellate Court is to reverse that of the lower Court, the party against whom the lower Court's erroneous decree has been enforced and who has lost possession of the property is entitled to apply for restitution under this Section irrespective of the question whether or not the appellate decree declares the party's right to the property.<sup>3</sup>

Notes 8-10

8. Persons not actually parties.—It follows from what has been said in Note 7 above that the party claiming restitution need not have been a party to the appeal in which the decree was varied or reversed<sup>1</sup> but must have been a party to the original decree so varied or reversed.<sup>2</sup> The appellate decree must also have been in effect and substance in favour of such a person.<sup>3</sup>

Illustration

A decree is passed in favour of X against A, B and C based on a ground common to all the defendants.<sup>4</sup> A appeals without impleading B and C as parties and the decree is reversed under O. 41 R. 4 in favour of all the defendants. B and C, though no parties to the appeal, can claim restitution under this Section of the property that had been taken from them in execution of the decree which was reversed.<sup>5</sup>

The Allahabad High Court has, however, expressed a view that the word "party" in Section 144 is not used in the sense of "party to the suit" but means party to the application.<sup>6</sup> The reasoning behind the observations is not quite clear and seems to be against the wording of the Section.

The word "party" will include his representative, whether by devolution or assignment, and the representative can therefore claim restitution under this Section.<sup>7</sup> Thus, where a plaintiff dies and the suit abates, and the defendant recovers the costs from the representative of the plaintiff who thereafter applies and gets the abatement set aside, the representative can apply under this Section for return of the costs paid by him.<sup>8</sup> Similarly, the transferee of the appellate decree is entitled to apply under this Section for restitution of what his transferor was entitled to claim.<sup>9</sup>

9. Party not in possession.—A party is not entitled under this Section to the restitution of property which was not in his possession before suit but was in the possession of the opposite party and which therefore could not have been taken out of his possession under any decree of Court.<sup>1</sup> Where, however, the property in dispute is placed in the hands of the Receiver, the latter's possession will be on behalf of the rightful owner as ultimately found by the Court. Such owner, therefore, is entitled to the benefit of the Section as soon as his title is established.<sup>2</sup>

10. Right of auction-purchaser to apply for restitution.—An auction sale may be set aside—

- (1) under certain circumstances<sup>1</sup> when the decree in execution of which the sale is held is set aside, or
- (2) in other proceedings such as those under Order 21 Rules 72, 90 of the Code.

Note 10

1. For those circumstances, see Note 13.

In either case the auction-purchaser is entitled to a return of the purchase price less the mesne profits he has enjoyed. In fact where an auction sale is set aside it is incumbent upon the Court to order that the recovery of possession by the judgment-debtor is made conditional on his paying up to the purchaser the purchase-money.<sup>2</sup>

Where, however, no such conditional order is passed, can the auction-purchaser apply under this Section for the return of the purchase-money? It has been held that he cannot. The reason is that he is neither a party to the decree varied or reversed nor is he a person entitled to any benefit under the reversing decree.<sup>3</sup>

He may, of course, sue the judgment-debtor for a refund of his purchase-money.<sup>4</sup>

11. Against whom restitution can be granted. — Under Section 583 of the Code of 1882 an appellate decree reversing a decree of the lower Court had to contain, or was deemed to contain, a direction for restitution in favour of the successful appellant, who had, in order to claim restitution, to execute the appellate decree. This, of course, could not be done against a person who was not a party to the appellate decree.

It was therefore held that the transferee of a decree reversed in appeal, or other person who was not a party to the appeal, could not be proceeded against under the Section.<sup>1</sup>

There is no such restriction under the present Section. A right to claim restitution may now be enforced against a party or his representative or assignee even if he is not a party to the appeal.<sup>2</sup> A mortgages to C certain property and then sues B,

Section 144 who is in possession thereof, in ejectment, and obtains a decree and gets delivery of possession in execution. Pending appeal by B, C sues on his mortgage, obtains a decree and purchases the property in execution of his decree and obtains possession. A's decree is reversed in appeal. Held, B can claim restitution from C of the property taken from him. The reason is that C is a representative of A and cannot be in a better position than A.<sup>3</sup>

Where the liability to make restitution is a joint one, a claim against some only of the persons liable in the absence of the others is not sustainable.<sup>4</sup>

Restitution can be ordered under this Section only against a party who has benefited under the reversed decree.<sup>5</sup> Thus, suppose that in a suit for possession A obtains a decree against B and his usufructuary mortgagees. The decree being reversed on appeal B is given possession instead of the mortgagees. Here the mortgagees cannot claim the mortgaged property from B by way of restitution. The reason is that B was given possession of the property not under the reversed decree of the lower Court but under the reversing decree of the Appellate Court.<sup>6</sup>

12. Transferee of a decree. — See Note 11 above.

13. Auction-purchaser. — The question whether restitution can be claimed against an auction-purchaser on the reversal of the decree in execution of which the sale took place, depends upon the question whether he is a bona fide purchaser. By the phrase "bona fide purchaser" the Courts imply the test of knowledge of the pending proceedings to set aside the decree, and opportunity to defend his own interests in those proceedings.<sup>1</sup>

In the case of bona fide purchasers the rule is that the sale will be upheld notwithstanding the reversal of the decree,<sup>2</sup> because otherwise there will be less inducement to intending purchasers to buy at an execution sale, and consequently less chance of property fetching proper value at such sales.<sup>3</sup> Another reason is that a purchaser cannot be expected to go behind the judgment to inquire into the irregularities in the suit.<sup>4</sup>

This, however, does not mean that an execution sale cannot be set aside on other grounds such as want of jurisdiction to sell the property,<sup>5</sup> fraud,<sup>6</sup> want of saleable interest in the judgment-debtor<sup>7</sup> and, the sale being affected by the doctrine of lis pendens,<sup>8</sup> etc. In such cases restitution can be ordered against the auction-purchaser<sup>9</sup> under the inherent powers of the Court.<sup>10</sup>

The reason of the rule upholding an execution sale in favour of a bona fide purchaser disappears where the decree-holder is himself the purchaser, and has notice of all the proceedings in the suit. The rule itself consequently becomes inapplicable in accordance with the maxim cessante ratione legis, cessat et ipsa lex.<sup>11</sup> The decree-holder purchaser will therefore be bound, on the reversal of the decree, to make restitution to the person entitled thereto.<sup>12</sup> An assignee from such purchaser will be in a better position than his assignor though he is a bona fide purchaser from the decree-holder,<sup>13</sup> unless the reversal of the decree has been obtained fraudulently by the decree-holder himself after the assignment.<sup>14</sup>

In the principles enunciated above there is no distinction between the auction-purchaser at a sale in execution of a money decree and that in execution of a mortgage decree.<sup>15</sup>

The above discussion relates to cases where the decree of the first Court is reversed subsequently. Where the decree is modified the sale need not necessarily be set aside even in cases where the decree-holder is the purchaser. See Note 20 infra.

16. Trustee. — Where a trustee of a temple obtains a decree and in execution thereof recovers money and hands it over to the temple and then the decree is reversed in appeal, restitution can be had only against the temple and not against the trustee personally.<sup>1</sup>

17. What Court can grant restitution. — Section 583 of the old Code required that the person entitled to restitution "shall apply to the Court which passed the decree against which the appeal was preferred." Thus, where a first Appellate Court reverses a decree of the original Court, which reversal is again set aside by the second Appellate Court, it was held that the application should be made to the first Appellate Court against whose decree the second appeal was preferred and not to the original Court.<sup>1</sup>

Under the present Section, the application should be made in all cases to "the Court of first instance." It is only the Court which executes the decree that has jurisdiction to order restitution to the parties.<sup>2</sup>

Where the Court of first instance loses its territorial jurisdiction or ceases to exist, the Court which gets such jurisdiction will be "the Court of first instance."<sup>3</sup>

Where a decree is transferred for execution to another Court, the latter Court can exercise the same powers as the Court of first instance.<sup>4</sup>

The jurisdiction of the Court of first instance is not ousted by the fact that the value of the subject-matter of the restitution exceeds the limits of its pecuniary jurisdiction,<sup>5</sup> nor by the fact that after its decree has been set aside, the case has been transferred for re-hearing to another Court.<sup>6</sup>

18. Extent of power to grant restitution. — Before the passing of the Code of 1908, there was no legislative expression as to the extent of the power of the Court to make restitution. This Section now specifies that the power extends to "cause such restitution to be made as will, so far as may be, place the parties in the position which they would have occupied but for such a decree as has been varied or reversed." Courts ought not to adopt a narrow construction so as to restrict the application of this salutary provision of law which has been enacted with a view to shorten litigation, and afford speedy relief.<sup>1</sup> In L. Guran Ditta v. T. R. Ditta,<sup>2</sup> their Lordships of the Privy Council observed as follows :

"The duty of the Court when awarding restitution under Section 144 of the Code is imperative. It shall place the applicant in the position in which he would have been if the order had not been made : and for this purpose the Court is armed with powers (the 'may' is empowering, not discretionary) as to mesne profits, interest and so forth."

19. "Shall cause restitution to be made." — The Section is mandatory.<sup>1</sup> The Court has no discretion to grant restitution or not, in matters falling within the terms of the Section.<sup>2</sup> It is the legal effect of a decree of reversal that a party against whom the decree reversed was given is to have restitution of all that he had been deprived of under it.<sup>3</sup> It is not necessary that the reversing decree should contain any direction or provision for restitution.<sup>4</sup>

But in cases not falling within the terms of the Section restitution is not a matter of right but depends upon the discretion of the Court and will be ordered only when the justice of the case demands it.<sup>5</sup>

20. "Place the parties in the position which they would have occupied but for such decree as has been varied or reversed." — The object of restitution is to restore the status quo ante between the parties.<sup>1</sup> Under the old Code the power of the Court to grant restitution was wider than what has been conferred under this Section. Under sub-section 1 the Court is limited, in granting restitution, to place the parties "in the position which they would have occupied, but for such decree or such part thereof as has been varied or reversed."<sup>2</sup> The object of this is clearly to enable the Court to place a party who has been prejudicially affected by a decree which has been varied or reversed in his favour in the same position as he would have occupied if the decree had stood originally in the same terms as it stood after the variation or reversal. The prejudice to be removed by restitution must, thus, be the result of the erroneous terms of the original decree.<sup>3</sup> Thus, where A obtains a decree against B for Rs. 8000 and the same is modified in appeal into a decree for Rs. 7500 and in the meanwhile B's properties X and Y are sold for Rs. 7000 and Rs. 3000 respectively in execution of the original decree to the decree-holder himself, it was held by the High Court of Madras that whether the decree was for Rs. 8000 or Rs. 7500 the property Y should necessarily have been sold and that, therefore, B was not prejudiced by the sale and that the sale ought not to be set aside.<sup>4</sup> The same view has been held by the High Court of Calcutta also in the undermentioned case.<sup>5</sup> Rankin, C. J., in that case observed :

"If the judgment-debtor could, and would, have paid what was due, and thus prevented a sale, it seems to me to be clear enough that he can get the sale set aside as against the decree-holder by way of restitution. Where it appears, however, that the sale would not have been prevented had the original decree been correct, I see no object to be served in setting aside sale. In any event, the Legislature in 1908 has since laid down the law on the matter."<sup>6</sup>

In Ban Gyi Maung v. Ma Ngwe Bon,<sup>7</sup> where a decree for the recovery of Rs. 550 was modified in appeal into one for Rs. 110, the High Court of Rangoon set aside the sale in favour of the decree-holder on condition that the judgment-debtor deposited the decree amount in Court. His Lordship did not advert to the principles stated by the High Courts of Madras and Calcutta, but the decision can be supported on those principles, inasmuch as the judgment-debtor could have easily paid the amount due under the appellate decree and have averted the sale. He was thus prejudiced by the sale, which was therefore rightly set aside. In Shivbai Babya Swami v. Yesoo Cheoo Nayakin,<sup>8</sup> where A obtained an ex parte decree against B and purchased the latter's property in execution thereof and subsequently B got the ex parte decree set aside, but on a re-trial of the case a decree on the same terms as before was passed against him, it was held by the High Court of Bombay that the sale "being no longer based on any solid foundation should be set aside." It is submitted that this decision should be reconsidered in the light of the principles enunciated by the High Courts of Madras and Calcutta.

Where the decree subsequently passed in appeal is for a larger amount than the amount due under the original decree, there could possibly be no prejudice to the judgment-debtor and, it is conceived, the sale will not be set aside.

The restoration is to be as nearly as possible to their positions at the time the erroneous order was passed and not to later positions taken up by them of their own accord as resulting from that order.<sup>9</sup> Such restoration may be ordered after taking evidence in the matter, if necessary.<sup>10</sup>

Where a party has obtained possession or recovered money under an erroneous decree, it will not be a restoration of the status quo ante merely to restore the possession or to return the money recovered. The party deprived of it would have lost the profit of the property or the interest on the money, of which he had been deprived. The Court has therefore been empowered to pass "any orders including orders for the refund of costs and for the payment of interest, damages, compensation and mesne profits" consequential on the variation or reversal of the decree.<sup>11</sup>

But the restitution claimed must have been properly consequential on the reversal or variation.<sup>12</sup> Thus, where a judgment-debtor, pending appeal by him against the decree sells his property and deposits the decree amount in Court fearing that he may not succeed in the appeal, but the appeal is subsequently allowed, he cannot claim damages caused by the private sale, in restitution, he being under no obligation to pay the amount and the damages claimed also not being consequential on the reversal of the decree.<sup>13</sup>

It has been held that where a judgment-debtor against whom an ex parte decree was passed, chooses to set aside the sale held in execution of the decree by making the necessary deposit under O. 21 R. 89 and afterwards the ex parte decree also is set aside, the judgment-debtor would not be entitled to claim a refund of the amount which he had deposited as the auction-purchaser's compensation. The reason given is that such a deposit is not made by the judgment-debtor directly in connexion with the decree which has been passed against him but is made in order that he may obtain a special privilege which the law provides.<sup>14</sup>

21. "So far as may be." — It will not be possible in many cases to restore the exact status quo ante between the parties. Crops, for instance, which have been removed by the respondent pending appeal cannot be restored. In such cases the Court can grant damages representing the value (but only the net value) of the moveable property of which the restitution is claimed.<sup>1</sup>

The Court is, in fact, bound to do everything and make every order fairly and properly consequential on the reversal of the original judgment so as to restore the parties to the same position as they were in at the time of the erroneous order.<sup>2</sup>

Where each party is found entitled to restitution from the other, the restitution should, as near as possible, be simultaneous. Thus, where an auction sale is set aside, the judgment-debtor can claim restitution only on payment to the purchaser of the purchase money. In such a case the restoration of the property must be made conditional on the payment back of the purchase money so that the mutual restoration is, as far as possible, simultaneous.<sup>3</sup>

Where a decree for pre-emption obtained by a plaintiff is reversed in appeal, the plaintiff is entitled to restitution of the money deposited by him and which had been taken by the defendant vendee.<sup>4</sup> In such a case it cannot be said that because the plaintiff is unsuccessful in the appeal, there could be no question of restitution to him.

As the Section only permits restitution "so far as may be," such restitution cannot be ordered so as to prejudice the rights of third parties.<sup>5</sup>

22. Mesne profits.—The use of the words 'damages,' 'compensation' and 'mesne profits' indicate that the possession obtained under an erroneous decree subsequently reversed is wrongful possession.<sup>1</sup> On the reversal of the decree, the judgment-debtor will be not only entitled to the possession of the property taken from him but also to mesne profits during the period he was kept out of possession.<sup>2</sup> Where, however, the Appellate Court sets aside the decree and remands the case for fresh or further enquiry and the question of nature of the possession of the party who has been in possession

It has been held by the Calcutta High Court in the undermentioned case<sup>4</sup> that a person who obtains possession of immovable property under a decree which at the time was a valid decree but has subsequently been set aside in appeal can in no sense be regarded as a trespasser during such period. Hence, for that period, such person is liable to his opponent, the real owner, for compensation or damages and not for mesne profits in the strict sense of the expression. But since the reversal of the decree in his favour, such person becomes a trespasser and is liable for mesne profits for such period as he continues in possession.

The criterion for the calculation of mesne profits is not what the person out of possession could have realized if he had not been dispossessed. The criterion is what the person in wrongful possession actually realized or could have, with due diligence, realized.<sup>5</sup> Moreover, the person in wrongful possession is not liable for the gross profits but for the net profits after making all legitimate deductions, such as collection charges, etc.<sup>6</sup>

Where a judgment-debtor is granted restitution by way of mesne profits against the decree-holder auction-purchaser, the former is entitled to set off the mesne profits awarded against the decretal amount due.<sup>7</sup>

There was a difference of opinion under the old Code as to whether the claims to mesne profits by way of restitution should be made in an application under Section 583 or by a suit.<sup>8</sup> Under this Section it is clear that it should be claimed only in an application and not by a separate suit.

23. Interest. — Where a sum of money is recovered in execution of a decree which is subsequently reversed, the judgment-debtor is entitled to get back not only the sum recovered but also interest for the period that the amount has been withheld from him.<sup>1</sup> The reason is, in the words of their Lordships of the Privy Council in Rodger v. The Comptoir D'Escompte de Paris, "that the perfect judicial determination not liable for mesne profits but only the lessor respondent.)

which it must be the object of all Courts to arrive at, will not have been arrived at unless the persons who have had their money improperly taken from them have the money restored to them with interest during the time that the money has been withheld".<sup>2</sup>

The rate of interest allowable is however in the judicial discretion of the Court which will not be interfered with in appeal.<sup>3</sup>

Where no interest is claimed in an application for restitution it will not be allowed.<sup>4</sup>

In granting restitution it is the injury which has been caused to the party who is ultimately successful, that the Court seeks to remedy. The Court is not concerned with the actual benefit which may or may not have been gained by the other party.<sup>5</sup> Thus, where a defendant against whom a decree was passed deposited into Court certain amount which the decree-holder did not draw out as he was unable to furnish security as ordered by the Court, it was held that the defendant was entitled, on the reversal of the decree, to get back the amount with interest thereon, though the other party did not get any benefit from the money deposited.<sup>6</sup>

24. property or money should have been obtained in execution of the decree which was subsequently reversed.<sup>1</sup> The Section would apply even if the possession of the property or money was taken otherwise than in execution provided it was obtained under colour of, or in consequence of, the decree.<sup>2</sup>

Notes 25-28

Where possession is obtained by the decree-holder independent of, and in opposition, to the decree, this Section does not apply. Thus, where A gets only a decree for injunction against B and then enters into possession with the aid of the police and the decree is subsequently reversed in appeal, B cannot be given restitution by removal of the superstructure erected on the property.<sup>3</sup>

26. Splitting up claim of restitution.—The principle of constructive res judicata, whether Section 11 Explanation IV or O. 2 R. 2 of the Code is invoked in its aid, cannot be applied to proceedings under this Section.<sup>1</sup> Where therefore a party is entitled by way of restitution to two reliefs, the claiming of one only of such reliefs in an application does not bar a subsequent application for the other relief. Thus, where A is entitled to the restoration of a property and mesne profits, a first application for the restitution of the property does not bar a subsequent application for the mesne profits.<sup>2</sup> The same principle will apply where a party is entitled to restitution of a sum of money and the interest thereon.<sup>3</sup>

A second application for the same relief as was previously granted is however clearly barred on the principles of res judicata.<sup>4</sup>

See also the undermentioned case.<sup>5</sup>

27. Pecuniary jurisdiction of Court in awarding restitution.—See Note 17, ante.

28. Security for restitution.—The Appellate Court has an inherent power to call upon the respondent to furnish security (notwithstanding the decree has been executed) for the due performance of any decree that might be made in appeal.<sup>1</sup>

Where a decree-holder, at the time of the withdrawal of money, executes a security bond by which the principal alone is secured, the Court is not deprived thereby of the power to award interest also under this Section, if the decree is subsequently reversed.<sup>3</sup>

Where third persons stand surety for restitution, such restitution can be ordered against them, only if the conditions of the security bond are satisfied.<sup>3</sup>

29. Bar of suit. — Section 583 of the old Code did not expressly bar any suit for restitution. There was consequently a great divergence of judicial opinion as to whether such a suit was barred or not.<sup>1</sup>

Sub-section (2) of the present Section which has now been newly added, makes it clear that "no suit shall be instituted" for any relief which could be claimed by way of application under sub-section (1);<sup>2</sup> and even if a case does not fall within the strict terms of this Section, the Court will not, in the interests of justice, be astute to force the parties to a separate suit.<sup>3</sup>

(3) Where the judgment-debtor seeks his remedy by an application under this Section and on the objection of the defendant he is driven to a separate suit.<sup>7</sup>

The Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court holds that a suit which is barred under Section 144 (2) may nevertheless be converted into an application for restitution under Section 144 (1), for, the proceedings under Section 144 are in substance execution proceedings coming under Section 47 of the Code and under that Section the suit can be treated as a proceeding.<sup>8</sup>

30. Nature of proceedings under the Section.—Proceedings under S. 583 of the old Code were proceedings in execution of the appellate decree<sup>1</sup> though S. 244 (now S. 47) was held not to apply in its entirety to such proceedings.<sup>2</sup>

The present Section has given rise to a conflict of opinion as to whether proceedings thereunder are proceedings in execution or not. The Allahabad, Calcutta, Lahore and Nagpur High Courts hold that they are not,<sup>3</sup> though the Allahabad and Lahore High Courts hold that they are in the nature of execution proceedings.<sup>4</sup> On the other hand the Bombay, Madras, Patna and Rangoon High Courts and the Oudh Judicial Commissioner's Court hold that the proceedings are proceedings in execution.<sup>5</sup>

If the application is one in execution, then Section 141 would not apply thereto. Otherwise it would apply and an application under Section 144 dismissed for default may be restored by applying O. 9 R. 9 thereto.<sup>6</sup>

The nature of proceeding becomes important also where the question is whether Article 181 or Article 182 of the Limitation Act applies to such proceedings (see Note 33), and whether the court-fee payable on the memorandum of appeal from an order under this Section is to be ad valorem under Schedule I, Article 1 of the Court-fees Act, or under Schedule II, Article 11 thereof. (See Note 32.)

The adjustment of a claim for restitution before it has been ordered by the Court is not the adjustment of a decree.<sup>7</sup>

See also Notes 31, 32 and 33, below.

31. Appeal — Tenability of. — The determination of a question under this Section has been expressly declared to be a decree under Section 2 (2) and is appealable as such under Section 96.<sup>1</sup> But does an adjudication in an application for restitution not falling within Section 144 amount to a decree? There is a difference of opinion on this point. The Calcutta High Court holds that it is a decree under Section 2 (2).<sup>2</sup> The Patna High Court holds that it is not;<sup>3</sup> while Mr. Justice Chapman of the same Court has expressed an obiter dictum in the undermentioned case<sup>4</sup> that it will amount to a decree. The Nagpur High Court has held that an order for restitution under Section 151 is appealable on the analogy of an order under this Section.<sup>5</sup> The Madras High Court has held that an order for restitution made as between the parties to the suit would be appealable as falling under Section 47 though it is not covered by this Section.<sup>6</sup>

Section 144
Notes 31-32.

The decision in order to constitute a determination of a question under this Section and therefore a decree, must have been one on the merits of the application and must not relate to matters incidentally connected with or collateral to the decision of any such question.<sup>7</sup>

An order dismissing an application for restitution on the ground that the applicant had already obtained restitution<sup>8</sup> or an order holding that the application is not time-barred<sup>9</sup> are not decisions on the merits and therefore are not decrees which are appealable. But it has been held that the rejection of a prayer for restitution under this Section amounts to a determination of a question under this Section.<sup>10</sup> It has been held by the Rangoon High Court that an order on an application on the original side of the High Court under this Section is not a "judgment" within the meaning of Clause 13 of the Letters Patent of the Rangoon High Court and hence is not appealable.<sup>11</sup>

32. Court-fee. — The court-fee payable on a memorandum of appeal against an order under Section 144 depends upon the question whether such an application is one for execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree within the meaning of Section 47 of the Code.

Under the Court-fees Act, 1870, the court-fee payable on memorandum of appeal against decrees is ad valorem under Schedule I Article 1 thereof. But under Section 35 of the Act, the Government of India and the Local Governments have directed that the fee payable on appeals from orders under Section 47 of the Code [which are "decrees" under Section 2 (2) of the Code] shall be limited to the amounts chargeable with a fixed fee under Article 11 Schedule II of that Act.<sup>1</sup>

If an order under Section 144 is therefore considered to be one under Section 47, then the fee chargeable is that under Article 11 Schedule II of the Court-fees Act. If not, it will be payable as on an appeal from a decree ad valorem under Article 1 of Schedule I of the Act, on the amount dealt with by the order.

There is a conflict of decisions as to whether an order under this Section is to be considered as one under Section 47 for purposes of court-fees. According to the High Courts of Madras,<sup>2</sup> Nagpur,<sup>3</sup> Patna<sup>4</sup> and Lahore,<sup>5</sup> such an order is to be treated as falling under Section 47 for purposes of court-fees. But the contrary view has been held by the High Courts of Allahabad,<sup>6</sup> Calcutta<sup>7</sup> and Rangoon<sup>8</sup> according to which an appeal from such an order must be stamped with ad valorem court-fee.

33. Limitation. — There is a great divergence of judicial opinion as to whether Article 181 or Article 182 of the Limitation Act applies to an application for restitution under this Section.

Article 182 applies to an application for the execution of a decree or order of a Civil Court, and Article 181 applies where no limitation is provided elsewhere for such applications.

Under Section 583 of the old Code, an application for restitution under that Section was one in execution of the appellate decree and Article 179 (now Article 182) of the Limitation Act of 1877 was applied.<sup>1</sup> In cases not falling within that Section, the application was not treated as one in execution of any decree and the Article applied was 178 (now 181) of the Limitation Act, 1877.<sup>2</sup>

Under the present Code, the Madras, Bombay, Patna, Rangoon and Oudh Courts hold that an application for restitution is one in "execution of a decree" within Article 182 of the Limitation Act, 1908.<sup>3</sup> Further, Section 6 of that Act would also apply to such cases, and in cases of disability of the applicant, the time would be extended by virtue thereof.<sup>4</sup>

The other High Courts hold that an application for restitution is not a proceeding in "execution of a decree" and that therefore the Article applicable is 181.<sup>5</sup> The High Courts of Allahabad, Calcutta and Lahore have held that where a decree reversing that of a trial Court is confirmed in second appeal, the period of limitation for an application for restitution begins to run from the date of the lower Appellate Court's decree and not from the date of the decree in second appeal confirming the reversing decree.<sup>6</sup> The High Court of Allahabad<sup>7</sup> has, however, held that, where the application for restitution is for recovery of mesne profits, time does not begin to run until possession of the property has been restored to the successful applicant.

An application for restitution on the reversal of the decree of the High Court by the Privy Council is one to "enforce" the decree of the Privy Council and is therefore governed by Article 183 of the Limitation Act.<sup>8</sup>

Section 144 Notes 34-36

1. A purchases a property in a sale held in execution of a decree and obtains possession thereof. On the application of B, the judgment-debtor, the sale is set aside. B applies for restitution of possession and mesne profits from A. Does the application lie under Section 144? No: for, no decree has been varied or reversed. But the restitution can be granted under Section 151,<sup>5</sup> on the principle that an erroneous act of the Court should not be allowed to do injury to the suitors.<sup>6</sup>

2. A obtains a decree against B and recovers the money due under the decree by execution. Subsequently it appears to the Court that B was dead at the time of the institution of the suit. The decree is a nullity and the Court, having levied execution while there was legally no decree, has inherent power to rectify the mistake and order restitution.<sup>7</sup>

There is one distinction between the exercise of the powers under S. 144 and the exercise of the Court's inherent jurisdiction. While the Section is mandatory the exercise of the power under Section 151 depends upon the discretion of the Court which will be used only in the interests of justice.<sup>8</sup>

The inherent powers of a Court do not extend to convert an application which has nothing to do with restitution into one for restitution.<sup>9</sup> Nor does it extend to ordering restitution against a person who is neither a party to nor bound by any order of the appellate or reversing Court.<sup>10</sup>

35. Revenue Court. — The jurisdiction to make restitution being inherent in all Courts, the principles of Section 144 will apply to Revenue Courts also.<sup>1</sup>

Note 36

36. Revision. — No revision lies from an order on an application falling under Section 144, for such an order is appealable as a decree under Section 2 (2).<sup>1</sup> Where the Court refuses to order restitution in the exercise of its discretion in a case not falling within Section 144, the order is not open to revision.<sup>2</sup>

It has been seen in Note 31 that in cases of restitution not falling within Section 144 there is a difference of opinion as to whether the order made amounts to a "decree." Where the order is held not to amount to a decree and no other remedy is open, a revision will lie.<sup>3</sup>

145. [S. 253.] Where any person has become liable as surety —

- (a) for the performance of any decree<sup>3</sup> or any part thereof, or
- (b) for the restitution of any property taken in execution of a decree,<sup>4</sup> or
- (c) for the payment of any money,<sup>5</sup> or for the fulfilment of any condition imposed on any person,<sup>6</sup> under an order of the Court in any suit or in any proceedings consequent thereon, the decree or order may be executed against him,<sup>7</sup> to the extent to which he has rendered himself personally liable,<sup>8</sup> in the manner herein provided for the execution of decrees, and such person shall, for the purposes of appeal,<sup>12</sup> be deemed a party within the meaning of section 47 :

Provided that such notice<sup>11</sup> as the Court in each case thinks sufficient has been given to the surety.

1. Legislative changes. — The present Section has altered the law in the following respects :—

1. The old Section applied only to sureties for the performance of decrees. It did not apply to securities for the fulfilment of a condition imposed by an order of Court. It was also doubtful whether it applied to securities for the performance of appellate decrees and to securities for restitution of property taken in execution of a decree. It did not also apply to securities for payment of money which were not securities for the performance of decrees. The present Section applies to all these kinds of securities.

2. The word "personally" has been newly added in the present Section before the word "liable."

3. The competency of an appeal from an order under this Section is made clearer by the provision as to the surety being deemed a "party" for purposes of appeal.

4. Notice under the present Section need not be in writing.

2. Scope, applicability and object of the Section. — The object of this Section is to provide a summary remedy for the enforcement of the liability of a surety who has given security for any of the purposes enumerated in the Section. But for this Section, the party for whose benefit the security has been given would have to file a separate suit to enforce the security. This Section dispenses with the necessity of a suit and enables him to enforce the security by execution proceedings in the same manner as if the surety was a party to the decree or order in respect of which security has been given.<sup>1</sup> But the procedure provided by the Section applies only to the extent to which the surety has rendered himself personally liable.

2a. Security by person primarily responsible — Applicability of Section.

— A surety is one who takes upon himself, and guarantees the performance of, an obligation which rests primarily upon another. The surety's liability is an accessory one. Hence the Section has no application unless the person sought to be proceeded against has taken upon himself the liability of another.<sup>1</sup> The liability need not be that of either the judgment-debtor or the decree-holder but it may be the liability of an officer of the Court.<sup>2</sup> Thus, this Section applies to the enforcement of the liability of a person who has stood surety for a receiver.<sup>3</sup> See also Note 4 below.

The security under this Section is intended to be given to some named officer or other individual and not to be a mere undertaking to the Court. The Court is not a juridical person. It cannot be sued. It cannot take property and as it cannot take property it cannot assign it. Where therefore a security bond is executed in favour of the Court, this Section has no application. But independently of this Section it can be enforced by an order on an application to which the sureties are parties that the properties be sold unless, before a day named, the sureties find the money.<sup>1</sup>

In the undermentioned case<sup>2</sup> a security bond was executed in favour of a certificate officer under the Bengal Public Demands Recovery Act in respect of a debt due by a certificate debtor to a certificate holder. It was held that the certificate officer who was deemed to be a Court under Section 57 of the Act, could not maintain a suit on the surety bond, and that the certificate holder as the beneficiary under the bond could sue on it.

See also Note 11 infra.

2c. "Has become liable as surety." — Where A was appointed commissioner to attach certain moveable property and keep it in custody and he after attaching such property locked the goods in a shop and appointed two watchmen to look after the shop and locks, it was held that the watchmen could not be said to have become liable as sureties and that this Section did not apply.<sup>1</sup>

3. Security for the performance of any decree. — Old Section 253 used the words "whenever a person has before the passing of a decree in an original suit become liable as a surety," etc. Hence it did not apply to securities given subsequent to the passing of a decree<sup>1</sup> except when the bond expressly stipulated for its enforcement for a party to the suit and so the objection that the surety was not a surety for a party was groundless. But the case does not decide the question whether this Section will not apply unless the surety is a surety for a party to the suit.)

(The remark in this decision that the Section contemplates proceedings against a third party who has given an undertaking for the due discharge of the obligations resting upon a party to the suit only means that the Section does not apply to the enforcement of the liability of the person on whom the primary responsibility lies.)] in execution.<sup>2</sup> There was also a conflict of views between the Calcutta and the other High Courts as to whether the Section applied to appellate decrees.<sup>3</sup> The present Section makes it clear that it applies to securities for the performance of any decree whether original or appellate, and to all securities whether given before or subsequent to the passing of a decree.<sup>4</sup> The words of the Section are wide enough to cover a case where an ex parte decree is set aside on security being given for the performance of the decree that may be passed at the re-hearing.<sup>5</sup> See also the undermentioned case.<sup>6</sup>

4. Security for restitution of property taken in execution of a decree

— Clause (b). — Where, during the pendency of an appeal against a decree, the decree-holder wishes to execute the decree, he may be allowed to do so under O. 41, R. 6 on his furnishing security for restitution, in the event of the decree being reversed, of any property taken in execution. The security in such a case is really a security for the performance of the appellate decree. Under the present Section such a security can be enforced in execution. But this was disputed under the former Code. See Note 3 above.

Where moveable property is attached under O. 21 R. 43 of the Code, and the attaching officer makes over such property to a third person on his passing a security bond for the production of such property in Court when called upon, it has been held by the High Court of Madras in the undermentioned cases<sup>1</sup> that Section 145 clause (b) has no application to the case, the reason being that this clause is prima facie intended for cases in which restitution is sought against a party who has taken the property in execution of the decree or order in his favour and that the custodian of attached property under O. 21 R. 43 cannot be said to be a person who has "taken the property in execution of a decree." The Allahabad High Court has also held in the undermentioned cases<sup>2</sup> that this Section does not apply to the enforcement of the security bond in such a case. The Madras High Court in a later case,<sup>3</sup> the Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court,<sup>4</sup> the Allahabad High Court in the undermentioned cases<sup>5</sup> and the Lahore High Court<sup>6</sup> have, on the other hand, held that Section 145 will apply to such cases.

In the undermentioned case,<sup>7</sup> the Calcutta High Court pointed out that a surety is a person who guarantees the performance of an obligation by another and held that a person to whom moveable property attached in execution is handed over for safe custody will be liable to be proceeded against under this Section as a surety only if the primary responsibility for producing the thing when required rests on another person, say, the officer of the Court who has attached it, and not where the responsibility is only that of the person giving security for the safe custody of the property. It is submitted that this view is correct. (See Note 2a above.)

See also Note 6a below.

5. Security for payment of money. — See the following provisions of the Code under which such security is taken —

- (1) Section 55 sub-section (4) — Security on behalf of judgment-debtor arrested in execution.

- (6) Order 41 Rule 10 — Security for costs of first appeal.
- (7) Order 45 Rule 7 — Security for costs of Privy Council appeal.

6. Security for fulfilment of any condition imposed on any person —

Clause (c). — Old Section 253 applied only to securities for the performance of a decree. Hence it did not apply to securities for the fulfilment of a condition imposed upon a person under an order of the Court. Thus, where certain documents were returned to the defendant in a suit on his furnishing security for their production in Court whenever required, it was held that the liability of the surety could not be enforced by summary proceedings under Section 253.<sup>1</sup> Similarly, where a judgment-debtor was arrested in execution of a decree but was released on security being given for his appearance in Court, it was held that Section 253 was not applicable to the case.<sup>2</sup> The decision in such cases would be different under the present Code.<sup>3</sup>

This Section refers to a "condition imposed on any person" and not to "any other person" and is therefore applicable to a person who is a surety for himself just as much as to one who is a surety for some one else.<sup>4</sup>

6a. Under an order of the Court — Clause (o). — This clause will apply only where there is an order of the Court for the payment of money or for the fulfilment of any condition imposed on any person. Where the proceedings against the surety are not to enforce any decree or order of the Court, the Section will not apply.<sup>1</sup> Where, under O. 21 R. 43, moveable property is attached and made over by the attaching officer to a third person on his passing a bond undertaking to produce the property in Court whenever required, it was held by the High Court of Madras in the undermentioned cases<sup>2</sup> that the liability of the surety arose not under any order of the Court but from an act of the attaching officer under an authority conferred on him by law, and that therefore the Section did not apply to such cases. Without adverting to this aspect of the question, a later case of the same High Court has laid down that Section 145 will apply to such cases.<sup>3</sup>

It was also held by the High Court of Madras in the undermentioned cases<sup>4</sup> that the 'order' referred to was one enforceable through execution by one party to the suit or proceeding against another party thereto: where therefore security was given on behalf of the next friend of a minor under O. 32 R. 6 for withdrawing the latter's money from Court, it was held that it was not done under any order of the Court in favour of one party enforceable against another party, but under an order passed for the protection of the minor's interest against that minor's own next friend and that therefore Section 145 did not apply to the case. In a later case,<sup>5</sup> however, where a next friend of a minor plaintiff applied for withdrawing the minor's money from Court to be utilized for purchasing Government Promissory Notes and depositing the same in Court and he was allowed to do so on security, it was held that Section 145 would apply and the security could be enforced in execution.

Where attached properties are released on security that they will be produced when called for, there is no order "for the payment of any money or for the fulfilment of any condition imposed on any person," the surety being liable to pay owing to default. The Section does not apply to such a case.<sup>6</sup>

6b. "In any suit or in any proceedings consequent thereon." — The order imposing the condition must be passed "in any suit or any proceedings consequent thereon."<sup>1</sup> A proceeding for the grant of letters of administration though it may take the form of a suit is not a "suit or a proceeding consequent thereon." Hence a surety under an administration bond does not come within the purview of this Section.<sup>2</sup> But, can the Section be applied by virtue of Section 141 of the Code to such proceedings? In the undermentioned case<sup>3</sup> Kennedy, J. C., was of the opinion that it could be, while Rupchand Bilaram, A. J. C., was of the opinion that it could not, on the ground that Section 145 deals with something more than mere procedure, that it confers a substantive right of making a person, not a party to a pending suit, amenable to the jurisdiction of the Court in execution proceedings and that it therefore could not be applied to proceedings other than suits. See Section 141 Note 7, ante.

Where the judgment-debtor deposited the decree amount into Court and the next friend of the minor decree-holder applied for withdrawing the money and for re-depositing it in the form of Government Promissory Notes, it was held that such an application was a "proceeding consequent on the suit" and that a surety for such re-deposit can be proceeded against under this Section.<sup>4</sup>

7. "The decree or order may be executed against him." — This Section provides for the enforcement of the surety's liability by execution against the surety of the decree or order in connexion with which the security was given. But the Court is not bound to issue execution against the surety. It has a discretion to refuse such execution.<sup>1</sup> If execution is issued the Court cannot declare a forfeiture in favour of the Government but the security money should be paid to the decree-holder.<sup>2</sup> The decree-holder must apply it towards the satisfaction of his decree and is not entitled to it over and above the decree amount as a solatium for delay brought about in the execution of his decree.<sup>3</sup>

The mere fact that the applicant for execution mentions the breach of one condition in the security bond as having given him the right to apply for execution does not disentitle the Court from ordering execution if in the course of the proceedings it finds that some other condition has been broken.<sup>4</sup>

The legality of the order for security cannot be questioned by the surety in the execution proceedings against him under this Section.<sup>5</sup>

The Court has no power under the Section to order the refund of moneys deposited as security. But refund can be ordered under Section 151.<sup>6</sup>

8. "To the extent to which he has rendered himself personally liable." — The word "personally" has been newly added in the present Section. Under the former Section there was a conflict of opinion as to whether the Section applied to cases where the surety had not undertaken a personal liability but had merely given a charge on his property.<sup>1</sup> Under the present Section it is clear that it applies only where the surety has rendered himself personally liable.<sup>2</sup> If therefore a security bond were given by the Government on behalf of the Secretary of State for India in Council, Section 145 would not apply to the case, as the Secretary of State would not be personally liable under the bond.<sup>3</sup> For the same reason, where a surety bond does not create a personal liability but merely creates a charge or mortgage on the surety's property, it cannot be enforced by proceedings under this Section.<sup>4</sup> Where, however, the charge on the surety's property is declared by the decree itself, the liability can be enforced by executing the

10. (Per Division Bench— Bond creating both per-decree and no suit on the mortgage is necessary.<sup>5</sup> The reason is that in such a case the surety is virtually in the position of a judgment-debtor.<sup>6</sup>

Where the surety makes himself personally liable and, in addition, charges his property, it is only the personal liability that can be enforced under this Section.<sup>7</sup> The decree-holder may give up the mortgage and enforce the personal liability of the surety by attachment and sale of the property charged.<sup>8</sup> O. 34 R. 14 does not preclude such a course because there is no decree for the payment of money against the surety in such cases as required by that Rule.<sup>9</sup> But where the surety has transferred his equity of redemption to another person, his personal liability cannot be enforced by the sale of the mortgaged property, because it no longer belongs to him. In such a case the property can only be brought to sale by a suit on the mortgage.<sup>10</sup>

Where a judgment-debtor himself gives his property as security, the property can be sold in execution under Section 47.<sup>11</sup>

A surety for costs payable by a party to a suit is personally liable for the costs and the mere fact that he deposits a certain amount by way of security does not exclude his personal liability.<sup>12</sup>

The surety's liability is co-extensive with that of the judgment-debtor and he is jointly and severally liable with the judgment-debtor for the decree amount. A decree against the principal can, in fact, be treated as a decree against him.<sup>13</sup> Hence, the party for whose benefit security has been given is not bound to execute the decree against the judgment-debtor before proceeding against the surety,<sup>14</sup> except where the decree otherwise provides.<sup>15</sup> Within the limits prescribed by the security bond, the surety's liability extends to any amount recoverable from the judgment-debtor.<sup>16</sup> Where a surety undertakes a liability not contained in the decree, he cannot afterwards dispute it.<sup>17</sup> The fact that security has been given does not take away any legal rights which the decree-holder may otherwise have. about its construction, it must be considered in the light of the order directing security to be given.<sup>2</sup> A security bond must be construed strictly.<sup>3</sup> A surety cannot be held liable except to the extent to which he is clearly bound.<sup>4</sup>

Where a surety guarantees the performance of any decree that might be passed against a party, and the bond is not expressly limited to the Court's decree, the bond must be taken to have reference to the ultimate issue of the suit.<sup>5</sup> Thus, it will extend to a decree passed on appeal,<sup>6</sup> or on remand by the Appellate Court,<sup>7</sup> or on a restoration of the suit dismissed once for default.<sup>8</sup> It will apply even to a consent decree provided there is no fraud or collusion in obtaining it<sup>9</sup> and provided that such decree is not excluded by or is not outside the scope of the security bond.<sup>10</sup>

But where an attachment before judgment is removed on security being furnished under O. 38 R. 5, the surety's liability comes to an end on the dismissal of the suit by the original Court.<sup>11</sup> The reason is that under O. 38 R. 9, if no security had been given, the attachment before judgment would itself have come to an end on the dismissal of the suit. But the Bombay High Court dissents from this view and holds that the liability extends to the appellate decree also.<sup>12</sup> The Allahabad High Court also has held that where the bond is in general terms and is not limited to the decree of the trial Court, the surety will be liable for the amount of the appellate decree also.<sup>13</sup> The liability cannot, however, apply to a different proceeding altogether. Where a person gives security for production of property in one suit, he cannot be called upon to produce it in another.<sup>14</sup> As regards the liability and discharge of a surety under Section 55 (4), see Note 12 to Section 55, ante, and the undermentioned cases.<sup>15</sup>

Section 17 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act requires that a defendant applying to set aside an ex parte decree should furnish security for the performance of the decree. It has been held that the security only applies to the ex parte decree itself in case the application should fail. Hence, where the ex parte decree is set aside the surety is discharged and he is not liable in respect of the decree that may be passed subsequently.<sup>16</sup>

A surety for the appearance of judgment-debtor is discharged if the judgment-debtor is in jail for a criminal offence and cannot be produced on the required date.<sup>17</sup> A surety for the appearance of the judgment-debtor if a particular pending proceeding is dismissed, is discharged if on the dismissal of such proceeding the judgment-debtor surrenders himself before the Court.<sup>18</sup> Where a judgment-debtor is released on security, but owing to the default of the decree-holder the execution petition is dismissed and the surety discharged, the liability is not automatically revived by the mere restoration of the execution petition.<sup>19</sup> It has been held in Rangoon<sup>20</sup> that where the surety has bound himself to make the judgment-debtor pay the decree amount on a specified date or, in default, to pay it himself, the judgment-debtor's death before the prescribed date does not end the surety's liability. This view has, however, been dissented from in the undermentioned case.<sup>21</sup> A surety under O. 38 R. 5 (attachment before judgment) is not discharged by the death of the defendant pending the suit where the cause of action survives against the legal representative and the legal representative is brought on the record.<sup>22</sup> But where a person who is not the legal representative is brought on the record and a decree is passed against the estate of the deceased, neither the legal representative nor the surety is bound by the decree.<sup>23</sup>

The surety's liability being co-extensive with that of the principal debtor, the extinction or diminution of the latter's liability operates as a discharge of the surety to a corresponding extent.<sup>24</sup> Conversely, a surety is bound as long as the judgment-debtor is bound. Hence, when the decree is sought to be executed against the surety, no uncertified payment by the judgment-debtor can be recognized by the executing Court<sup>25</sup> [O. 21, R. 2 (3)]. The Sind Court has expressed a contrary view on this point.<sup>26</sup>

Note 9

Where the Court varies the terms of the security bond without the surety's consent, the surety is discharged.<sup>27</sup> But where the variation is obviously for the benefit of the surety, he is not discharged.<sup>28</sup> Similarly, if the Court in whose favour the surety bond is executed is not in the least responsible for the change in the situation of the surety, the surety is not entitled to ask the Court to relieve him of his obligation under the bond on the ground that the decree-holder has arrived at a certain arrangement with the debtor.<sup>29</sup>

unless the surety assents to such contract.<sup>40</sup> Is the surety under this Section discharged by the creditor entering into a compromise with the principal debtor? The answer to this question depends on the terms of the security bond.<sup>41</sup>

Under Sections 142 and 143 of the Contract Act, 1872, a security which the creditor has obtained by misrepresentation or silence as to material circumstances is invalid.<sup>42</sup> A surety is discharged by the failure of the consideration for his bond.<sup>43</sup> Where the surety has not performed his obligation because the decree-holder has expressly dispensed with its performance, the surety is not liable to be proceeded against, under his bond.<sup>44</sup> Where a surety dies after the accrual of his liability under the bond, the liability can be enforced against his legal representatives to the extent of his estate in their hands.<sup>45</sup> Where the surety is not otherwise discharged from his liability the Court has no power to make an order for his discharge<sup>46</sup> except in the case provided for by O. 38 R. 3 (arrest before judgment).<sup>47</sup> The High Court of Allahabad has, however, held in the undermentioned case<sup>48</sup> that the Court to which a guarantee is given has power in a proper case to exonerate the surety from all future transactions.

Where a bond is given to the Court, the liability of the surety cannot be determined by the surety by giving notice as in the case of a continuing guarantee.<sup>51</sup>

Where security for the appearance of a judgment-debtor in the course of certain execution proceedings has been given, the termination of such proceedings will not absolve the surety from a liability already incurred by him before such termination.<sup>52</sup>

9a. Surety, if can recover sum forfeited. — Where a man stands surety for the appearance of another, he should take every precaution to ensure the carrying out of his undertaking and he cannot be allowed on grounds of public policy to recover any sum forfeited under the bond from the principal or from any one else; for, if he is so allowed, it would only tend to render the surety callous and the whole object of demanding the bond would be defeated.<sup>1</sup>

— A security can be enforced in execution under the inherent powers of the Court apart from the provisions of this Section.<sup>1</sup>

11. Maintainability of separate suit by or against the surety. — As has been seen in Note 63 to Section 9 ante, a regular suit is not barred by the fact that a summary and concurrent remedy is also provided for. It was held under the old Section that the summary remedy under it was additional and not exclusive, and therefore it did not bar a regular suit to enforce the security.<sup>1</sup> The present Section provides that the surety "shall, for the purposes of appeal, be deemed a party within the meaning of Section 47." This does not make the surety a party to the suit for all purposes.<sup>2</sup> He is a party only for the limited purpose of appeal. Hence, a suit to enforce the security is not barred under the present Section also.<sup>3</sup> Similarly, a suit by the surety to negative

Notes 11-12 from executing the decree against the surety cannot be maintained.<sup>5</sup>

Until an application is made for execution against the surety he does not become a "party". Hence, he cannot apply to the executing Court for cancellation of his bond.<sup>6</sup> Nor will the rejection of such application made by him, where he makes one, constitute res judicata.<sup>7</sup> But when it is sought to enforce the decree against him, he becomes a "party" and his objections therefore have to be determined in the proceedings and he cannot be compelled to file a separate suit to vindicate his objections.<sup>8</sup> For the same reason, his omission to raise any objection in proceedings against him under this Section will make the decision as to his liability res judicata and he cannot dispute it afterwards.<sup>9</sup>

A surety cannot have a sale set aside by separate suit, where it is vitiated only by irregularities and not for want of jurisdiction.<sup>10</sup>

This Section does not apply to an order for refund of security. Such refund can be ordered only under Section 151. Hence no appeal lies from an order for refund of security.<sup>7</sup>

13. Limitation. — The general trend of opinion is that an application for execution against a surety is governed by Article 182 of the Limitation Act, whether the security was given before or after the decree.<sup>1</sup> The Chief Court of Oudh has, however, held that where security is given after decree, the application does not fall within any of the clauses of Article 182 of the Limitation Act and is therefore governed by Article 181 of that Act,<sup>2</sup> though in a later decision the same Court has proceeded on the footing of the applicability of Article 182 to such cases.<sup>3</sup> Even among the High Courts which hold that Article 182 applies, there is a difference of opinion as to whether the application is governed by Explanation I to that Article or clause (5) of that Article. According to the High Courts of Calcutta,<sup>4</sup> Lahore<sup>5</sup> and Patna,<sup>6</sup> where security is given after the passing of the decree, the decree cannot be said to have been "jointly passed" against the judgment-debtor and the surety within the meaning of Explanation 1 to Article 182 and that an application for execution filed against the judgment-debtor alone or the surety alone does not save limitation against the other. The same view has been expressed by the High Courts of Bombay<sup>7</sup> and Rangoon<sup>8</sup> even when the security is given in the suit before the passing of the decree. The High Court of Allahabad, while agreeing that the decree passed in such cases is not a joint decree, nevertheless holds that an application against the one will save limitation against the other under clause (5) of Article 182.<sup>9</sup> The Chief Court of Oudh has also held the same view in the undermentioned case.<sup>10</sup>

Where an appeal is proffered against a decree for the performance of which security has been given, limitation for an application to execute the decree against the surety under this Section is three years from the date of the appellate decree under clause (2) of Article 182 of the Limitation Act.<sup>11</sup>

As to whether a decree-holder who has allowed his remedy against the judgment-debtor to become time-barred is entitled to proceed against the surety, see Note 9 above.

1. Legislative changes. — This Section is new. As to its effect on previous case-law, see Note 2, infra.

2. Scope and object of the Section. — There was no similar provision under the old Code and there was a conflict of opinion as to whether the legal representative of a defendant could apply to set aside an ex parte decree against the defendant under O. 9 R. 13, in the absence of express reference to a legal representative in that Rule. The High Court of Calcutta<sup>1</sup> held that he could. The High Courts of Allahabad<sup>2</sup> and Madras<sup>3</sup> on the other hand held that he could not, though the Allahabad High Court held in a later case<sup>4</sup> that the legal representative can continue an application filed by the defendant. This Section has been enacted to meet such cases and to set the conflict at rest.

This Section should receive beneficial interpretation and be read as supplementing the rules.<sup>5</sup> Its scope should not be whittled down by placing a too limited and narrow construction upon it.<sup>6</sup> The Section is wide enough to entitle a person to continue a proceeding started by another under whom he claims.<sup>7</sup> The contrary opinion expressed obiter by Wallace, J., sitting as a single Judge in the undermentioned case<sup>8</sup> is, it is submitted, not correct.

But this Section cannot enable A as claiming under B, to maintain an application which B himself could not have maintained. Thus, an assignee from the heir of a deceased plaintiff who was not himself brought on the record, cannot apply under O. 22 R. 10 inasmuch as the heir could not himself have applied under O. 22 R. 10, but could only have applied under O. 22 R. 3.<sup>9</sup> Similarly, where A whose suit is dismissed assigns his interest in the subject-matter of the suit to X and then files an appeal, the appeal is not maintainable as A has no longer any interest in the subject-matter of the suit. Nor can X be made the appellant in the appeal under this Section as this Section will not apply to the case because A himself had no right to file the appeal.<sup>10</sup>

3. "Save as otherwise provided." — The opening words of the Section expressly make it subject to the other provisions of the Code.

Illustrations

1. A's property is sold in execution of a decree against him. A afterwards sells the property to B and then applies to have the execution sale set aside under O. 21 R. 89. A's application is rejected and he appeals from the order rejecting his application. A then withdraws the appeal. B is not entitled to continue the appeal as a person claiming under A. The reason is this. O. 21 R. 89 precludes B, as the purchaser of the property after the execution sale, from applying under R. 89. Hence, by necessary implication it also restricts B's right of appeal from an order on such application because an appeal is only a continuance of the same proceeding.<sup>1</sup>

2. A, who "claims under" B, files an appeal jointly with B. Subsequently, A voluntarily withdraws from the appeal. Then B withdraws the appeal. A cannot continue the appeal because he has already withdrawn from it. (See O. 23 R. 1.)<sup>2</sup>

Notes 3-4

8. A files a suit for partition against B, C and D, and pending the suit mortgages his share to X. A thereafter dies leaving his widow. X applies to be impleaded as co-plaintiff or supplemental defendant. The application is not maintainable. The reason is that O. 22 R. 10 which governs such cases is not applicable inasmuch as there is no devolution or assignment absolutely of the plaintiff's interest on X, but only a derivative interest in the subject-matter. Section 146 cannot also be applied because, there is a specific provision governing such cases and a party cannot be allowed to avoid the conditions of such provision by purporting to proceed under the general provision.<sup>3</sup>

Similarly, O. 21 R. 16 precludes any one who is not a decree-holder or transferee of the decree by assignment in writing or by operation of law from applying to execute the decree. (See Note 4.)

See also the undermentioned decision.<sup>4</sup>

4. Application for execution by or against representatives. — Order 21 Rule 16 makes it clear that besides the decree-holder any person to whom the decree has been transferred by assignment in writing or by operation of law, may execute the decree. Section 146 cannot be read as extending the scope of O. 21 R. 16 as the former is expressly made subject to the other provisions of the Code. Hence, a transferee of property which is the subject-matter of a suit<sup>1</sup> or which is covered by a decree<sup>2</sup> is not entitled to apply for the execution of a decree in favour of the transferor, although he may be a person "claiming under" the decree-holder within the meaning of this Section.<sup>3</sup> Further, such a transferee is not a transferee of the decree within the meaning of O. 21 R. 16.<sup>4</sup>

The expression "transferee" in Order 21 Rule 16 is however not confined to a transferee of the whole decree, but includes a transferee of a portion of the decree and hence such a person can apply to execute the decree.<sup>5</sup>

A decree may be executed against the property in the hands of a transferee thereof pending the suit.<sup>6</sup>

Where a decree-holder dies during the pendency of an execution application, his legal representatives may be substituted in the execution application and be allowed to continue the execution proceedings without a fresh application for execution.<sup>7</sup> The same principle applies where the execution has to proceed against the legal representatives of a judgment-debtor who dies during the pendency of an execution application.<sup>8</sup> It has also been held that an application by the legal representative of the decree-holder under O. 21 R. 16, in a pending execution application, is only a continuation of prior proceedings and not a fresh application for the purposes of Section 48 of the Code.<sup>9</sup> (For fuller discussion, see O. 22 R. 12 Note 1.)

By reason of S. 146 the words 'passed against the same judgment-debtor' in S. 73 cannot be read as 'passed against the same judgment-debtor or the legal representative of the same judgment-debtor'.)

5. Proceeding or application. — An appeal is a "proceeding" contemplated by the Section. Hence a person claiming under a party to the suit may prefer an appeal from the decree in the suit although he was not himself a party to the suit.<sup>1</sup>

Applications under O. 21 R. 2,<sup>2</sup> or under O. 21 R. 94,<sup>3</sup> or under O. 21 R. 95 and 98,<sup>4</sup> or under O. 34 R. 5,<sup>5</sup> are all examples of applications contemplated by the Section.

As to when a person can be said to "claim under" another, see Note 8 below.

6. Appeal. — See Note 5 above.

7. Application to set aside ex parte decree. — As has been observed in Note 2 above, there was a conflict of decisions under the old Code as to whether the legal representative of a defendant against whom an ex parte decree had been passed, could apply to set it aside. The present Section now makes it clear that such an application is maintainable.<sup>1</sup>

- (1) has succeeded to the position of the latter in the litigation,<sup>1</sup> or
- (2) has acquired from him, subsequently to the commencement of the litigation, an interest in its subject-matter.<sup>2</sup> In this case he can be said to claim under the party only in respect of the rights and interests in property which he has so acquired.<sup>3</sup> Further, the person claiming under the original party must be one who by a title derived from or under the party has himself the right to take the proceeding or make the application and not merely one who has a derivative interest in the property (like that of a mortgagee subsequent to suit) which may, in some manner, be affected by the result of the proceeding.<sup>4</sup>

Section 146 Note 8

enough if B has acquired from A an interest in the property concerned in the litigation, subsequently to the commencement thereof]:

(4) A sues B to establish his right to certain property. While the suit is pending, B mortgages the property to C. The suit is decreed against B. B does not appeal from the decree. C, as a person claiming under B, may appeal from the decree.<sup>9</sup> If, in the above case, B had mortgaged the property to C, prior to the institution of the suit, C would not be a person claiming under B. This is shown by the next illustration.

(5) A, a mortgagee of immovable property, sues B, the mortgagor, for the enforcement of the mortgage. Prior to the suit, B has granted to C, a puisne mortgage of the property. C is not made a party to the suit. An ex parte decree is passed against B in the suit. C cannot apply to set aside the ex parte decree as a person claiming under B, because C's interest was not acquired subsequently to the institution of the suit but was acquired before.<sup>9</sup>

(6) A, a member of a Hindu joint family, obtains a preliminary decree for partition of his share of the family property. Then he transfers his rights in the family property to B. B takes no steps to be impleaded in the suit, but after the final decree, applies to execute it as a person claiming under A. B is not entitled to do so.<sup>10</sup> The reason is that B claimed under A only in respect of the preliminary decree which gave A merely an unspecified share in the family property. The right to secure separate possession granted by the final decree did not vest in A himself on the date of the transfer and could not pass to B under the transfer. B cannot therefore be said to "claim under" A in respect of that right which alone would enable him to execute the decree.

(7) A sues B and attaches before judgment, a debt due to B from C. The suit is decreed in A's favour. Upon this, under O. 38 R. 11, A's attachment before judgment ripens into attachment in execution. Then B sues C and obtains a decree on the debt. A does not attach this decree but applies for its execution as a person claiming under B. It was held by Venkatasubba Rao, J., that A was entitled to do so and by Reilly, J., that he was not.<sup>11</sup> It is respectfully submitted that the view of Reilly, J., is correct. A was neither the legal representative of B nor the assignee of B's decree. Hence, he had not succeeded to B's position as a decree-holder. Nor can he be said to have acquired any interest in the subject-matter of the suit inasmuch as his attachment cannot be said to create any interest in it; and even if it does, it cannot be said to have been acquired subsequently to the institution of B's suit, because the attachment was complete before B filed his suit. Under O. 21 R. 53 (3), a decree-holder, who attaches another decree of the nature specified in the said Rule, becomes a representative of the holder of the latter decree for the purposes of execution.<sup>12</sup>

(8) Under O. 21 R. 53, where A attaches in execution of his decree against B, a decree obtained by B against C, A becomes the representative of B. But A becomes the representative of B only for the limited purpose of executing the decree against C. B has no right to adjust the attached decree and release C from his liability under the decree.<sup>13</sup>

It has been held that a Hindu co-parcener is not a person 'claiming under' the manager of the joint family against whom a suit is filed.<sup>14</sup>

9. Legal representative need not be brought on the record in order to maintain an application under this Section. — To entitle a person to take a proceeding under Section 146 as a person claiming under a party to a litigation, it is not necessary that he should have been brought on the record as such.<sup>1</sup> Again, where A, B, C and D are entitled as persons claiming under E to make an application, and A alone presents the application within limitation, B, C and D being brought on the record subsequently, the presentation of the application by A alone is not invalid in view of this Section though it may be defective and the Court may not proceed with it.<sup>2</sup>

Note 9

147. [New.] In all suits to which any person under disability is a party, any consent or agreement, as to any proceeding shall, if given or made with the express leave of the Court by the next friend or guardian for the suit, have the same force and effect as if such person were under no disability and had given such consent or made such agreement.

Section 147

[ R. S. C., Order 16 Rule 21. See Order 32. ]

Synopsis

1. Legislative changes.
2. Scope of the Section.
3. "Person under disability."
4. "As to any proceeding."
5. Leave must be express.

1. Legislative changes. — This Section is new. It is based on O. 16 R. 21 of the Rules of the Supreme Court. It has not made any substantive alteration in the law.

2. Scope of the Section. — Order 32 Rule 7 provides that a minor's guardian for suit or next friend shall not enter into any compromise or agreement with reference to the suit without the leave of the Court expressly recorded in the proceedings. The present Section enacts the substantive rule that a minor shall be bound by a compromise entered into by his guardian in the prescribed manner.

3. "Person under disability." — The Section applies to consent or agreement given or made on behalf of a person who is deemed incapable of prosecuting or defending a suit personally, such as a minor or a lunatic. See Order 32 and compare also Contract Act, Section 11.

4. "As to any proceeding." — The Section does not apply to an agreement merely relating to the conduct of a suit, e. g., an agreement that an issue in a suit (not the suit itself) should be determined by the oath of the defendant.<sup>1</sup> See the Indian Oaths Act, Section 11. Such an agreement entered into by a guardian or a next friend will bind a minor although it was not sanctioned by the Court. But an agreement as to a matter beyond the mere conduct of a litigation is not binding on the minor unless made with the leave of the Court. The following are some examples of such agreements —

- (a) Agreement to compromise a suit.<sup>2</sup>
- (b) Agreement to withdraw a suit.<sup>3</sup>
- (c) Agreement to refer a suit to arbitration.<sup>4</sup>
- (d) Agreement not to appeal.<sup>5</sup>
- (e) Waiver of objection to competency of Judge on account of his personal interest in the litigation.<sup>6</sup>
- (f) Waiver of objection to irregular procedure.<sup>7</sup>
- (g) Waiver of right of minor to compensation in land acquisition case.<sup>8</sup>

5. Leave must be express. — The leave of the Court must be expressly given. This was the rule even under the former Code.<sup>1</sup> In this respect the English Law is different.<sup>2</sup> O. 32 R. 7 requires that the leave must be expressly recorded in the proceedings.

148. [New.] Where any period is fixed or granted by the Court<sup>1</sup> for the doing of any act prescribed or allowed by this Code,<sup>5</sup> the Court<sup>10</sup> may, in its discretion,<sup>6</sup> from time to time, enlarge such period, even though the period originally fixed or granted may have expired.<sup>7</sup>

1. "Where any period is fixed or granted by the Court." — The Section applies only where any period is fixed or granted by the Court. It does not apply when a period is fixed by law.<sup>1</sup> See, for example, the following instances —

- (1) Law of Limitation. — A Court cannot extend a period fixed by the law of limitation.<sup>2</sup>
- (2) Civil Procedure Code, Section 55 (4). — The period of one month fixed by Section 55 (4) cannot be extended.<sup>3</sup>
- (3) Civil Procedure Code, O. 21 R. 92 (2). — The period of thirty days prescribed by O. 21 R. 92 cannot be extended.<sup>4</sup>
- (4) Rule 13 of the Oudh Rules of Practice. — The Court cannot extend the time for deposit of printing charges.<sup>5</sup>
- (5) Rule 40 of Bombay High Court Appellate Side Rules. — This Rule allows a period of one month for an application for fresh notice to the respondent in an appeal. It has been held by the Bombay High Court that time could be extended under Section 148.<sup>6</sup> But the point as to the time not being fixed by the Court was not taken before their Lordships in this case.
- (6) Civil Procedure Code, O. 45 R. 7. — Under the former Code in which there was no Section corresponding to Section 148, it was held by the Privy Council that Section 602 (O. 45 R. 7), was directory and not mandatory and that hence, the Court could extend the time for cogent reasons.<sup>7</sup> Section 148 would now impliedly exclude such a power.<sup>8</sup> It has, however, been held in the under-mentioned cases<sup>9</sup> that the Court could extend the time fixed by O. 45 R. 7; Section 148 was not adverted to in those cases. It is submitted that the said decisions are not correct. It may also be noted that O. 45 R. 7 has been amended in 1920 by Act XXVI of 1920, expressly giving a limited power of extending the period fixed by the Section.

2. Extension of time fixed by decree. — The general principle enacted in the Section is that, where by an order time is granted by the Court for doing any act prescribed or allowed by the Code, it may be extended by the Court from time to time.<sup>1</sup> There are, however, two important exceptions to this general rule —

- (1) Where the Court ceases to have jurisdiction over the matter, after the order granting the period is passed. Thus, where a Court orders a plaint to be returned under O. 7 R. 10 for presentation to the proper Court and in that order a period is fixed within which such presentation is to be made, the period cannot be extended, as, after the order for return, the Court has no jurisdiction over the matter.<sup>2</sup> Similarly, where the order fixing time finally disposes of the matter and the Court has no longer seisin of the matter, the time fixed cannot be enlarged.<sup>3</sup> Thus, where an order provides that a suit dismissed for default should be restored to the file on condition that the plaintiff pays the costs of the opposite party on or before a particular date and directs that in case of default, the application for restoration is to stand dismissed, the time cannot be enlarged under this Section.<sup>4</sup>

The second exception above noted is based upon another general rule which is enacted in O. 20 R. 3, that when once a decree has been signed it shall not afterwards be altered or added to save as provided by Section 152 or on review. Section 148 cannot be allowed to operate so as to nullify this rule and it, therefore, follows that where a period is fixed or granted by a decree it cannot be extended by the Court,<sup>6</sup> though the decree itself may be varied or reversed by the Appellate Court under O. 41 R. 32 by granting a different period to that fixed by the lower Court.<sup>7</sup> There has been, however, a conflict of decisions on the point due to the general principle abovementioned not being always kept in view. It was held by the Patna High Court in the undermentioned case<sup>8</sup> that where time is fixed for payment in a pre-emption decree, it could be extended by the Court. The decision was based simply on S. 148 without any reference to O. 20 R. 3. The correctness of the decision was, however, doubted in a later case<sup>9</sup> of the same High Court. The High Courts of Madras,<sup>10</sup> Calcutta<sup>11</sup> and Rangoon<sup>12</sup> have held that where a decree for specific performance of a contract is passed on condition of a party paying a certain sum by a certain date, the Court could extend the time. The decisions rest their view on the provisions of Section 35 (c) of the Specific Relief Act, 1877, and on the view that a decree for specific performance of a contract on certain conditions is in the nature of a preliminary decree, the original Court keeping control over the action and having full powers to make any just and necessary orders therein including extension of the time fixed by the decree. The Patna High Court<sup>13</sup> and the Oudh Chief Court<sup>14</sup> hold that the time fixed, even in a decree for specific performance, cannot be extended by the Court under Section 148.

The rule that time granted by a decree cannot be extended by the Court has also got an exception and that is furnished by Order 34 Rules 2, 4 and 7 (as amended by Act XXI of 1929) of the Code. Under those provisions the time fixed by a preliminary decree for sale, redemption or foreclosure may, at any time, before the passing of the final decree, be extended by the Court from time to time. For another exception to the rule, see Note 3 below.

Where a plaintiff in whose favour a conditional decree is passed, neither fulfils the condition within the time allowed nor applies for extension of time, he cannot execute the decree.<sup>15</sup>

3. Extension of time fixed by consent decree. — Another exception to the rule that time fixed by a decree cannot be extended by the Court under Section 148 is furnished by consent decrees. It has been held in the undermentioned cases<sup>1</sup> that a Court can extend the time fixed in a consent decree for the doing of an act directed thereby, where time is not of the essence of the contract of compromise. The reason is that a consent decree cannot have greater validity than the compromise on which it is based, and hence, the Court can, in the exercise of its equitable jurisdiction, grant such relief against forfeiture as it might have granted if there had been no consent decree and a suit had been instituted to enforce the compromise. The Allahabad,<sup>2</sup> Lahore<sup>3</sup> and Patna<sup>4</sup> High Courts and the Oudh Chief Court<sup>5</sup> have held that the general rule holds good even in the case of consent decrees and that, therefore, the time fixed by the decree could not be extended.

Section 148
Notes 3-5.

4. Extension of time fixed by award. — A valid award is final and conclusive as between the parties to it and a Court cannot interfere with any portion of it. Hence, the Court cannot extend the time fixed by an award.<sup>1</sup> It may also be noted that time fixed by an award is not time fixed by a Court and hence Section 148 does not apply to it. (See Note 1 above.)

5. "Act prescribed or allowed by this Code." — The Section applies only where time is fixed for doing an act prescribed or allowed by the Code.<sup>1</sup> Where a period is fixed by the Court to do a particular act under its inherent powers, it is an act allowed by Section 151 of this Code and therefore this Section will apply to such a case.<sup>2</sup> "Code" includes not only the body of the Code but also the Schedules and the Rules made under Section 122 or Section 125 [see Section 2 (18)]. See, for instance, the following provisions :—

- (1) Section 55 (4). — Security for the production of the judgment-debtor within the time fixed by Court.<sup>3</sup>
- (2) Section 143. — Time for payment of postage.

Section 148
Notes 5-6

The Section does not apply when time is fixed for doing an act not prescribed or allowed by the Code.<sup>5</sup>

But in so far as the provisions of the Code are made applicable to proceedings under any other Act, the Section applies to steps to be taken under such Act. Thus, according to the High Courts of Madras, Lahore and Nagpur, an Insolvency Court can extend the time fixed for applying for discharge, even after the time originally fixed has expired,<sup>6</sup> though the High Courts of Rangoon and Patna have taken a contrary view.<sup>7</sup> Further, even without recourse to Section 148 it may be possible to construe a particular Section in such a way as to admit of an extension of the time fixed by the Court. Thus, it was held under the former Code that a Court could extend the time fixed for security for costs of appeal under S. 549 (now O. 41 R. 10),<sup>8</sup> or for paying deficit court-fee under Section 54 (now O. 7 R. 11).<sup>9</sup> On similar reasoning, it has been held that a Court can extend the time fixed for payment of deficit court-fee under the Court-fees Act, Section 10 clause (2)<sup>10</sup> or Section 11,<sup>11</sup> or for deposit of one-fifth of the purchase-money in a suit for pre-emption under Section 22 (4) of the Punjab Pre-emption Act.<sup>12</sup> Paragraph 8 of Schedule II expressly confers on the Court the power to extend the time fixed for making an award, even after the expiry of the period originally fixed.<sup>13</sup> Hence, there is no necessity for resort to Section 148 for extension of time in such a case.

See also the undermentioned case.<sup>14</sup>

6. Discretion of Court. — The power to enlarge time under this Section is discretionary.<sup>1</sup> The Appellate Court should not interfere with the discretion of a Court under Section 148 except on very strong grounds.<sup>2</sup> A Court passing orders for extension of time should be taken, on the record as it stands, to have exercised its discretion as provided by the Section and an Appellate Court cannot go into the question whether, as a matter of fact, the lower Court did exercise such discretion.<sup>8</sup>

Section 148:
Notes 6-9:

7. Extension of time after the expiry of the period originally fixed. — The Section empowers a Court to extend the time even after the expiry of the period originally fixed.<sup>1</sup> In this respect it gives effect to the undermentioned rulings.<sup>2</sup>

8. Implied extension of time. — No express order is necessary for extension of time. Such extension may be inferred from the fact that the Court has actually allowed a thing to be done beyond the prescribed time.<sup>1</sup>

9. Extension of time by appeal being preferred. — Suppose a decree of the primary Court which fixes a date for the performance of an act directed thereby is appealed against, and the appeal is dismissed. Is the period originally fixed, in such a case, to be calculated from the first Court's decree or from the appellate decree? On this point there is a conflict of decisions. It has been held by the High Court of Bombay<sup>1</sup> and the Chief Court of the Punjab<sup>2</sup> that the period should be calculated from the date of the appellate decree, the reason given being that the lower Court's decree is merged in that of the Appellate Court and though the latter decree may not expressly enlarge the period originally fixed, it should be deemed to do so impliedly. On the other hand, it has been held by the Madras,<sup>3</sup> Allahabad<sup>4</sup> and Patna<sup>5</sup> High Courts and the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Nagpur<sup>6</sup> that though the lower Court's decree is merged in the appellate decree, in the absence of express provision extending the time, the appellate decree should be taken as confirming the lower Court's decree as it stands and cannot be held to extend by implication the period fixed thereby. Opinion in the Calcutta High Court is divided, some cases taking the Bombay view<sup>7</sup> and some the Madras view.<sup>8</sup>

prosecution,<sup>9</sup> or is withdrawn,<sup>10</sup> or summarily dismissed under O. 41 R. 11,<sup>11</sup> there is no decree of the Appellate Court in which the lower Court's decree may be said to have merged, and hence the period fixed does not get a fresh start from the decree of the Appellate Court.

Where a decree awarding future mesne profits is confirmed in appeal, the three years' period under O. 20 R. 12 runs from the appellate decree.<sup>12</sup> The reason is that the term "decree" in O. 20 R. 12 refers to the executable decree in a case, and where an appeal is preferred against a decree, the only executable decree is that of the Appellate Court, whether it affirms, reverses or modifies the lower Court's decree. See also Note 5 to O. 34 R. 3, infra.

10. Court to which application for extension should be made. — Where an appeal has been preferred from a decree, the only Court that can extend the time fixed by it, assuming that the case is one in which time can be extended, is the Appellate Court.<sup>1</sup> A fortiori the lower Court has no jurisdiction to extend the time fixed in an appellate decree.<sup>2</sup> But it has been held by the Rangoon High Court that where an appeal has been dismissed, the trial Court has power to enlarge the time fixed by the order appealed from.<sup>3</sup> See also the undermentioned case.<sup>4</sup>

11. Appeal. — No appeal lies from an order under this Section as it is neither a decree nor an appealable order under Section 104.<sup>1</sup>

After a final decree, the Court cannot extend the time fixed by it under S. 148. Hence, if the Court does extend the time it should be deemed to be acting not under Section 148 but under Section 47, and its order is therefore appealable as a decree.<sup>2</sup>

12. Revision. — An order under this Section is not appealable but is open to revision provided the conditions of Section 115 are satisfied.<sup>1</sup> See Note 11 above. But

1. Legislative changes. — This Section corresponds to Section 582A introduced into the old Code by Act IV of 1892. The material changes in the present Section are the following —

- (1) Section 582A applied only to appeals and applications for review. The present Section applies to all documents chargeable with court-fees. See Note 4.
- (2) The insufficiency of the stamp must under Section 582A have been caused by mistake on the part of the appellant or applicant for review as to the amount of the requisite stamp. There is no such restriction in the present Section. See Note 5.

2. Scope of the Section. — It is provided under the Court-fees Act, 1870, Sections 4 and 5, that no document chargeable with court-fee under that Act shall be filed, or recorded in any Court of Justice, unless the court-fee payable in respect thereof is paid. The institution of a suit or other proceeding or the presentation of a document will not be a legal institution or presentation if the fee chargeable under law is not paid at the time of such institution or presentation. This Section enacts an exception to that rule by empowering the Court to allow a party to pay the requisite fee at any stage after the proceeding has been filed, and by providing that such payment shall have the same effect as if it had been made in the first instance. The result is that where a proceeding is instituted within the period of limitation, with an insufficient court-fee, it will not be time-barred, provided the full fee is paid with the leave of the Court under this Section although, at the time the full fee is paid, the period of limitation has expired.<sup>1</sup>

But the payment of fee under this Section cannot be claimed by a party as of right; it is in the discretion of the Court to allow or not such payment. See Note 5.

3. Payment of court-fees after the period of limitation. — It is only where the deficit is made good within the time allowed by the Court that the payment will have the force or effect as if it had been paid on the date of presentation.<sup>1</sup> If the payment is made beyond the time allowed, the presentation will be deemed to be made only on the date such deficit is made good. If that date itself is within limitation, the suit will not be barred.<sup>2</sup> If that date is beyond limitation, the suit will be barred unless the time originally allowed is extended by the Court up to the date of payment under Section 148 of the Code.<sup>3</sup> But such extension need not be by an express order. It may be inferred from the acceptance of the court-fees by the Court after the prescribed period.<sup>4</sup>

4. "Any document." — The corresponding Section of the Code of 1882 (Section 582A) applied only to appeals and applications for review. This Section is general in its terms and applies to all documents chargeable with court-fees under the Court-fees Act, such as plaints, memoranda of appeal or cross-objections, written statement claiming set-off<sup>1</sup> or making a counter-claim, etc. Thus the Section applies to an application to set aside an award.<sup>2</sup>

4a. "For the time being in force." — The court-fee payable according to the law "for the time being in force" means the court-fee payable according to the scale which was in force when the document was filed and not according to the scale which is in force when the payment is made.<sup>1</sup>

5. "Discretion of Court." — There are certain cases in which the Court is bound to give some time for making up the deficient court-fee. Thus under O. 7 R. 11 (c) where a plaint is insufficiently stamped, the Court is bound to grant some time to supply the deficient court-fee.<sup>1</sup> In all other cases the Court has a discretion under the Section to allow the court-fee to be paid at any stage. The High Courts of Calcutta,<sup>2</sup> Lahore<sup>3</sup> and Patna<sup>4</sup> and the Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court<sup>5</sup> have held that this discretion cannot be exercised in favour of a party who has not been bona fide, that is, who is not under any honest mistake or doubt or who has not made an honest attempt to comply with the law. Mere poverty or ignorance is not a ground for indulgence under the Section.<sup>6</sup> The reason is that where an appeal is not filed in time with a proper court-fee, the appeal becomes barred and the respondent gets a valuable right. The Court should not, therefore, exercise its discretion under this Section to his prejudice except where sufficient grounds exist for the non-payment of the full court-fee in the first instance. The Bombay High Court<sup>7</sup> has, on the other hand, held that the discretion is not limited to cases where the party is under a bona fide misunderstanding of the law as to valuation. This view is based on the fact that the present Section omits the provision which occurred in Section 582A of the old Code restricting the exercise of discretion to cases where the insufficiency of the stamp is caused by mistake on the part of the appellant or applicant. It has been held in a recent Full Bench decision of the Lahore High Court that the discretion conferred on the Court by this Section is normally expected to be exercised in favour of the litigant except in cases of contumacy or positive mala fides or reasons of a similar kind.<sup>8</sup> The Peshawar Judicial Commissioner's Court<sup>9</sup> also has held that where the failure to pay the requisite court-fee is due to a bona fide mistake, the Court can allow the deficiency to be made up under this Section.

Where a party has been contesting with some show of justification the correctness of the order requiring him to pay an enhanced court-fee, he should be allowed reasonable time in which to pay the deficiency on an adverse order being finally passed against him.<sup>10</sup>

6. Whole or any part of any fee. — The discretion under Section 149 applies not only where the court-fee paid is not sufficient but also where no court-fee has been paid at all.<sup>1</sup> It has been held by the Madras High Court that Section 149 contemplates cases in which payment of duty is insufficient ab initio. Hence, it does not apply where a plaintiff is allowed to sue on the basis of a tentative valuation, as in suits for accounts or mesne profits, and, on a decree for a higher amount being passed, is required under Court-fees Act, Section 11, to pay additional court-fees.<sup>2</sup> It is however open to a Court on the construction of the Court-fees Act, Section 11, itself to enlarge the period fixed for payment of additional court-fee under that Section.<sup>3</sup>

7. "At any stage." — Under the former Code it was held by the High Courts of Bombay,<sup>1</sup> Calcutta<sup>2</sup> and Madras,<sup>3</sup> the Chief Courts of the Punjab<sup>4</sup> and Lower Burma<sup>5</sup> that where the deficiency in court-fee is supplied after the period of limitation but within the time allowed by the Court, the suit or appeal was not barred by limitation. The reason given was that the suit or appeal should be deemed to be instituted on the date of the original presentation of the plaint or memorandum of appeal and not on the date on which the deficit court-fee was made up. The Allahabad High Court did not accept this view.<sup>6</sup> According to that Court, the presentation of an insufficiently stamped plaint or memorandum of appeal was not a valid presentation, and the suit or appeal could be deemed to be instituted only when the full court-fee was paid. But, as has been seen in Note 1 above, in the case of appeals and applications for review a different rule was provided by Section 582A which was introduced into the Code by Act IV of 1892.<sup>7</sup> The Section superseded the undermentioned decisions which held that a Court could not allow deficient court-fee on an appeal<sup>8</sup> or an application for review<sup>9</sup> to be made good after the expiry of limitation unless the memorandum of appeal or application for review had been received through the mistake of the Court or of an officer thereof. The principle embodied in the Section was extended to plaints in the Full Bench case of Hari Ram v. Akbar Hussain.<sup>10</sup> The learned Judges in that case relied upon Section 28 of the Court-fees Act which enables deficit court-fees to be made up where insufficiently stamped documents have been received or filed through mistake or inadvertence. Their Lordships interpreted the expression "mistake or inadvertence" in Section 28 so as to include the mistake not only of the Court or its officers but also of the party. The present Section gives legislative effect to this view and enables a defective document to be retrospectively validated at any stage if the insufficiency of the stamp is subsequently made up within the time allowed by the Court.<sup>11</sup>

Notes 7-8

The Court can also enlarge the time even after the lapse of the period originally fixed by it.<sup>12</sup> (See Section 148.)

Deficit court-fees on a plaint may be allowed to be made good even in appeal.<sup>13</sup> But it is desirable that in such cases the matter is disposed of at the earliest possible moment after the deficit is discovered.<sup>14</sup>

As to the power of a Court to extend time for payment of court-fees fixed by its own decree, see Note 2 to Section 148.

Where no time is fixed in the decree for the payment of the court-fee which is payable under it, the executing Court can allow time for such payment.<sup>15</sup> Where a decree is passed on condition that a certain court-fee is deposited and the decree-holder deposits the same after three years and the Court accepts it, it cannot be said that execution is barred by limitation inasmuch as the decree is complete only when the court-fee is deposited and limitation cannot begin to run under Article 182 of the Limitation Act until there is a decree capable of execution.<sup>16</sup>

8. Power of Appellate or Revisional Court to interfere with the discretion of the lower Court. — An Appellate Court should not interfere with the discretion of the lower Court under the Section except on very strong grounds.<sup>1</sup> Where a Judge has allowed deficient court-fee to be made up under this Section, he must be taken, on the record as it stands, to have exercised his discretion in the matter and it is not open to the Appellate Court to go into the question as to whether he exercised his discretion.<sup>2</sup> Nor is it open even for the Judge while granting time for the payment of deficit court-fee to leave open the question of limitation.<sup>3</sup> But where a Judge refuses to allow a party to make up deficient court-fee under this Section, there must be something to show that he did exercise his discretion in the matter.<sup>4</sup> In a recent Special Bench decision of the Patna High Court<sup>5</sup> it has been held that where the lower Court has exercised its discretion under this Section in an outrageous fashion, the aggrieved party must immediately move the High Court in revision and if he does not do so, he cannot afterwards impeach the order of the Court in the appeal from the final decision. (It may, however, be noted that there is a conflict of decisions as to the power of the High Court to interfere in revision with interlocutory orders: see Section 115 Note 5.)

9. Plaints and memoranda of appeals. — A person is not entitled, as a matter of right, to make up deficient court-fee under this Section. It is entirely left to the discretion of the Court to allow him to do so or not. But in a case of a plaint insufficiently stamped, the Court is bound under O. 7 R. 11 to allow some time to make up the deficiency, provided the plaint has been presented within the period of limitation.<sup>1</sup> Does the same rule apply to appeals? On this point there is a conflict of decisions. See Note 6 to O. 7 R. 11 for a full discussion of the subject.

10. Application for leave to sue or appeal as pauper. — (1) Where an application for leave to sue or appeal as a pauper is rejected, can the Court allow the court-fees to be paid under the present Section so as to treat the suit or appeal as filed on the date of the filing of the pauper application and not on the date on which the court-fee is paid?

(2) Has the Court power to convert an application for leave to sue or appeal as a pauper into a suit or appeal and by allowing time for the payment of court-fees on such suit or appeal under this Section treat the same as filed on the date on which the application for leave was made?

For a discussion of these questions, see Notes to O. 33 R. 7 and O. 44 R. 1.

11. Conversion of proceedings. — When an application is made under Section 95 of the Code, the Court may allow it to be converted into a suit on payment of the requisite court-fee. In such a case, the suit will be deemed to be instituted when the application was made and not when the court-fee is paid.<sup>1</sup>

Similarly, the High Court can, in a fit case, allow an application for revision to be converted into an appeal upon payment of the requisite court-fee although the period of limitation for an appeal may have expired, provided that it had not expired when the application for revision was filed.<sup>2</sup>

12. Extension of time by admission Court. — Where the admission Court allows deficit court-fee to be paid after the expiry of limitation subject to objections by the other side at the hearing of the appeal, the question can be gone into at the hearing.<sup>1</sup> But where the admission Court allows the deficit court-fee to be paid after time, without any such reservation and the respondent does not object as soon as he receives notice of the admission, he will be precluded from raising the objection at the time of hearing of the appeal.<sup>3</sup>

13. Appeal. — An appeal lies against an order dismissing an appeal on the ground of deficiency of court-fee, the appellant having failed to make good the deficiency within the time allowed for the purpose. Such an order is not a mere order of dismissal for default under O. 41 R. 19 and hence is a decree.<sup>1</sup>

14. Revision. — It has been held by the High Courts of Calcutta and Patna<sup>1</sup> that an order requiring a plaintiff to pay additional court-fee within certain time is not one that would be interfered with in revision, inasmuch as he has another remedy open to him, namely, an appeal against dismissal of suit if the order is not complied with. The High Court of Madras<sup>2</sup> has, on the other hand, held that, where a Judge on an erroneous view of the court-fee payable refuses to proceed with the suit until the proper court-fee is paid, it amounts to a refusal to exercise jurisdiction and the order is therefore revisable. The High Court of Lahore<sup>3</sup> has held that an order by a Judge refusing to extend time for payment of deficit court-fee under this Section on the ground that he had no power to do so is open to revision. The High Court of Allahabad<sup>4</sup> has held that an order refusing to give time to a party to make up the deficiency is not open to revision as the order does not amount to the decision of a "case" within the meaning of Section 115 of the Code.

150. [New.] Save as otherwise provided, where the business of any Court is transferred to any other Court, the Court to which the business is so transferred shall have the same powers and shall perform the same duties as those respectively conferred and imposed by or under this Code upon the Court from which the business was so transferred.

Synopsis

1. "Save as otherwise provided."
2. "Where the business of any Court is transferred to any other Court."
3. Abolition of Court.
4. Powers and duties of Court to which business is transferred.

1. "Save as otherwise provided." — The mere fact that the Court by which a certain power is to be exercised, is specified does not preclude any Court to which the business of the former Court is "transferred," from exercising the power under Section 150, unless it is expressly or impliedly provided that no Court other than the one specified can exercise the power. The following are some of the cases bearing upon this question —

Execution proceedings. — Section 38 provides that a decree may be executed either by the Court which passed it, or by the Court to which it is sent for execution. Section 37 defines what a "Court which passed the decree" includes. A decree is passed by a Court A. The business of Court A is transferred to Court B within the meaning of Section 150. But Court B does not come within any of the categories mentioned in Sections 37 and 38. Nevertheless Court B can execute the decree passed by Court A. The reason is that there is no express or implied exclusion of the competency of any Court not mentioned in Sections 37 and 38 to execute the decree.<sup>1</sup> As to whether a particular area concerned in a suit is transferred to another Court, see Note 5 to Section 37 and also Note 2 below.

Application to set aside ex parte decree. — Order 9 Rule 13 provides that an application to set aside an ex parte decree may be made to the Court by which the decree was passed. This does not mean that no other Court can set aside the ex parte decree. Hence, a Court to which the business of another Court is transferred under Section 150 can set aside the ex parte decree passed by the latter Court.<sup>2</sup>

Power to punish for disobedience of temporary injunction. — O. 39 R. 2 (2) empowers the "Court granting an injunction" to punish persons for disobeying the

- ('39) 69 Cal L Jour 379 (380). (If without an application for review, a Court sets aside its own previous order rejecting a plaint for non-payment of deficit court-fee and gives a further extension of time under S. 149, O. P. C., its subsequent order is not a nullity but remains a perfectly good order until it is set aside by a superior Court or in proper proceedings.)

injunction. This does not mean that no other Court has the power. Hence, a Court to which the business of another Court is "transferred" within Section 150 can punish for disobedience of an injunction granted by the latter Court.<sup>3</sup>

Power to demand inventory under the Probate and Administration Act, 1881. — Section 98 of the Probate and Administration Act, 1881 (corresponding to the present Section 317 of the Indian Succession Act, 1925) imposes on the grantee of a probate, the duty of furnishing an inventory to the Court which issued the probate. The power of the Court which could grant probate to receive the inventory was held in the undermentioned case<sup>4</sup> to be saved from the operation of Section 150.

2, "Where the business of any Court is transferred to any other Court."

— A, a Munsif in Bengal (whose ordinary pecuniary jurisdiction extends only up to Rs. 1000) who is specially empowered to try suits up to Rs. 2000, passes a preliminary decree in a mortgage suit for over Rs. 1000. A is then transferred and his successor B is not similarly empowered. The final decree is, therefore, passed by the Subordinate Judge having jurisdiction in the matter. B also is transferred and C, who is specially empowered succeeds. As soon as C succeeds to B, the business of the Subordinate Judge's Court, so far as it related to suits up to the value of Rs. 2000, must be taken to have been transferred to the Court of C and that Court is, therefore, competent to execute the decree.<sup>1</sup> Where a particular area is transferred from the jurisdiction of Court A to that of Court B, does it effect a "transfer of business" from Court A to Court B within the meaning of Section 150? The answer to this question depends upon what exactly is meant by a "transfer of business." It is clear that unless a business is removed from the hands of one Court and placed in the hands of another, there cannot be a "transfer" of business, and that a business cannot be said to have been removed or transferred from Court A to Court B if Court A continues to have power to deal with that business. Now it is a general principle of law that where a Court has jurisdiction to entertain a suit or proceeding at the time of its institution, such jurisdiction is not lost by the subsequent transfer of the area or territory with reference to which the suit or proceeding was instituted.<sup>2</sup> In other words, the suit or proceeding pending in one Court at the time of the transfer of the local area is not removed or transferred to the Court to which the area is transferred. It follows, therefore, that there is no "transfer of business" effected by the transfer of a particular area so far as pending suits and proceedings are concerned. This is the decision of the Madras High Court in the undermentioned case.<sup>3</sup> A contrary view has, however, been expressed in the cases noted below.<sup>4</sup> Some of these cases hold that the transfer of an area operates as transfer of all the business, pending or otherwise, in that area to the transferee Court.<sup>5</sup> Some of them also hold that the Court in which the suit or proceeding was instituted would at the same time continue to have jurisdiction thereon.<sup>6</sup> This is an impossible position. As has been seen already, where a business is transferred from Court A to Court B, Court A has no longer that business before it and has no power to deal with it. If, on the other hand, Court A continues to have power over a particular business it cannot be said to have been transferred from it to another Court. For all the above reasons the decisions taking the second of the two views set forth above are not correct and have been overruled by a Full Bench of the Madras High Court in the undermentioned case.<sup>7</sup> The Allahabad High Court has held in the undermentioned case<sup>8</sup> that the Section cannot be invoked in a case where there has only been a transfer of jurisdiction as to future business subject to an express reservation as regards pending cases. Thus, a Court in which a suit was pending at the time of the transfer has exclusive jurisdiction to entertain an application for restitution arising out of such a suit.

There is a conflict of decisions as to whether an assignment of business by the District Judge under the Civil Courts Act is a transfer of business within the meaning of Section 150. The Calcutta<sup>9</sup> and Patna<sup>10</sup> High Courts hold that it is not. The High Court of Madras<sup>11</sup> has, on the other hand, held dissenting from the Calcutta decision, that the word "transfer" is not inapplicable to a case where the District Judge fixes the jurisdiction of the Court under the Civil Courts Act, and transfers the whole of the business within the area to it.

3. Abolition of Court. — Where a Court is abolished, its proceedings can be continued by the Court which would have jurisdiction to entertain the suit if it was instituted at the time when the proceedings are sought to be continued.<sup>1</sup> (See Section 37 of the Code.) If a new Court is established in the place with the same jurisdiction as the old one, it can continue the proceedings<sup>2</sup> unless they have been transferred to some

It is submitted that there is no reason to limit the scope of Section 150 in this way.

1. Inherent power. — In administering justice as prescribed by a Code there are two necessary shortcomings —

(1) There will always be cases and circumstances which are not covered by the express provisions of the Code wherein justice has to be done.<sup>1</sup> The reason is that the Legislature can foresee only the most natural and ordinary events and no rules can

Note 1

(2) The prescribed rules of procedure may be abused, or so used as to give a mere formality, the significance of substantive effect and thus obstruct instead of facilitating the administration of justice.<sup>3</sup>

It cannot be said that in the above circumstances Courts have no power to do justice, or redress a wrong merely because no express provision of the Code<sup>4</sup> or reported decision of a Court<sup>5</sup> can be found to meet the requirements of a case. As observed by Mahmood, J., in Narsingh Das v. Mangal Dubey<sup>6</sup>:

"Courts are not to act upon the principle that every procedure is to be taken as prohibited unless it is expressly provided for by the Code, but on the converse principle that every procedure is to be understood as permissible till it is shown to be prohibited by the law. As a matter of general principle prohibitions cannot be presumed."

Every Court, whether a Civil Court or otherwise<sup>7</sup> must, therefore, in the absence of express provision in the Code for that purpose, be deemed to possess, as inherent in its very constitution, all such powers as are necessary to do the right and to undo a wrong in the course of the administration of justice.<sup>8</sup> It has inherent power to determine how its proceedings should be conducted.<sup>9</sup> It was held in Hukum Chand v. Kamalanand<sup>10</sup> that the Court has inherent power —

"ex debito justitiae to consolidate; postpone pending the decision of a selected action; and to advance the hearing of suits; to stay on the ground of convenience cross suits; to ascertain whether the proper parties are before it; to enquire whether a plaintiff is entitled to sue as an adult; to entertain the application of a third person to be made a party; to add [Section 32 (1882) not being exhaustive] a party; to allow a defence in forma pauperis; to decide one question and to reserve another for investigation, the Privy Council pointing out that it did not require any provision of the Code to authorise a Judge to do what in this matter was justice and for the advantage of the parties; to remand a suit in a case to which neither Section 562 nor Section 566 (1882) applies; to stay the drawing up of the Court's own orders or to suspend their operation, if the necessities of justice so require: to stay, apart from the question whether the case falls within Section 545, the carrying out of a preliminary order pending appeal; to stay proceedings in a lower Court pending appeal and to appoint temporary guardian of a minor upon such stay; to apply the principles of res judicata to cases not falling within Sections 13 and 14 of the Code (1882) and so forth."

In Nandkishore v. Ramgolam,<sup>11</sup> further instances were added, viz. —

"Punishing for contempt of Court committed when the Court is not sitting: deciding questions of jurisdiction though the Court is ultimately found not to have jurisdiction over the suit: directing a party who has applied for leave to appeal to His Majesty in Council to pay costs on the dismissal of his application: amending decrees or orders: granting restitution in cases of reversal of execution sales and orders in execution proceedings: restraining by injunction a person from proceeding with a suit in the Small Cause Court: staying proceedings pursuant to its own order in view of an intended appeal; and treating an application for revision as an appeal and vice versa."

The Court has an inherent power under such circumstances to act according to justice, equity and good conscience<sup>12</sup> especially in India, where every Court is a Court of Equity as well as of Law.<sup>13</sup>

This Section does not confer any new powers on the Courts but only saves their inherent powers to make such orders as may be necessary for the ends of justice or to prevent abuse of the process of the Court.<sup>14</sup> The object of enacting the Section is to show that the powers expressly conferred by the Code apply only so far as they go, but cannot restrict the scope of the Court's inherent powers to do complete and substantial justice<sup>15</sup> for the administration of which alone Courts exist.<sup>16</sup>

The inherent powers of the Court being very wide and indefinable<sup>17</sup> the limits of such jurisdiction should be carefully guarded and its exercise in an arbitrary and capricious manner effectively prevented.<sup>18</sup> It has been seen that the inherent power of a Court is recognized only to meet those cases for which no provision is made by the Code. It follows, therefore, that where there are express provisions of law applicable to a particular case, there is no inherent power in the Court to override them.<sup>19</sup> The words "nothing in this Code shall be deemed to limit or otherwise affect" do not mean that the Code stands repealed where a Court decides to exercise its inherent powers, for the inherent powers can be exercised only where there is no express provision of the Code.<sup>20</sup> Another limitation on the exercise of such power by the Court is that it must be consistent with sound general principles of law, and with the intention of the Legislature.<sup>21</sup>

The inherent powers of a Court under Section 151 can be exercised, as the Section itself indicates, only —

- (1) for the ends of justice, or
- (2) to prevent the abuse of the process of the Court.<sup>22</sup>

2. Court cannot override express provisions of law. — It has been seen in Note 1 above that the inherent power of a Court exists only where there is no express provision of law applicable to the case.<sup>1</sup> Thus, where there is a specific prohibition of a particular act or order, the Court cannot do the act or make the order under its inherent powers.<sup>3</sup> The following are instances of express prohibitions of law which cannot be contravened by a Court under its inherent powers —

1. Section 34 (2) of the Code. — Where a decree is silent as to further interest after date of decree, the Court cannot grant it under its inherent powers.<sup>3</sup>

2. Sections 104 and 105 of the Code. — No appeal can be allowed from a non-appellable order, under the inherent powers of the Court.<sup>4</sup>

A Court cannot, therefore, under its inherent powers, set aside its own decree or recall an order made by it previously or question the validity of a decree in execution.<sup>5</sup> A contrary view has, however, been expressed in the undermentioned cases.<sup>6</sup>

3a. Order 21, Rules 58, 60 of the Code. — An order under Rule 58 of Order 21, even though it be a dismissal for default is conclusive until set aside by a suit under Rule 63; the Court cannot set aside the order under its inherent powers.<sup>7</sup>

4. Order 21 Rule 78 of the Code. — A Court cannot set aside a sale of moveable property for an irregularity in publishing or conducting the sale.<sup>8</sup>

5. Section 9 of the Specific Relief Act, 1877. — No application for review can be entertained in respect of any decree or order passed in a suit under Section 9 of the Act.<sup>9</sup>

aside under its inherent powers.<sup>23</sup> But the High Court of Bombay<sup>24</sup> holds that even in cases within the scope of O. 9 Rr. 9 and 13 the Court has inherent power to act and set aside the decree or restore the suit, although the conditions mentioned in the said Rules are not satisfied. It is submitted that this view is not correct, inasmuch as it is the basic principle that the inherent power is recognized only in order to meet those cases for which no provisions have been made by the Legislature.

Where an application under O. 9 R. 9 is itself dismissed for default, or an execution application is so dismissed, or an ex parte order is passed in execution proceedings, the question has arisen whether the application could be restored or the order set aside under the Court's inherent powers. That question again depends on the applicability or otherwise of O. 9 Rr. 9 and 13 to such proceedings by virtue of Section 141. If, by virtue of Section 141, O. 9 Rr. 9 and 13 apply to such proceedings, then there is no scope for the application of the inherent power of the Court.<sup>25</sup> If Section 141 does not apply to such proceedings, the inherent power can be invoked in proper cases.<sup>26</sup> The Allahabad and Bombay High Courts have also held that there is inherent power to restore such proceedings even if Section 141 applies to such proceedings.<sup>27</sup> This view, as has been mentioned in Note 1, is not correct. See also the undermentioned decision<sup>28</sup> and Note 2 to Order 9 'General'.

2. Interim injunctions and appointment of receivers. — In cases falling within the scope of Section 94 and O. 39 R. 1 and Order 40, there is, according to the general rule, no inherent power to grant an injunction or to appoint a receiver.<sup>29</sup> But in cases outside the scope of those rules, e. g., arbitration proceedings, the Court can grant such reliefs under its inherent powers.<sup>30</sup>

3. Amendments. — See Section 152, infra.

4. Remand. — All the High Courts except the High Court of Allahabad are agreed that an Appellate Court has an inherent power of remand in cases not covered by O. 41 R. 23.<sup>31</sup> See Note 10 to Order 41 Rule 23.

5. Restitution. — "It is inherent in the general jurisdiction of the Court to act rightly and fairly according to circumstances towards all parties involved."<sup>32</sup> Hence if,

Note 6

O. 9 R. 9 by the heir of the plaintiff the suit was restored. On revision the Judicial Commissioner reversed the order of restoration on the ground that the original dismissal was rightly made on default. On appeal to the Privy Council, Lord Shaw, after stating that the rules and orders applicable to a defaulter could not be applied to a dead man and quoting the words of Section 151, observed "in their Lordships' opinion such abuse has occurred by the course adopted in the Court of the Judicial Commissioner. Quite apart from Section 151 any Court might have rightly considered itself to possess an inherent power to rectify the mistake which had been inadvertently made. But Section 151 could never be invoked in a case clearer than the present." It follows from this ruling that where a Court employed a procedure in doing something which it never intended to do and there is miscarriage of justice, there is an abuse of the process of the Court.<sup>2</sup> The injustice so done must be remedied on the principle actus curia neminem gravabit—an act of the Court shall prejudice no person.<sup>3</sup> Such an abuse by the Court may arise either (a) by the default or mistake of the Court itself<sup>4</sup>

- (i) Introduction of scandalous or objectionable matter in proceedings.<sup>16</sup>
- (j) Executing a decree manifestly at variance with its purpose and intent.<sup>17</sup>

But no act done or proceeding taken as of right and in due course of law, is an abuse of the process of the Court simply because such act or proceeding is likely to embarrass another.<sup>18</sup> A person who brings himself within the terms of a statute is not to be deprived of a right conferred by that statute on "so treacherous a ground of decision as an abuse of the process of the Court."<sup>19</sup> Nor is the failure to conform to a mere rule of practice, an abuse of process in every case; the Court must find in each case what exactly the abuse is.<sup>20</sup> It has been held in the undermentioned case<sup>21</sup> that the expression "abuse of the process" refers only to some process of the Court such as a writ of attachment, taken maliciously to the injury of another. It is submitted that this view is too narrow and is not in accord with the general trend of judicial decisions referred to above.

7. Criminal cases. — Where a Court issues notice to a party to show cause why he should not be proceeded against under Section 476, Criminal Procedure Code, for producing a forged receipt, and the question of forgery is before the High Court on appeal from the proceeding wherein the document was held to be a forgery, the High Court has inherent power to stay the proceedings under Section 476 pending disposal of the appeal.<sup>1</sup> See also the undermentioned cases.<sup>2</sup>

Notes 7a-8b

7a. Contempt of Court, proceedings for. — The High Court as a Superior Court of Record has an inherent power to punish for contempt of Court and that power is not affected in any way by the Codes of Civil or Criminal Procedure.<sup>1</sup> The High Court can also enforce its orders but does not possess the power to arrest for contempt a person outside its general jurisdiction.<sup>2</sup> It has been held that the High Court has jurisdiction to award costs in a criminal prosecution for contempt of Court and has inherent jurisdiction to order its recovery on the lines on which decrees are executed by the Civil Court.<sup>3</sup>

8. Insolvency Court. — As has already been observed in Note 1, every Court will, in the absence of express provision in respect of any matter, be deemed to possess, as inherent in its very constitution, all such powers as are necessary to do the right and undo a wrong in the course of the administration of justice.<sup>1</sup> An Insolvency Court has, therefore, inherent powers to pass just and necessary orders in cases not provided for by the Insolvency Act.<sup>2</sup> This is made clear by Section 5 of the Provincial Insolvency Act, 1920, read with Section 151 of the Civil Procedure Code. An Insolvency Court has thus power to grant ad interim protection before adjudication<sup>3</sup> or to rectify mistakes in its proceedings,<sup>4</sup> or to set aside an ex parte order obtained by fraud or misrepresentation.<sup>5</sup> It has, however, no power to stay an execution sale going on in another Court<sup>6</sup> though the latter Court may, on a claim by the Official Receiver under Section 51 or Section 52 of the Insolvency Act, stay the execution under its inherent powers.<sup>7</sup>

Where an applicant is entitled to an order of adjudication as of right under the Insolvency Act, there is no inherent power in the Courts to refuse adjudication on the ground that it is an abuse of the process of the Court.<sup>8</sup>

8a. General Clauses Act (1897), Section 21. — Under Section 21 of the General Clauses Act, 1897, where by Act of the Governor-General in Council a power to issue orders is conferred, that power includes, subject to like conditions, a power to add to, amend, vary or rescind any orders so issued. It has been held by the Chief Court of Oudh that the High Court has inherent jurisdiction to reinstate legal practitioners who have been dismissed from their profession.<sup>1</sup>

See also Note 8b below.

8b. Legal Practitioners Act, cases under. — It has been held that although there is no express provision for a review of an order made under the Legal Practitioners Act, the High Court has inherent power to restore a pleader whose name has been struck off the rolls.<sup>1</sup>

9. Appeal. — An order under Section 151 is not an appealable order under Section 104 and no appeal, therefore, lies as an appeal from an order.<sup>1</sup> But if such an order amounts to a decree within the definition of Section 2 sub-section (2), an appeal will lie under Section 96.<sup>2</sup> Thus an order of remand under Section 151 which amounts to an adjudication under Section 2 (2) is appealable as a decree under Section 96.<sup>3</sup> Where an order is made in execution under Section 151 and such order falls within Section 47, an appeal and a second appeal will lie therefrom.<sup>4</sup> An order under Section 151 can also be challenged under Section 105 if it affects the decision of the case on the merits but not otherwise.<sup>5</sup>

Notes 9-10

Where the order appealed from is silent as to whether it was passed under Section 151 or under any other provision of the Code, the Appellate Court must decide the question in order to ascertain whether an appeal lies therefrom.<sup>6</sup> Where however the order purports to be under an appealable provision, though wrongly, an appeal will lie therefrom.<sup>7</sup>

It has been held by the High Court of Patna<sup>8</sup> that where an order is made under this Section, the fact that a jurisdiction analogous to that conferred by an appealable provision is exercised, will not render it appealable. The Oudh Chief Court has also held a similar view.<sup>9</sup> The High Courts of Calcutta and Nagpur,<sup>10</sup> on the other hand, have come to a contrary conclusion. It is submitted that the Calcutta view is not correct inasmuch as there can be no right of appeal unless expressly given by statute, and there is no appeal from orders under Section 151. In the undermentioned case<sup>11</sup> the Sind Judicial Commissioner's Court held that the nature of an order is not to be determined by the provision of law to which it may wrongly have been assigned and that the true test is what is the order itself. In that case it was held that where a decree is amended, although the Court may purport to act under Section 151 in making the amendment, the Appellate Court should deal with the matter as an appeal from the amended decree.

An order refusing to exercise jurisdiction under this Section has been held not to be a "judgment" within Clause 10 of the Letters Patent (Patna).<sup>12</sup>

Section 152

1. Legislative changes.—The third paragraph of Section 206 of the old Code ran as follows —

"If the decree is found to be at variance with the judgment, or if any clerical or arithmetical error be found in the decree, the Court shall, of its own motion or on that of any of the parties, amend the decree so as to bring it into conformity with the judgment or to correct such error: provided that reasonable notice has been given to the parties or their pleaders of the proposed amendment."

The present Section differs from the above provision in the following respects —

- (1) It does not provide for amendment where the decree is found to be at variance with the judgment. An application to amend the decree, so as to bring it into conformity with the judgment, should, under the present Code, be made to the Court in the exercise of its inherent power which is saved by Section 151.
- (2) The provision as to errors arising from any accidental slip or omission is new. Section 206 of the former Code referred only to clerical or arithmetical errors and errors due to discrepancy between the judgment and decree.
- (3) The present Section has omitted the proviso as to notice being given of the proposed amendment.

2. Amendment of judgments, decrees or orders. — It will be seen from O. 20 R. 3 that a judgment, once signed, cannot be afterwards altered or added to, save as otherwise provided by Section 152 or on review.<sup>1</sup> O. 20 R. 6 provides that the decree shall be drawn up so as to agree with the judgment. Reading this Section with O. 20 Rules 3 and 6, it is clear that as a general rule, a judgment, decree or final order, once drawn up and signed, cannot subsequently be altered, varied or amended in any manner even with the consent of the parties.<sup>2</sup> The only exceptions to the general rule are the following —

- (1) Under Section 152 a clerical or arithmetical mistake or an error arising from an accidental slip or omission may be corrected by the Court,<sup>3</sup> even though the decree is in conformity with the judgment.<sup>4</sup>

(2) Under the inherent powers of the Court (Section 151) a decree which is at variance with the judgment can be amended so as to agree with the judgment.<sup>5</sup>

(3) A decree or order may be varied or amended in any other case by a review of judgment or by an appeal from the decree.<sup>6</sup>

Without correcting the decree itself, the Court may, under O. 20 R. 11, order that the payment under a money decree may be made in instalments. A decree if made ex parte may also be set aside by a proceeding under O. 9 R. 13 or a suit in certain circumstances, or in appeal or revision.

Where the Court can amend a decree passed by it, the proper course is to apply for amendment and not to appeal.<sup>7</sup> But neglect to apply for amendment does not preclude a party from obtaining the same result in appeal.<sup>8</sup> But an amendment should not be made if it will have the effect of making the decree differ from the judgment. If the same mistakes are made in both the judgment and decree, both should be amended and not the decree alone.<sup>9</sup>

A decree may be amended though the applicant's pleader may have signed the decree.<sup>10</sup>

As to the powers of the Court to extend the time fixed by a decree, there is a conflict of opinion. See Section 148, Notes 2 and 3.

In an application to amend a decree or order under this Section, the Court has no power to annul the decree or order itself.<sup>11</sup>

See also Notes to Order 20 Rule 6.

3. Clerical or arithmetical mistakes and errors arising from accidental slip or omission. — As has been seen in Note 2 above, a Court can always correct clerical or arithmetical mistakes and errors arising from accidental slip or omission even though the decree agrees with the judgment. Thus, where a direction as to costs,<sup>1</sup> or interest,<sup>2</sup> or leave to bring a fresh suit,<sup>3</sup> or a provision fixing the period for payment in a redemption decree,<sup>4</sup> or a relief asked by the plaintiff,<sup>5</sup> is inadvertently omitted, the decree may be amended by adding the direction or provision.

The following are some instances of accidental slips that may be corrected by the Court under this Section —

- (1) Inadvertently passing a decree for foreclosure instead of one for sale.<sup>6</sup>
- (2) Inadvertently recording an order of dismissal, instead of an order decreeing the suit or appeal.<sup>7</sup>
- (3) Inadvertently misdescribing the property covered by the decree or judgment.<sup>8</sup>
- (4) Judgment accidentally including the property of a stranger.<sup>9</sup>
- (5) Passing a personal decree against the legal representatives of a party.<sup>10</sup>
- (6) Accidentally entering the name of a deceased party instead of his legal representatives who had been brought on the record.<sup>11</sup>
- (7) Passing an erroneous order as to costs by oversight.<sup>12</sup>

See also the undermentioned cases.<sup>13</sup>

Where by an oversight or accidental slip the name of a wrong person is inserted in the decree as the guardian of a minor party, the Patna High Court has held that the mistake may be corrected under this Section.<sup>14</sup> But where it is not a case of mere misdescription but a case of real non-representation of the minors by the proper guardian, it is a defect of substance and hence the Madras High Court has held<sup>15</sup> that such a defect cannot be cured by substituting the name of the proper guardian under this Section.

Section 152 does not apply where there is no question of clerical or arithmetical mistakes or errors arising from accidental slips and omissions,<sup>16</sup> even though the order has been passed under an erroneous impression as to the facts of the case.<sup>17</sup> An amendment allowing a correct description of property which completely alters the plaint and the decree and the deed on which the plaint is based, cannot be said to be the correction of a clerical mistake in the judgment and cannot be allowed.<sup>18</sup>

Notes 3-5

4. Mistakes originating in pleadings. — A Court can, under Section 152, amend clerical errors in a decree although the error may have first occurred in the parties' pleadings and may have been merely copied from them in the decree : it is not necessary to first amend the pleadings in such a case.<sup>1</sup> There is, however, a conflict of opinion in the Allahabad High Court on this point. One set of cases<sup>2</sup> has taken the view that such errors could be amended under this Section, while in the undermentioned cases<sup>3</sup> it has been held that Section 152 is confined to the correction of clerical errors made by the Court itself and that it has no concern with the mistakes of parties which are repeated by the Court. No reasons are given for thus restricting the scope of Section 152. The language of the Section does not exclude mistakes copied from pleadings. The latter view cannot be accepted as a sound one.

5. Mistakes originating anterior to the suit. — It has been held by the Madras<sup>1</sup> and the Rangoon<sup>2</sup> High Courts and the Chief Court of Oudh<sup>3</sup> that accidental mistakes may be amended even though they may have an origin anterior to the suit and may have been merely repeated in the decree. Thus, where there is an error in the description of mortgaged property owing to the accidental omission of certain words<sup>4</sup> or the insertion of a wrong survey number<sup>5</sup> in the mortgage deed and the error

6. Inherent power of the Court to amend decrees or orders. — It is a cardinal principle of the law of procedure that the decree should agree with the judgment. (See O. 20 R. 6.) Hence, even in cases not falling within Section 152, a Court has inherent power to amend its decree when it is at variance with the judgment.<sup>1</sup> In other words, when the decree does not correctly express what was really decided and intended by the Court, the Court has an inherent power to amend the decree so as to carry out its own meaning.<sup>2</sup> In exercising this power the Court is correcting what is really a mistake of its ministerial officers by whom the decree or order was drawn up. In In Re Swire, Mellor v. Swire,<sup>3</sup> Lindley, L. J., said:

Note C

"There is no such magic in passing and entering an order as to deprive the Court of jurisdiction to make its own records true, and if an order, as passed and entered does not express the real order of the Court,"

the Court has ample jurisdiction to set that right. And Bowen, L. J., said:

"Every Court has inherent power over its own records so long as those records are within its power and it can set right any mistake in them. It seems to me that it would be perfectly shocking if the Court could not rectify an error which is really the error of its own minister. An order, as it seems to me, even when passed and entered, may be amended by the Court as to carry out the intention and express the meaning of the Court at the time when the order was made, provided the amendment be made without injustice, or on terms which preclude injustice."

Thus, where P sues Q and R for a certain sum and judgment is given in favour of P 'as prayed' but the decree as drawn up makes the amount payable by Q alone, the Court can amend the decree so as to bring it in conformity with the judgment.<sup>4</sup> Similarly, where the judgment gives a mortgage decree in favour of the plaintiff but the decree is wrongly drafted so as to give the decree-holder only a charge on the property, the decree may be amended so as to agree with the judgment.<sup>5</sup>

Where an order which had been dictated but which had been intended to be reconsidered was signed inadvertently, the High Court of Allahabad set aside the order under its inherent powers.<sup>6</sup>

But where the decree as drafted is in accordance with the intention of the judgment and there is no clerical or arithmetical mistake or accidental slip or omission, the Court has no power, either under Section 152 or under its inherent jurisdiction, to amend it<sup>7</sup> and this is so even if the judgment itself is erroneous in law<sup>8</sup> and the error is apparent on the face of the judgment.<sup>9</sup> Thus, where a judgment is passed against G and the decree agrees with the judgment, it cannot be amended so as to convert it into a decree against G and another person.<sup>10</sup>

Notes 7-8

7. "May . . . be corrected." — The amendment of accidental mistakes under this Section cannot be claimed by any party as of right. The matter is left to the discretion of the Court to be exercised in view of the peculiar facts of each case.<sup>1</sup> But the Calcutta High Court has, in the undermentioned case,<sup>2</sup> held that the word "may" in Section 152 does not make it discretionary with the Court to order the correction but merely enlarges the powers of the Court by providing that such correction can be done at any time. It was, however, conceded in that case that the amendment may be refused when it offended against the principles of equity, for instance, where the interest of a bona fide purchaser for value without notice may be jeopardised. In a later case of the same High Court,<sup>3</sup> Suhrawardy, J., adhered to the view taken in the case and further held that where the decree was not in conformity with the judgment owing to an error of the Court, it was incumbent on the Court to order its amendment without regard to any laches on the part of the parties. Graham, J., on the other hand, held that the matter is one of discretion to be exercised in view of the particular facts of each case. In a still later case,<sup>4</sup> the same High Court held that a decree could be brought into conformity with the judgment even after the lapse of years and that the only limitation is that the Court may deem it inexpedient or inequitable to exercise its power where third parties have acquired rights bona fide, under the erroneous decree.

8. "At any time." — It is a general principle that rules of limitation are applicable to acts to be performed by litigants and not to acts which the Court may or has to perform suo motu.<sup>1</sup> An amendment under this Section falls within the latter class of acts and there is consequently no limitation for an application for amendment under this Section.<sup>2</sup> The amendment can be made at any time.<sup>3</sup> But where satisfaction of a decree has been entered up the Court is functus officio and has no power to amend the decree. An order for amendment in such a case is a mere nullity unless steps are taken to set aside the order recording satisfaction.<sup>4</sup>

Similarly, where third parties have acquired rights under the erroneous decree, for valuable consideration and in ignorance of the error in the decree, no amendment should be allowed so as to prejudice their rights.<sup>5</sup> The reason is that it would be inequitable to allow amendment of the decree in such a case.<sup>6</sup> Laches may also, in the particular circumstances of a case, disentitle a party to relief by way of amendment of a decree.<sup>7</sup>

See also Note 7 above.

9. Court by which amendment can be made. — Unless and until a decree is superseded in appeal or revision, the Court which passed it is entitled to amend it under this Section.<sup>1</sup> Where an appeal or revision has been preferred from the decree, the power of the Court of first instance to amend the decree depends on the question whether the decree has been superseded by the appellate decree or is left intact. Where the decree of the lower Court is confirmed, reversed or varied, it is superseded by the decree of the Appellate Court, and the only Court that can amend the decree thereafter is the Appellate Court.<sup>2</sup> But where the decree of the lower Court is left intact, as for instance, where an appeal or revision is dismissed in limine,<sup>3</sup> or for default,<sup>4</sup> or where the amendment relates to a portion of the decree which is outside the scope of the appeal<sup>5</sup> or where the appeal is withdrawn,<sup>6</sup> the lower Court is entitled to amend the decree. It was held by the High Court of Allahabad in the undermentioned case<sup>7</sup> that the words "at any time" have a special significance and provide for amendment by the lower Court even where its decree has merged in the decree of the Appellate Court.

There is a conflict of opinion as to the effect of a dismissal of an appeal under O. 41 R. 11 of the Code and as to whether after such dismissal the decree can be amended by the lower Court or can be amended only by the Appellate Court. For a discussion of the question, see Notes to O. 41 R. 11, infra.

Amendment pending appeal against decree. — From what has been said above, it is clear that an amendment can be made by the Court which passed the decree even when an appeal against the decree is pending in a superior Court.<sup>8</sup> But the Appellate Court can also amend the lower Court's decree under Section 152 read with Section 107 (2) of the Code.<sup>9</sup>

Power of executing Court to amend. — An executing Court has no power, as such, to amend the decree. It cannot go behind the decree but must take the decree as it stands.<sup>10</sup> The proper course is to apply to the Court which passed the decree for amendment, and not to the executing Court.<sup>11</sup> But where the executing Court and the Court which passed the decree are one and the same, the Court can amend the decree in the course of the execution.<sup>12</sup>

Notes 9-12

Power of successor in office to amend. — The successor in office of a Judge can correct a clerical mistake in the order passed by his predecessor. The word used in Section 152 is "Court" and not "Judge" and the "Court" must mean the Court whoever be the presiding Judge.<sup>13</sup> The power given by this Section is wider than that conferred under O. 47 R. 2 on the successor of a Court passing an order.<sup>14</sup>

See also the undermentioned case.<sup>15</sup>

11. Who can apply for amendment. — The Section expressly says "or on the application of any of the parties." A person not a party to the suit has therefore no right to apply for amendment of the decree.<sup>1</sup> But an assignee of a decree may apply for amendment under this Section.<sup>2</sup>

12. Notice of amendment. — The third paragraph of Section 206 of the Code of 1882 insisted on notice being given to the opposite party before a decree was amended under the Section.<sup>1</sup> The present Section does not require any notice to be given. But it would be unfair for a decree to be amended without an opportunity being given to the party against whom the amendment will operate, to show cause

It has been held that where a plaintiff applies for the amendment of a decree on the ground that by an accidental slip he mentioned in his plaint the name of a wrong person as the defendant which name has been repeated in the decree, and asking that the decree should be amended by the insertion of the name of the right person, it is open to the Court to amend the decree as prayed for after giving notice to the person whose name is sought to be inserted as that of the defendant and giving him an opportunity to show that the mistake is not accidental or clerical.<sup>4</sup>

13. Effect of amendment. — An amended decree must be taken as in force from the date of the original decree. There is a distinction between a case of amendment and one of novation or substitution. When an instrument is amended so as to express the real intention which it was intended to express but which it did not completely express, the transaction is not in substance varied but its inaccurate description is only rectified.<sup>1</sup> Hence, where a decree is amended the amended decree operates as res judicata from the date of the original decree and not from that of the amendment.<sup>2</sup> But it has been held by the Oudh Chief Court that though the general rule is that an amendment of a decree dates back to the date of the decree, yet the amendment should not be allowed to take effect from the date of the decree so as to affect the rights of a purchaser for value without notice who has acquired the property after the decree but before the making of the amendment.<sup>3</sup>

14. Amendment and limitation. — An amendment of the decree under this Section does not give a fresh starting point of limitation for an appeal or application except an application for the execution of the decree.<sup>1</sup> Where, however, a party is prejudiced by an amendment but finds that at the date of the amendment, an appeal from the decree is barred if the period is calculated from the original decree, the Court will excuse the delay under Section 5 of the Limitation Act.<sup>2</sup> Again, where a decree is in conformity with the judgment and the Court has no power to amend the decree under this Section, a party affected by the amendment will be entitled to

No reasons are given for this proposition and the decision, it is submitted, cannot be accepted as correct.

Section 152
Notes 14-16

Limitation for the execution of decree. — Article 182 clause (4) of the Limitation Act (IX of 1908) expressly provides that where the decree has been amended, time for execution of it runs from the date of amendment. The following decisions to the contrary, passed under the Limitation Act of 1877, which did not contain such a provision, are no longer good law.<sup>5</sup> The undermentioned cases<sup>6</sup> decided under the same Act, in which it was held that the limitation was extended, by treating the order for amendment as one for review of judgment, are only of academic interest at the present time in view of the express provision in Article 182 clause (4).

See also the Authors' Commentaries on the Limitation Act, Article 182 Note 50.

15. Successive applications for amendment—Res judicata. — An application for amendment of a decree is not a suit. Hence, Section 11 of the Code does not apply to such an application. But the principle of res judicata applies to it, Section 11 not being exhaustive. (See Notes under Section 11.) Hence, where an application for amendment has been disposed of on the merits, a subsequent application substantially for the same relief is barred.<sup>1</sup> But where the subsequent application is materially different from the previous application it is not barred.<sup>2</sup>

16. Consent decree. — A clerical or arithmetical mistake or an error due to an accidental slip or omission in a consent decree, may, as in the case of any other decree, be corrected by the Court under Section 152.<sup>1</sup> Similarly, where a consent decree is not in accordance with the agreement of the parties the Court has power under Section 151 to bring it into conformity with the agreement.<sup>2</sup> But where there is no such mistake and there is no variance between the decree and the compromise petition, it cannot be amended either under Section 152 or Section 151, on the ground that the compromise itself is bad for mutual mistake or fraud of the parties or on the ground that it does not represent the true intention of the parties.<sup>3</sup> In such a case, the remedy of the aggrieved party is to sue for setting aside the decree on the ground of mistake

[See ('37) AIR 1937 Bom 457 (457, 458) : I L R (1937) Bom 897. (Clerical or arithmetical mistakes in contract common to both parties embodied in decree can be corrected under this Section.)]

Section 152
Notes 16-18

or fraud.<sup>4</sup> The reason is that a consent decree is in the nature of a contract and can be set aside on grounds on which a contract can be set aside.<sup>5</sup>

A consent decree, in any other case, cannot be varied except by consent.<sup>6</sup> Where, owing to ambiguity in the petition of compromise, the decree passed thereon is varied by consent so as to give expression to the true intention of the parties, it cannot be amended and restored to its former condition on the ground of its variation from the compromise petition.<sup>7</sup>

17. Award.—The Section is general in its terms and applies to clerical and accidental errors in judgments and decrees based on awards.<sup>1</sup>

Schedule 2 Paragraph 12 of the Code provides inter alia for the correction of clerical and accidental slips in awards. But that Paragraph does not apply to private awards. (See Paragraph 21.)<sup>2</sup>

Where a decree is in accordance with the award and there is no clerical mistake or accidental slip, it cannot be amended or modified by the Court in any manner.<sup>3</sup> See also the undermentioned case.<sup>4</sup>

18. Suit to rectify mistake, if lies.—Where a decree has been passed by a Court of competent jurisdiction, no suit by a party thereto will lie to set aside or rescind that decree.<sup>1</sup> This is based on the principle of res judicata, which itself rests on the maxim interest reipublicæ ut sit finis litium—it concerns the State that there be an end to law suits.<sup>2</sup> An exception has been recognized in the case of a decree obtained by fraud. In such a case a suit will lie to set aside a former decree which had been obtained through fraud.<sup>3</sup> There is a difference of opinion as to whether a suit lies to set aside or correct a decree on the ground of mistake. It was held in the undermentioned cases<sup>4</sup> that such a suit would lie. Other cases have, on the other hand, taken a contrary view.<sup>5</sup>

Where an amendment is sought on the ground of a subsequent change of circumstances, a suit, and not an application, would be the most appropriate remedy.<sup>6</sup>

Section 152
Notes 18-20

As to the maintainability of suits to set aside or correct a consent decree on the ground of mutual mistake of the parties, see Note 16 above.

19. Appeal. — An order granting or refusing an amendment under this Section is not a decree<sup>1</sup> or an appealable order, and consequently, no appeal lies therefrom.<sup>2</sup> Where, however, there is no clerical or arithmetical mistake or accidental slip or omission, but the whole method of calculation is altered by the amendment, the order, though purporting to be one under Section 152, must be deemed to be one passed on review under Order 47 and hence will be appealable.<sup>3</sup>

An order of the High Court rejecting an application to amend a decree passed by it on appeal, is not an order made "on appeal" within the meaning of Clause 39 of the Letters Patent (Calcutta), and is not appealable to the Privy Council under that Clause.<sup>4</sup> As to whether an order of a single Judge of the High Court on an application for amendment is appealable under Clause 15 of the Letters Patent as a "judgment," see Note 6 to Section 104.

The amended decree is always appealable as a decree.<sup>5</sup> But, as has been seen in Note 14 above, in the case of an amendment under Section 152, no fresh starting point of limitation for appeal is given by the amendment, though the delay may be excused in appropriate cases under Section 5 of the Limitation Act.

20. Revision. — An order granting or refusing an application for amendment under the Section is, as has been observed already in Note 19 above, neither a decree nor an appealable order. Hence, it is open to revision by the High Court in a fit case.<sup>1</sup>

Note 30

Thus, a Court is not bound to amend a decree in every case under this Section. If a Court erroneously thinks that it is so bound and amends a decree although it feels that the case is one in which amendment ought to be refused, the order can be revised, as it is vitiated by a material irregularity.<sup>2</sup> Similarly, where a Court has jurisdiction to amend a decree but refuses to do so on the ground that it has no jurisdiction, its order can be revised.<sup>3</sup> See also the following cases<sup>4</sup> where the refusal to amend was held to amount to a failure to exercise jurisdiction. In an earlier Madras decision,<sup>5</sup> however, it was held that an order for the amendment of a decree was not revisable on the ground that the party aggrieved by the amendment could appeal from the amended decree. But in later decisions of the same High Court, such an order has been held to be revisable.<sup>6</sup>

Where the lower Court has had jurisdiction to amend a decree, its order is not revisable, although it may have relied on a wrong Section,<sup>7</sup> or made the amendment unnecessarily.<sup>8</sup>

Similarly, where it has refused to amend a decree, not on the ground of its want of jurisdiction, but on some other ground, its order is not open to revision.<sup>9</sup> It has been held by the Oudh Chief Court that even in cases in which upon a strict construction of Section 115 the High Court is precluded from interfering in revision with an order of the lower Court refusing to amend a decree, it is still open to the High Court under Section 151 to interfere in such cases.<sup>10</sup>

1. Legislative changes. — This Section is new. It is based on O. 28 R. 12 of the Rules of the Supreme Court (of England).

2. Scope of the Section. — Section 152 deals with amendments of judgments, decrees and orders. O. 6 R. 17 deals with amendments of pleadings. The present Section confers a general power on the Court to amend any defect or error in any proceeding in a suit and to make all necessary amendments for the purpose of determining the real questions between the parties. The object of the rule allowing amendments is to minimise litigation and avoid multiplicity of proceedings,<sup>1</sup> and also to see that the mores technicality may not be allowed to stand in the way of substantial justice.<sup>2</sup> Hence, the Court has power to allow all necessary amendments for raising the real questions at issue between the parties provided that no injury or injustice is caused to the opposite party and are such as can be sufficiently compensated for by costs or otherwise.<sup>3</sup> But the Court will not aid a party by allowing him to amend his pleading where the mistake was fraudulent or intended to get round a previous decision of the Court.<sup>4</sup>

The power to get an amendment of a proceeding under this Section, is subject to the discretion of the Court, and is not claimable as of right.<sup>5</sup> As to the general principles guiding the exercise of discretion in granting or refusing an amendment, see Order 6 Rule 17.

amendments during the actual pendency of proceedings and not after the decree has been drawn up and sealed.<sup>3</sup>

4. "Defect or error." — Assuming that Section 153 applies to orders of Courts, an order erroneous on the merits is not "a defect or error" in the proceedings within the meaning of the Section, and cannot be amended or corrected under this Section.<sup>1</sup>

5. "Any proceeding in a suit." — The term "proceeding" in this Section must be interpreted as including any application to a Court of justice however made, for aid in the enforcement of rights, for reliefs, for redress of injuries, for damages or for any remedial object.<sup>1</sup> See for instance the following —

- (i) Pleadings. — See Order 6 Rule 17.
- (ii) Memorandum of appeal. — A memorandum of appeal may be amended under this Section.<sup>2</sup> Thus, when, through a bona fide error, the name of a deceased person instead of that of his legal representative appears in a memorandum of appeal as the respondent, the error may be amended.<sup>3</sup> But, it has been held that no such discretion to amend is available to the Court when it is sought to substitute a person for the potential appellant who died before the memorandum of appeal was filed, the reason being that in such a case there is no memorandum of appeal at all in the eye of the law.<sup>4</sup>
- (iii) Application for execution. — See Notes to Order 21 Rule 17.
- (iv) Application for final decree in a mortgage suit. — The Section applies to the amendment of an application for a final decree in a mortgage suit.<sup>5</sup>
- (v) Application for personal decree under O. 34 R. 6. — Under Section 153 an application for a personal decree against the mortgagor under O. 34 R. 6 may be amended by allowing a party to sign it, where he has failed to do so in the first instance,<sup>6</sup> or by allowing the addition of an alternative prayer.<sup>7</sup>
- (vi) Application for restitution. — Where an application for restitution has not been made in the correct form, it may be amended under this Section.<sup>8</sup>
- (vii) Answers to interrogatories. — Leave may be given in a fit case to amend answers to interrogatories. Thus, an answer containing an admission made by mistake may be amended.<sup>9</sup> Similarly, an answer may be amended where subsequent to the filing of the affidavit of answer, it is found that there are other matters which could have been included in it.<sup>10</sup>

(ix) Notice of motion. — A notice of motion can be amended under this Section.<sup>13</sup>

(x) Power of attorney. — The Court has inherent power to amend a power of attorney filed by the mukhtiar of a party by the insertion of the mukhtiar's name which was omitted by mistake.<sup>14</sup> It has been held in the undermentioned case<sup>15</sup> that Section 153 would apply to such a case.

(xi) Sale certificate. — The present Section prima facie applies to pending proceedings.<sup>16</sup> Section 152 applies to the amendment of decrees and orders. Although a sale certificate is a document issued by a Court, it is doubtful whether it is an order of Court within Section 152. It may also be doubted whether it is a proceeding in a suit within the meaning of the present Section. A Court has, however, inherent power to amend a sale certificate after notice to the judgment-debtor, where the certificate does not correctly describe the property sold,<sup>17</sup> unless the sale price has been affected by such misdescription.<sup>18</sup>

6. Amendment by Court suo motu. — Under O. 6 R. 17 the Court has no power to amend the pleadings of its own accord. Under the present Section the Court has a power of amendment suo motu. But even under this Section the Court has no power to convert, of its own accord, a suit for declaration into one for possession.<sup>1</sup> The reason is that a Court is bound to adjudicate on a claim as brought and cannot direct parties to alter their claims.<sup>2</sup>

154. [S. 3, para. 3.] Nothing in this Code shall affect any present right of appeal which shall have accrued to any party at its commencement.

Synopsis

1. "Any present right of appeal."
2. Right of appeal being given by new Code but not by old Code — Effect on pending proceedings.
3. Other rights accrued before the present Code.
4. Power of Appellate Court.

1. "Any present right of appeal."—It has been observed in Note 3 to the Preamble that the general principle is that an Act which takes away a substantive right is not retrospective in effect except by express enactment or by necessary implication. This principle is recognized in Section 6 of the General Clauses Act of 1897. But this principle does not apply to enactments merely affecting practice or procedure. For, there can be no vested right in any course of procedure. But a right of appeal is a substantive right and not a mere matter of procedure. When the law permits an appeal, the right of appeal vests in a party on the commencement of proceedings in the lower Court. Any Act coming into force subsequently cannot affect this right prejudicially, except by express words or by necessary implications.<sup>1</sup> This is the general rule apart from Section 154. Under this Section the question has arisen whether this general right is restricted by the words "any present right of appeal" in the Section. The question has arisen in this way. Take, for instance, an order which was appealable under the former Code, but is not appealable under the present Code. The present Code came into force on 1st January 1909. Suppose the proceedings in which the order was passed were commenced before 1st January 1909, and also that the order was passed before 1st January 1909. In such a case, there was undoubtedly a present right of appeal accrued to a party at the commencement of the Code (1st January 1909) because the order having already been passed, the right of appeal given by the former Code was capable of being exercised immediately on that date. But suppose, in the above instance, the proceedings were started before 1st January 1909, but the order therein was passed after 1st January 1909. In such a case, no doubt a right of appeal had accrued to the party at the commencement of the present Code, because when the law permits an appeal, the right of appeal vests in a party on the initiation of the proceedings in the lower Court. But as the order had not been passed at the commencement of the Code but was passed only subsequently, the right of appeal was not therefore capable of being immediately exercised at that date. Is such a right, a present right of appeal within Section 154? On this question there is a conflict of decisions. It has been held by the Calcutta High Court,<sup>2</sup> the Punjab Chief Court<sup>3</sup> and the Sind Judicial Commissioner's Court<sup>4</sup> that such a right of appeal cannot be called a present right of appeal because although it has vested in a party, it is not capable of being immediately exercised. But the Madras High Court takes a different view.<sup>5</sup> According to that High Court the words "present right" of appeal mean only a right of appeal which has become vested in a litigant whether the right is capable of being exercised immediately or not, and the words are not sufficient to exclude the general rule that a statute taking away a vested right of appeal, is presumably not retrospective in effect.

Notes 1-4

2. Right of appeal being given by new Code but not by old Code — Effect on pending proceedings. — The Section contemplates cases where a right of appeal was given by the former Code, but has been taken away by the present Code. Suppose the present Code gives a right of appeal in a matter in which there was no right of appeal under the former Code. Is the present Code to be given retrospective effect in this respect, so as to affect proceedings instituted under the former Code? No, because to hold otherwise would mean that the right which accrued to a party under the former Code, viz., the right to hold the decree or order in his favour undisturbed, can be taken away by the new Code.<sup>1</sup>

3. Other rights accrued before the present Code. — The fact that Section 154 expressly saves pending rights of appeal, does not mean that other vested rights are not saved. The application of the maxim expressio unius est exclusio alterius (mention of one is exclusion of another) is unsafe in such cases. Thus, where the date of the mortgage decree and the date fixed for payment were both under the Transfer of Property Act and before the present Code came into force, the right to apply for an order absolute is a vested right not affected by the provisions of Order 34 Rules 4 and 5.<sup>1</sup>

4. Power of Appellate Court. — The Section means that nothing shall prejudicially affect any present right of appeal. It has no bearing on the powers of an Appellate Court in dealing with an appeal before it.<sup>1</sup>

This Section and the Fifth Schedule of the Code have been repealed by Act XVII of 1914, Section 3.

The Section as it stood before the repeal was as follows :—

"The enactments mentioned in the fifth Schedule are hereby repealed to the extent specified in the fourth column thereof."

Section 157

157. [S. 3, second sentence.] Notifications published, declarations and rules made, places appointed, agreements filed, scales prescribed, forms framed, appointments made and powers conferred under Act VIII of 1859 or under any Code of Civil Procedure or any Act amending the same or under any other enactment hereby repealed shall, so far as they are consistent with this Code, have the same force and effect as if they had been respectively published, made, appointed, filed, prescribed, framed and conferred under this Code and by the authority empowered thereby in such behalf.

ments.

Synopsis

1. "Rules."
2. "Consistent with the Code."
3. Retrospective effect of the Code. See Note 3 to Preamble.

1. "Rules." — The expression "rules made" means rules properly and validly made, in other words, made with jurisdiction by the proper authority. Rules, which though purporting to be made under the old Code, were beyond the powers given by the old Code, do not become valid by reason of the fact that, if they had been made under the new Code, they would be valid.<sup>1</sup>

2. "Consistent with the Code." — The word 'Code' according to the definition in Section 2 clause 1 includes the rules in the First Schedule. Hence, it has been held that the Madras Civil Rules of Practice made by the High Court under the Code of 1882 but not re-enacted and published in accordance with the procedure prescribed in Part X of the Code of 1908 are invalid if and in so far as they are inconsistent with any of the rules in the First Schedule of the later Code.<sup>1</sup>

3. Retrospective effect of the Code. — See Note 3 to Preamble.
